Stock Market Coordination Plan Offered By Whitney

Substitute Proposal for Regulation Made to Committee.

Fletcher-Rayburn Bill "Too Drastic"

Would Place Curb Upon Speculation, Margin and Dishonesty.

By Robert C. Albright.

Riddling provisions of the drastic Fletcher-Rayburn bill for stock market control, the soft-spoken exchange official concluded a full day's testimony with what he termed "constructive suggestions" for Federal supervision of securities exchanges.

Ignoring the pending proposal for Federal Trade Commission jurisdiction, Mr. Whitney "suggested" a board on which his own exchange would be represented with two members appointed by the President, two Cabinet officers, one named by the Federal Reserve open market committee and one by other security exchanges.

Would Have Plenary Power.

"We suggest that this Coordinating Authority be given plenary power to control the amount of margins which members of exchanges must require and maintain on customers' accounts; and, further, that it should have plenary power to require stock exchanges to adopt rules and regulations preventing not only dishonest practices, but also practices which unfairly influence the price of securities or unduly stimulate speculation," he told the committee.

He said this represented the "considered view" of the New York Stock Exchange, adding:

"I can say confidently that the exchange will cooperate fully in attempting to prevent unwise or excessive speculation and abuses or bad practices affecting the stock market."

Mr. Whitney's substitute proposal came as a surprise to Interstate Commerce Committee members. They had been alternately listening to a 34-page prepared criticism of the pending stock exchange bill and questioning Mr. Whitney, a willing witness.

Halfway through his statement, Mr. Whitney was interrupted by a motion to adjourn the committee, and hastily asked time to read his supplemental "suggestions." Members declined to comment on the substitute plan pending an overnight study.

Three Leaders Called.

While Mr. Whitney was assailing rigid margin requirements of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, and defend-

U. S. Agents Aid Hunt for Girl

Virginia Child Believed Held for $1,500; Father Says Note Received.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—The Federal Department of Justice today stepped into the investigation of 14-year-old Caroline Musante's second alleged kidnaping experience within a year.

Two agents from Washington joined Stafford County authorities in their serach for the girl, who was reported as having disappeared early this morning, and whose father, Leo Musante, Stafford County farmer, said he had received a note telling him to place $1,500 at a specified place, "or Caroline's head would be sent to him."

Musante declined to allow anyone to see the note, which he said was "confidential."

He said that Caroline got up at about 5:30 a. m., and went into the yard. Shortly afterward she was heard to scream twice and an automobile was heard driving away. Bloodhounds followed a trail into nearby woods, but circled back to the house.

It was in February of last year that Caroline, after an overnight absence, was found tied to a tree in the woods near her home. She told of being abducted.

Subsequently she told of receiving threatening notes and of being caught and held on another occasion by two men.

Gov. Ritchie of Maryland refused to allow extradition of a man held in jail there on suspicion of having participated in the alleged kidnaping.

Albert Buried, Leopold Takes Throne Today

Rulers of Many Nations Join in Rites for Belgian King.

Brussels, Feb. 22 (AP).—The body of the knightly King Albert lay in peace tonight in the crypt of a little gray church near the Laeken royal castle and plans went forward for the enthronement of his son, Prince Leopold.

Albert was buried with the pomp of courtly custom; Leopold will be made king with similar circumstance, but without the tears that marked the cortege of princes, diplomats, clergymen and commoners honoring the dead monarch.

Eight hours of military processions, religious rites and cannons' solemn salutes ended this afternoon with the lowering of the body into its last resting place beside the coffins of Leopold I and II.

Enthronement Today.

From the sad rites for Albert the Belgians and their thousands of foreign visitors turned to eager anticipation of ceremonies tomorrow which will mark the beginning of the reign of Leopold III, who becomes the fourth ruler of this little nation since it achieved independence.

He will ride alone into the capital from Laeken on his favorite horse, to be greeted by his subjects. Tradition decrees that his wife should ride with him, but this will be impossible for Princess Astrid is expecting the birth of a child about Eastertime.

After the ceremony of taking the oath before Parliament, the 32-year old and slender Leopold will receive the diplomatic corps in the Brussels palace.

Queen Attends Rites.

Contrary to custom forbidding the presence of near women relatives, Queen Elizabeth, Princess Astrid and 20 ladies of the court attended the services for King Albert at St. Gudule.

The Queen's composure and bravery in her grief were praised

Roosevelt Asks Probe Of His $1,000 Legacy

Los Angeles, Feb. 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt has requested an investigation of Leon Grant McBarney's will, which bequeathed $1,000 each to the Chief Executive and Joseph Stalin, Soviet Russian official, but left McBarney's six needy children only $1 each.

President Roosevelt's request was made through the Solicitor General's office, it was disclosed here today. The request was made, it was said, with the idea of relinquishing his interest to the children.

House to Vote Full U. S. Pay, Leaders Hold

White House Silent on Senate Revolt; Veto Hinted by Byrnes.

Congress will send to the President the independent offices appropriation bill carrying full restoration of Government salaries effective July 1 with the beginning of the next fiscal year, it was predicted by House leaders yesterday.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic leader, and Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee in charge of the bill, made the prediction after conferences with Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the Senate.

The bill will not be passed by the Senate until next week, but the Senate already has approved full restoration of Government salaries effective July 1 and restoration of 5 per cent as of February 1.

Restoration was voted by a margin of a single vote on the proposal of Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, leader in the fight for salaries and greater benefits for war veterans.

Move to Reconsider Suggested.

A move to reconsider the vote has been suggested, but this has not been decided on, it was said.

House leaders expect the question to be brought to a vote on the floor there on a motion to concur in the Senate pay amendment.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey has predicted the House would readily accept the Administration pay proposal, providing for restoration of 5 per cent effective February 1 and another 5 per cent July 1. What the House will do about full restoration the Speaker refused to predict.

Action on the question on the House floor will avoid a battle in conference. Representative James Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the powerful appropriations committee, is opposed to full restoration. He has considerable influence.

White House Veto Hinted.

Personnel of the conference committees of House and Senate will have a decided bearing on the outcome if the question is not settled by a vote in the House before the bill is sent to conference to obtain

U. S. Charges 10 Meat Firms With Monopoly, Price Fixing

Complaint that 10 of the Nation's largest meat packing companies acted in combination to manipulate and control prices was filed yesterday by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

The companies named were Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Wilson & Co., Morris & Co., St. Louis Independent Packing Co., Jacob Dold Packing Co., John Morrell & Co., the Memphis Packing Corporation, the Cudahy Packing Co., and Abraham Brothers Packing Co.

According to Seth Thomas, Agriculture Department solicitor, the charges cover the period of 1927-1933 and are confined principally to Southern States.

Spokesmen for the named packing firms located in Chicago immediately issued a general denial of the charges, according to the Associated Press. A hearing on the complaint, brought under authority of the packers and stockyard act, was set for April 9 at Jackson, Miss. The packers have until March 24 to file an answer.

The complaint had all earmarks of being the most serious charge brought against packers of the country since Upton Sinclair wrote his famous "The Jungle" and the first Roosevelt waved his "big stick" at the industry.

The complaint, which was issued February 14, but which was not made public until yesterday, charges that each of the packers named furnished to each other information on prices at which they would sell meats and meat food products. This, it said, was to give unreasonable preferences and advantages to purchasers and localities; to discriminate between certain persons; to force competitors out of business, and to manipulate prices and apportion sales in commerce.

Nicaraguan Guardsmen Kill Sandino

Managua, Nicaragua, Feb. 22 (AP). Gen. Augusto Sandino, rebel and patriot and always a first-class fighting man, was reported in a government communique today to have been killed by his bitter enemies, National guardsmen.

For more than five years he rallied his men against "an imperialistic United States foreign policy," guardsmen and American Marines, and when he retired last fall to become a planter he had won, in some quarters, the description, "The George Washington of Nicaragua."

Details in the communique were sketchy, and a rigid censorship was invoked, but it was said that Socrates Sandino, brother of the 40-year-old rebel, and two friends were slain.

Punishment Planned.

Private dispatches to Panama said Sandino, his father and brother, and two others, unnamed, were shot early today by National guardsmen, and that the rebel chieftain and the others were ordered to appear before the guards. On their refusal, the reports said, the men were slain.

The government statement said:

"The government officially states that the action of the Guarda Nacional in killing Sandino was contrary to the instructions of President Sacasa to guarantee the lives of Sandino and his followers while they were in Managua.

"The president severely reproves these acts of some individual guardsmen and has ordered an immediate investigation and is requesting Congress to give him the necessary facilities to maintain public order."

Planned to Disarm.

Generals Umanzor and Estrada, Sandino's brothers in arms, were the others reported slain.

Sandino and President Sacasa signed a peace pact last February in which the fighter disarmed all but 100 of his followers. These were to retain their weapons for a year, and engage with him in cooperative farming near the Coco River.

The general came here from the colony last week to complete arrangements for the final disarming of his men. He was said to have irritated National Guard members by calling their organization unconstitutional.

Oil Code Declared "Eminent Success"

New NRA Rules Planned, Margold Reveals.

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Despite "pitifully inadequate" conservation laws in various States, control of oil production under the NRA code has been "eminently successful," Nathan R. Margold, solicitor of the Interior Department and chairman of the Petroleum Administrative Board, said tonight.

He spoke at the annual dinner of the petroleum division of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

Margold said the Petroleum Administrative Board is drafting more effective regulations under the NRA and the petroleum code to protect producing States against "any disastrous effects from an overflow of Wells in Texas."

Sled on Wheels Wins Dog Race

Idaho Derby Run Despite Scarcity of Snow.

Ashton, Idaho, Feb. 22 (AP).—His sled equipped with 10-inch wheels because of lack of snow, Don Cordingly, of Ashton, won the eighteenth annual American Dog Derby today over an abbreviated 12-mile course.

He finished 13 seconds ahead of Ray Peterson, of St. Anthony, last year's champion, in 51 minutes, and thus won his second race in three years.

Cecely Baum, of Ashton, was third and Delbert Groom, of Rigsby, was fourth. Thula Geelan and Gene Trude, two women drivers, trailed.

Mae West Defendant Held for Fugitive Bond

Miami, Feb. 22 (AP).—Harry O. Voiler, 42, of Chicago, charged with conspiracy to rob Mae West, screen actress, tonight endeavored to raise a $10,000 fugitive bond, while Los Angeles authorities sought a substantial increase in bail set by the county court.

Voiler, arrested yesterday, told County Judge W. Frank Blanton today he had a $10,000 bond standing with a Chicago court in the case, and declared he had received permission from the court to come to Florida.

Restored Pay For Veterans Loses, 60-14

Senate Turns Down First Move to Repeal Cuts.

Economy Act Weathers Test; New Moves Slated Soon.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

By the overwhelming majority of 60 to 14, the Senate late yesterday rejected the Hatfield amendment repealing the economy act of March, 1933, and all subsequent legislation restricting the compensation of war veterans.

Thus the veterans lost the first round of their fight in the Senate but the Hatfield amendment did afford a test vote. Many advocates of liberalizing the veterans compensation laws voted against it, believing restoration of the status quo prior to March 20 last was too extreme. It would add about $300,000,000 annually to the budget.

The tests of the veterans' strength will come on the Reed and the McCarran-Steiwer amendment to the Independent Offices appropriation bill, probably on Monday. The Reed proposal embodies the four-point program approved by the American Legion, and would cost between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000.

The McCrran-Steiwer amendment, which would cost in the neighborhood of $100,000,000, would limit reductions in Spanish-American War veterans to 10 per cent, would restore a restricted number of presumptive cases to the compensation rolls and provides further modifications in the economy act provisions.

Debate Limited.

After voting down the Hatfield amendment, the Senate adopted a unanimous consent agreement to limit debate, beginning at 4 p. m. Monday to 10 minutes for each Senator on the bill and 10 minutes on each amendment. A recess was taken until noon Monday. It is possible but not probable the veterans' fight will be concluded Monday.

Meanwhile the House leaders were concerned over ways of blocking favorable action by their body on immediate cash payment of the World War veterans' bonus. A petition bearing the required number of 145 names asking for discharge of the Ways and Means Committee from further consideration of the bill has been filed. This will bring the bonus bill before the House on March 12.

The Ways and Means Committee meets today and it is possible that

Bandit Secures $40 In Shoe Store Holdup

Manager of a downtown Ninth street shoe store was held up early last night by a bandit who took $40 from the cash register and escaped.

Collins W. McEachren, manager of the Newark shoe store, 434 Ninth street northwest, said the man entered while he was alone. Producing a revolver, the man ordered McEachren to keep quiet.

2 Ships Rush Help To Vessel on Reef

40 Men Aboard in Danger in Pacific Storm.

San Francisco, Feb. 22 (AP).—Battered by heavy seas as a storm swept up the coast of Lower California, the 5,000-ton tanker Swift Eagle, aground on a reef of Cerros Island, waited today for the arrival of rescue ships.

The Coast Guard cutter Shoshone was battling heavy seas over the 200 miles from Rocky Point, 90 miles south of San Diego and Cerros Island, to save the 40 men aboard. From San Pedro the Salvage tug Peacock was speeding to the stricken vessel.

Meager wireless messages indicated the tanker was badly damaged and that her boiler room was flooded.

Cuban President Sends Legionnaires Invitation

Havana, Feb. 22 (AP).—President Carlos Mendieta today sent greetings to members of the American Legion throughout the United States and expressed the hope that many of them attending the National convention at Miami next fall will come to Cuba.

The President received Joe S. Clark, of St. Petersburg, Fla., department commander, and C. Howard Rowlon, of Palatka, department adjutant of Florida, at the presidential palace.

McGraw Gains Ground In Battle With Uremia

Dr. L. B. Chapman, who has been in almost constant attendance on the former pilot of the New York Giants since he was brought to New Rochelle Hospital six days ago, announced this afternoon that McGraw had passed from danger temporarily, at least.

Two Army Pilots Killed In Four Mail Crashes; Link Mellon in Probe

Brown Says Hoover Was Not Informed of Conferences.

Clashes on Bagley Deals With Black

"Acted in Law," Probe Told by Former Postal Chief.

By Martha Dalrymple.

President Hoover was not informed of the plan to call major air transport operators to Washington to discuss reallocation of air-mail contracts, but he "approved the broad, general policy of the Postoffice Department to develop aviation," former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown told the Senate Air Mail Investigating Committee yesterday.

Brown also told the committee that Andrew Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and his two nephews, William L. and Richard K. Mellon, wrote him letters concerning a proposed mail contract with the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation.

Yesterday was Brown's fourth consecutive day of testimony. He again made a blanket denial that there ever was anything wrong either with his award or his administration of air-mail contracts.

Day's Developments.

While Brown was presenting his defense, other developments included:

Additional evidence that air mail carrying soon will be returned to private concerns. President Roosevelt, the Postoffice Department and the House Postoffice Committee all were considering plans for permitting lines to bid for their left contracts.

The House Naval sub-committee investigating airplane contracts was preparing to hear Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy, Saturday.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, repeated his attack upon the cancellation of air contracts on the floor of the House, declaring they had been canceled in a "high-handed, arbitrary, dictatorial manner."

Brown's fourth day on the stand was the most heated and excited since the former Cabinet official finally got himself called by agreeing to waive his right of immunity from criminal prosecution based on his testimony.

Brown frequently reprimanded Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee, who conducted the morning's questioning, and during the afternoon the former postoffice head became quite warmed up to the defense picture he was painting with the assistance of Senator Austin.

Reprimanded on Finances.

The chief reprimand to Black came when the chairman was attempting to get full details of Brown's financial relationship with the late Joseph P. Bagley, who at one time was Brown's partner in a stock trading account and also was the Washington representative of a

Canadian House Gets Bill for Central Bank

Ottawa, Feb. 22 (AP).—E. N. Rhodes, minister of finance, introduced in the House of Commons today a bill providing for the establishment of a central banking institution, to be called the Bank of Canada.

The constitution and powers of the proposed bank would follow a royal commission's report recommending public ownership of the capital stock and management by a board of directors appointed by the government and subsequently by the shareholders.

Army Private Burns to Death In Plane Crash

W. T. Henley Is Victim of Forced Landing at Brunswick, Md.

Private W. T. Henley, Army radio operator at Bolling Field, was burned to death late yesterday when a plane piloted by him turned over and burst into flames during a forced landing near Brunswick, Md.

Sergt. Lewis D. Kendall, also of Bolling Field, attached to the Inspection Service, and Joseph Carey, of Brunswick, were burned about the hands and arms in a futile effort to rescue Henley.

Henley's plane, owned by the Boyles-Mayfield Flying Service, of Beacon Airport, Va., near Alexandria, had just taken off. Witnesses said the plane's engine began to sputter at about 200 feet and on being landed turned turtle.

Henley landed in the field near Brunswick last Monday during a snowstorm. Returning to Washington, he had gone to Brunswick yesterday with Sergt Kendall. The latter is said in Associated Press reports to have pronounced the plane safe for flying. Henley started back alone.

At Beacon Airport, it was said Henley had been flying five years and had 450 flying hours to his credit. He is a native of Indiana and is survived by his mother and a sister.

Three Senators Interceded for "Army Trader"

By Felix Bruner.

Three Senators yesterday said they had interceded with the War Department in behalf of Joseph Silverman, New York dealer in surplus Army supplies, whose dealings with the department are now a subject of grand jury investigation.

The Senators are Royal S Copeland (Democrat), New York; W Warren Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, and Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina.

Both Barbour and Reynolds put into the Senate record letters they had written to Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, at the request of Silverman. Barbour also made public two memoranda which he said Silverman left at his office. The memoranda pointed out that the Government would be saved considerable money if it agreed to proposals made by Silverman. Both Senators said Woodring had not answered their letters.

Copeland, in a statement to newspapermen, said he had sought a square deal for Silverman, who had represented to him that he was being discriminated against because he was a Jew.

"It was represented to me," Copeland said, "that Silverman was being baited because he was a Jew. I asked Secretary Dern that he be dealt with on his merits, and that no such discrimination be made."

Copeland said he later wrote to Woodring asking about Army surplus supplies in which Silverman was interested.

"About a year ago," Barbour told the Senate, "Mr. Silverman came to my office in the Senate Office Build-

Rep. Hooper, Michigan, Dies In Office Following Speech

While waiting to see a transcript of an address on air mail that he had just completed in the House, Representative Joseph L. Hooper (Republican), Michigan, died in his office late yesterday of heart disease.

He was discovered by a messenger bearing the reporters' transcript for correction, and was pronounced dead by Dr. George C. Calvert, Capitol physician.

Employes in his office, absent when Hooper succumbed, declared he had appeared to be in the best of health when last seen alive. He was 56 years old.

A lawyer by profession, Representative Hooper had been in the House continuously since election to the Sixty-ninth Congress. Only a few days ago he told a colleague that he would not run for reelection this fall, but would return to the practice of law in Battle Creek, according to the Associated Press.

"I feel that I am getting to the point that if I ever get back to my law practice I had better do it now," he was reported to have said.

"I have enjoyed my associations with the members of the House during these years, and I regret to leave them. But if I don't quit now it will just mean one more term and then another, and then some day they would boot me out.

"As a matter of fact I wanted to withdraw last year, but I made the race against my will."

One of the old guard Republicans, Hooper was an intimate friend of Representative Carl E. Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, and had been chatting with him only a short while before his death.

Before coming to Congress, Hooper had served as city attorney of Battle Creek and prosecuting attorney of Calhoun County. He was a member in Congress of the Elections No. 2, Insular Affairs and Judiciary Committees.

One Killed in Ohio, Another in Texas

Radio Limit 15 Miles, Aviators Fly Far Off Courses.

Four Army planes, three carrying mail, and two of them on their way to Washington, crashed yesterday, killing two fliers and injuring two.

One plane for Washington crashed near Crisfield, Md., at the southern extreme of the Eastern Shore. The pilot, Lieut. Harold Dietz, was severely injured and was taken to a Crisfield hospital. He is a reserve officer from Hampton, Va.

The two men who were killed were Lieut. Durward O. Lowry, whose mail plane crashed near Deshler, Ohio, and Lieut. Fred L. Patrick, whose plane crashed near Denison, Tex.

Meantime the Associated Press reported that Lieut. McCoy, an air-mail pilot, was forced down yesterday at Woodland, Pa., by a burned-out engine.

Lieut. McCoy said neither he nor his plane was damaged in the landing. The mail he was carrying was put on a train to finish its trip to Cleveland.

Far Off His Course.

At Washington Airport, it was said Dietz was flying from Newark to Washington, having stopped at Camden, N. J. He was far off his course when he crashed. Lieut. Dietz, who was expected to stop at Washington and then fly on to Richmond, was due at the airport at 6:15 p. m. Word of the crash was not received until two hours later. Dietz's home station is Langley Field.

Persons living near where the plane crashed said they saw it flying low over Marion Station, near Crisfield, as though the pilot were attempting to get his bearings. Suddenly, the plane crashed into a tree, then hit a telephone pole as it fell to the ground.

Flying weather generally over the country was poor, and it was reported particularly bad in the vicinity of Washington, where visibility was low because of mist and rain.

The other Washington plane was flying from Cleveland when it crashed in the mountains near Uniontown, Pa., the Associated Press reported. Lieut. G. P. Hollstein, the pilot, was cut about the face and bruised when his ship

Deputies Rally To Doumergue

Vote 496 to 123 to Give Premier Decree Power in Fight for Franc.

Paris, Feb. 22 (AP).—Smiling but stubborn, Premier Gaston Doumergue scored a smashing victory in the Chamber of Deputies tonight when he was given a 496 to 123 vote in favor of balancing the 1934 budget.

Facing a flat threat by Doumergue to quit, the chamber gave him extraordinary power to cut state expenses to the bone in order to balance the budget and keep the franc on the gold standard.

"We are fighting to maintain at all cost the stability of the franc," the premier said. "The country awaits a vote on the budget in order to know if it can have confidence in the franc."

Doumergue, called from retirement to lead the state in the present crisis, warned that if the deputies did not accede to his wishes he would resign. Then, he said, Parliament would be dissolved and new elections called.

The vote gave Doumergue decree powers to slash the cost of government, similar to those granted Raymond Poincare, "savior of the franc," durin the crisis of 1926.

Not since that time had similar privileges been given a premier, although Doumergue's are restricted to economies which must be decreed before June 30 and ratified by the chamber before December 12.

By a "gentleman's agreement" the premier will leave salaries of government functionaries untouched.

Captain Kills Convict, Ends Mutiny in Camp

Deland, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—A mutiny at a prison road camp near here today was cut short when Capt. Horace Thomas broke through a barricade and shot to death the alleged leader, Sam Logan, Negro.

Dern Praises Washington in Birthday Talk

Declaring the advent of a new Administration last year saved the United States from Communism or Fascism and averted chaos, Secretary of War Dern yesterday urged a return to the principles of George Washington in an address commemorating the 202d anniversary of the First President.

He delivered his speech, which concluded with a stern denunciation of the newspaper that "plays up the inflammatory utterances of some fanatic" to stir up war feeling, in Continental Memorial Hall under the auspices of several patriotic societies.

President Roosevelt went to Mount Vernon late in the day to place a wreath at Washington's tomb. The memorable "Farewell Address" was read in the Senate by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and in the House by Representative Howard W. Smith, who represents the Virginia District in which George Washington lived.

Wreaths were laid at Washington Monument by representatives of Sons of the Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution and Children of the American Revolution, the societies under whose auspices Secretary Dern spoke. A junior military aid at the White House also placed a wreath at the base of the shaft in the President's name.

Most Federal offices were closed, even postal workers being given the day off wherever they could be spared, but the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and a few other emergency bureaus were open.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, addressed the Association of Oldest Inhabitants last night. Earlier in the day the Rev. Ignatius Smith, speaking to marines and legionnaires, at a military mass, warned against foreign entanglements and Diosdado M. Yap, local Filipino leader, invoked the principles of Washington in an address pleading for the islands' independence.

The Washington National Monument Society met at the University Club. One of the more conspicuous birthday ceremonies last night was a patriotic program and ball given at the Hotel Washington by the New England State Society.

Despite a driving rain, President Roosevelt motored to Mount Vernon to place a wreath within the Washington tomb. He was accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and his military and naval aids, Col. Edwin M. Watson, and Capt. Walter N. Vernou.

His car rolled up to the grilled opening of the ivy-coated red brick tomb. There, he descended and entered the interior on the arm of his naval aid.

The group remained only a moment. Then the President reappeared and, bareheaded, returned to his waiting automobile. Only a small group witnessed the ceremony, which was also attended by Miss Marguerite LeHand, the President's personal secretary, and Mrs. Malvina Scheider, secretary to the First Lady.

President Roosevelt observed the day also by remaining away from the executive offices and attending to routine business in the White House proper.

Mount Vernon had many visitors. George Washington Post, No. 1, American Legion, conducted a motor pilgrimage to the shrine and placed a wreath. The advisory board of Masonic clubs did likewise. A wreath also was placed on the tomb by Boy Scouts, representing every troop in the Capital.

An inquisitive Philadelphian utilized the holiday to dig up an old newspaper which revealed that patent medicine advertisements crowded Washington's farewell address off page 1, according to the Associated Press.

On the other side of the continent, in Seattle, someone discovered a "Kentucky gentleman" was responsible for a State's being named for Washington. They were going to call it Columbia when the Kentucky gentleman suggested a sovereign State be named after the Father of His Country.

"The United States is now making an effort to cure its ailments without destroying its political, social and economic system," said Secretary Dern in the Capital's principal birthday address.

"A year ago we were rushing headlong toward Communism or Fascism—I don't know which. Conditions had grown intolerable and were getting worse. But a change of policy averted chaos, and now the American people again have faith in the American system and are looking hopefully to a future of better-ordered liberty, better-sustained opportunity, and a better sense of social justice. In so doing, we are getting back to the traditions and ideals of George Washington."

The Cabinet member extolled Washington's position in advocating reasonable military preparedness without going to the extreme of maintaining a large standing Army.

"As one who has never favored an overgrown military establishment on account of its potential dangers," said the head of the War Department, "I am happy to assure my fellow citizens that in the American Army this danger is remote, indeed."

Mathematics Lecture Series Opens Tonight

The first of a series of lectures on "Creative Mathematics" will be given at Paul Junior High School at 8 p. m. today, by Holjer Langmack. Langmack, a Danish scientist, promises to reveal some startling results of studies made over a period of 20 years. All the usual dimensions and two new ones are included in the discoveries, as well as serious errors in the respective relativities of zero, plus, and minus "that great little trio of mathematical standbys," he said.

Kidnaper Ends Life by Hanging To Cheat Law

Chicago, Feb. 22 (AP).—Charles W. Mayo, amateur kidnaper who bungled his first job, chose his own road to death today rather than face prosecution.

Author of the perforated trunk abduction plot against Emanuel Philip Adler, Davenport, Iowa, banker and publisher, Mayo hanged himself to the bars of his cell in a Chicago police station an hour after the man he named as his partner in the crime was trapped.

In little more than 24 hours after the 61-year-old Iowa man had been clubbed in a corridor of the Morrison Hotel, his two assailants had been captured, their confessions secured, both were identified and one was dead.

Death Kept From Aid.

Unaware of his confederate's self-destruction, John Lacy corroborated fully the confession of Mayo and was held by the State's attorney to face charges of attempted kidnaping and assault. He will be arraigned Monday, Sergt. Thomas Kelly announced.

The $200,000 abduction of Edward Bremer, of St. Paul, furnished the inspiration of this bizarre conspiracy to trundle Adler away in a trunk.

Mayo staved off as long as he could admitting the kidnap plan against Adler. He dreaded the electric chair, but broke down at last and told his story of camping, with Lacy, for days on the trail of the Davenport publisher and of an audacious scheme to pack his trussed-up body off to a South Side apartment to be held for $40,000.

At 10 a. m. today police arrested Lacy in bed at a South Side hotel.

Overlooked Scarf.

The jailer found him dangling from the bars of his cell. With all the precautions the police had taken to remove his belt and necktie and empty his pockets, they had made one fatal omission. In his overcoat pocket Mayo found his scarf.

A moment after a turnkey handed him a cup of coffee Mayo climbed the door of his cell, knotted the scarf about his neck and the upper bars, and jumped off the wooden cot. Ten minutes later he was found lifeless.

Quakes Reveal Four Layers Of Earth "Skin," Liquid Core

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 22 (AP).—An itching of the skin is revealing Mother Earth's constitutional secrets.

Most of these earthquakes merely are skin troubles of Mother Earth, but they are forming her wrinkles in the shape of mountains, seismologists say.

Dr. Gutenberg says the instruments show there are four layers in the top-skin crust of the earth; below that a layer of solid material about 1,000 miles thick, and the core of the earth appears to be of a liquid nature.

These layers are quite irregular, he finds, but some definite ideas have been established about them. The topmost skin scarf is about 8½ miles thick, the second layer a little more than 7 miles, the third layer about 2½ miles and the fourth layer some 6 miles.

Earthquakes write their own story about this on the instruments, he says, pointing out that comparisons of records from several seismograph stations show the recorded wave motion of earthquakes is affected by the various layers.

Since 1926 the seismologists have had many records to study, there being some 1,200 earthquakes a year originating in southern California, and thousands of others more distant have been recorded.

U. S. Charges Meat Prices Controlled

plaint said, the packers named "did engage in and use certain unfair, unjustly discriminatory and deceptive practices and devices * * * for the purpose or with the effect of enabling each of said respondents and others to give undue and unreasonable preference and advantages in commerce to certain persons, to wit, purchasers of meats and meat food products."

"The respondents herein," the complaint went on, "on or about January 1, 1927, to December 31, 1933, acting as aforesaid, and at divers other times, did conspire, combine, agree and arrange with other persons and between themselves to apportion sales of meats and meat food products in commerce and did conspire, combine, agree and arrange by and between themselves and other persons to manipulate and to control prices in commerce."

Other Firms Suppressed.

In addition, it asserted, the packers did "conspire, combine, agree and arrange * * * to manipulate prices, to discriminate between a certain person or persons as to price, terms and conditions of sale for the purpose or with the effect of forcing out of business certain competitors in the manufacture, handling, processing and selling of meats and meat food products." The complaint went on to charge that by discriminating in localities, the packers acted to create a monopoly "in the selling or dealing in certain meats" and products.

Revealing that the Department of Agriculture has been investigating packers' prices and methods in the Southern States since November, Thomas said:

"Early last summer the department began receiving complaints from individuals and firms in Southern States about alleged unfair trade practices in the retail selling of meats and meat products. These complaints came to the Secretary, the solicitor's office, and the Packers and Stockyards Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Could Not Ignore Charges.

"We immediately began to look into the situation in a preliminary way. Facts found at that time indicated that the department, under responsibility placed upon it by the packers and stockyards act, could not ignore its plain duty of making a thorough study of the practices of the packers doing business in the Southern States.

"This intensive study by our investigators, covering the period, 1927-1933, began in November and has continued up to the present. Evidence of violation of section 202 of the packers and stockyards act is, in my opinion, such as to make it the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture to file a complaint and cite the packers to hearing."

The action is the first taken by the Government under the act, and should the order for the packers to appear for hearing be violated, Thomas said, court action could be instituted against violators. Upon conviction, they would be subject to a fine of not less than $500 or more than $10,000 or imprisonment of not less than six months or more than five years. Each day of violation would constitute a separate offense.

From Harold H. Swift, in Chicago, the Associated Press reported, came a quick denial that his firm of Swift & Co. was guilty as charged.

"Swift & Co. deny the charges in the complaint and are confident that there has been no violation of law," he said.

Naval Probers To Grill Adams On Contracts

Former Secretary of Navy Charles Francis Adams yesterday was requested to appear Saturday before the House Naval Affairs subcommittee for questioning in regard to airplanes and engine contracts awarded by the Navy Department during his regime.

Chairman John J. Delaney, of the committee which is investigating charges of excessive profits on Navy aircraft contracts, made the decision to call the former Hoover Cabinet member, who has expressed willingness to testify at any time.

Testimony before the committee yesterday showed that one Charles Francis Adams owned 500 shares of Douglas Aircraft Co. stock. The former Cabinet member vigorously denied in Boston that he had ever owned stock in the Douglas Co.

Another Charles Francis Adams, a Framingham, Mass., business man, said he had purchased 500 shares and that he probably was the man mentioned by the committee.

Delaney said the committee would not take official recognition of the error in identity until Adams appears.

"When Mr. Adams comes before the committee, he will be given a chance to correct the error," Delaney said.

The New York Democrat also announced that David I. Ingalls, former Assistant Secretary of Navy for Aeronautics, would be questioned by the committee at its session yesterday.

Edward P. Warner, also a former Assistant Secretary for Aeronautics during the Adams regime, will appear before the committee Monday.

Witnesses appearing before the group today included John A. B. Smith, president of the Curtiss Airplane & Motor Co., a subsidiary of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation. Smith testified that his company made a .023 per cent profit on Navy contracts totaling $5,590,000 from 1928 through 1933.

Smith said his concern made a 34.3 per cent profit on its Navy business in 1928, but suffered a loss of 25.65 per cent on its 1933 contracts.

The HOG PROCESSING Tax

Just as a season's yield of farm crops is not an accurate measure of a fertilizer's worth, so the price of hogs at the time of sale is not the full amount the producer will receive for his hogs under the Government's corn and hog adjustment program. The Government proposes to refund cash benefits derived from the hog processing tax to those producers who agree to restrict their production of corn and hogs. These cash payments to the producer are an addition to the price of hogs at the time of sale.

This graph shows that the price of live hogs, during the last thirteen years, followed very closely the prices of pork.

What the packing industry can get for pork and by-products depends upon three factors:

1.—the supply of hogs on the market

The nearly 2,000,000 more hogs slaughtered in 1933 than in 1932 was one of the principal depressing factors of hog prices during the past year. These figures are for hogs slaughtered under federal inspection only. They do not include hogs slaughtered by local packers, butchers and on farms.

2.—competition with beef, lamb, veal, and other foods

Many foods besides other meats compete with pork. When pork prices rise beyond what the consumer will pay, he refuses to buy pork, turning instead to other foods which may be proportionately cheaper.

3.—the amount of money the consumer has with which to buy food

Mead for New Air Mail Bids By Old Firms

Member Urges Legislation to Admit Concerns Who Lost Contracts.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Mead (Democrat), New York, of the House Postoffice Committee said yesterday the committee was "anxious to give consideration" to permanent air-mail legislation that would permit air lines which lost their contracts to bid on new proposals.

Mead's statement came during questioning of Thomas B. Doe, Eastern Air Transport official, at a hearing on permanent air-mail legislation.

Doe said he sat in on meetings called by Walter F. Brown when the latter was Postmaster General, but said he had no personal knowledge of "collusion."

"You considered it an obligation to attend these meetings?" Mead asked.

"Yes," Doe answered.

"It was necessary for the Postmaster General to call these meetings when the law was changed?"

"Yes."

"If you failed to attend, it would not go well with you?"

"I don't believe it would."

"If the Postmaster General, by reason of granting extensions or failing to require bids or anything else, failed to live up to the intent of Congress, the responsibility rests on you?" Mead pursued.

"I hope so."

"Well, some of these extensions were drafted recklessly, and there might have been other irregularities, but this committee is anxious to give consideration to an amendment that would let these carriers come back in and bid on new contracts," Mead asserted.

"I feel," Mead said later, "that Mr. Brown's administration of the air mail is deserving of criticism and some carriers are deserving of criticism, but I want to bring out, so that we will not make the same mistake in writing a new law, that the whole trouble was because, under the Watres act, we made the Postmaster General the czar of the industry."

Touhy Outlaws' Fate With Jury; Death Is Asked

Defense Assails Factor as "Con Man" Who Plotted Kidnaping.

Chicago, Feb. 22 (AP).—The case of Roger Touhy, Albert Kator and Gustav Schafer, charged with the kidnaping of John Factor, was given to the jury shortly before 7 p. m. today.

The jurors retired after hearing the prosecutor plead with them to send the three defendants to the electric chair. Besides the death penalty, two other punishments are possible under Illinois law—life imprisonment, or imprisonment for not less than five years.

Defense Attorney William Scott Stewart lashed out in a bitter attack upon John Factor, the kidnap victim, in his closing address to the jury.

Charges Plot by Factor.

"Factor is a con man," Stewart told the jury. "And the State's whole case is made up of Factor's story and the story of that stool pigeon, Costner."

Isaac Costner, arrested in Baltimore ten days ago as a member of the Touhy gang, confessed from the witness stand in the course of this trial.

Factor is awaiting extradition to England to stand trial on charges of swindling British investors of more than $7,000,000.

Pleads for Death Penalty.

Prosecutor Wilber Crowley attacked the principal witness of the defense—Basil (The Owl) Banghart, seized with Costner and under indictment for Factor's kidnaping.

Banghart surprised the courtroom by admitting he was one of two men who sought to collect an extra $50,000 from Factor, but charged that Factor "arranged it," for the purpose of giving the stamp of authenticity to Factor's story that he had been kidnaped.

Crowley branded Banghart a professional thief, wanted in three States.

Busy Day

Patriotic Stork Delivers 11 Babies in District.

Taking his cue from the American Eagle, the stork went patriotic yesterday and delivered 11 Washington birthday babies to proud District mothers.

The first baby born on the 202d anniversary of the birth of Father of His Country was a husky girl to Mrs. John T. Carruthers, of 15 Dorset street, Chevy Chase, at Columbia Hospital. Young Miss Carruthers first saw the light of day at 3:05 a. m., and both mother and baby were reported doing nicely.

A girl and a boy were born in George Washington University Hospital, the girl to Mrs. Frank Hand, of 1650 Harvard street northwest, and the boy to Mrs. Charles Barnett, of 1763 Q street northwest.

Two boys were born in Georgetown Hospital, the children of Mrs. Mary Tullis and Mrs. Louise McAtee.

Six colored infants were born in Gallinger Hospital, and all of them were reported by physicians to be cooing and crying quite normally.

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

"Tory" Douglas, Mystery Man

Feels New Deal a Mess, and Hates to Watch Cash Flow Out.

Unofficial Observer.

LEWIS W. DOUGLAS is an extremely intelligent and able man. No one in the Administration has a better brain and during its opening months he was a regular member of the President's bedside Cabinet, along with Louis Howe and Prof. Moley. He was used as conservative ballast in policy-making and he was a good man for the job. He was at first freely mentioned as Woodin's probable successor as Secretary of the Treasury. His budget policy made such an appointment impossible.

Back of his mania for saving, Douglas had a very highly developed economic philosophy, which was the reverse of the New Deal at almost every point. He believes in balancing the budget, stabilizing the dollar, restoring "confidence." He believes in competition, small business units, a minimum of Government interference. He believes in the sales tax and tried to put it across Congress last spring. In short, Douglas is not a New Dealer at all.

He is a young Tory, closer to Ogden Mills and Carter Glass than to Roosevelt's new crowd. He thinks he is very liberal because he holds no brief for financial buccaneering and would like to reduce banking control of industry by enforcing the antitrust laws, breaking business up into smaller units and keeping them under the control of industrial managers instead of letting them be exploited by the banks. His economic theories are those which were considered radical—25 years ago.

Haunted by "Disaster" At Every Turn.

As a result, no man in Washington has been so unhappy as Douglas, who sees disaster at every turn. He has not hidden from his friends his belief that the New Deal is a mess from start to finish. He has fought every important undertaking by the Roosevelt Administration. He tried to hold back expenditures on public works. He distrusted the NRA experiment and tried to reduce governmental participation in it to a minimum.

He fought eternally for stabilization of the dollar and he moaned that Western civilization was about to perish when Roosevelt accepted the Thomas inflationary amendment to the farm bill. He sent a memorandum of flat-footed opposition to the gold purchase plan. He was disgusted when his friend and protege, Dean Acheson, was kicked out of the Treasury and he often remarks that the New Deal is so confusing that it makes his head ache.

Why Douglas remains in the New Deal is something of a mystery. The chances are that, aside from an honorable desire to serve to the best of his ability, he is busy "making a record," which will stand him in good political stead if ever the pendulum swings to the right again. His budget for 1934-35 was the best ever drafted from a purely technical viewpoint. As a watchdog of Government expenditure there could be no better man; as a maker of policy there could be no worse. He has long since ceased to enjoy Roosevelt's confidence.

Perhaps he will live to see his doctrine of infant damnation consign the new economic experiments to eternal fire; perhaps he will live to retract his prophecies. He is young enough to absorb another point of view and his one-tracked mind is an exceedingly good one. The Old Guard Republicans are right to consider him their ally. If the conservatives of both parties merge to defeat the New Deal, he would make a good fusion candidate, or if Wall street succeeds in recapturing the Democratic party, he will be a good rallying point. He is making a record now which will fit him for either role.

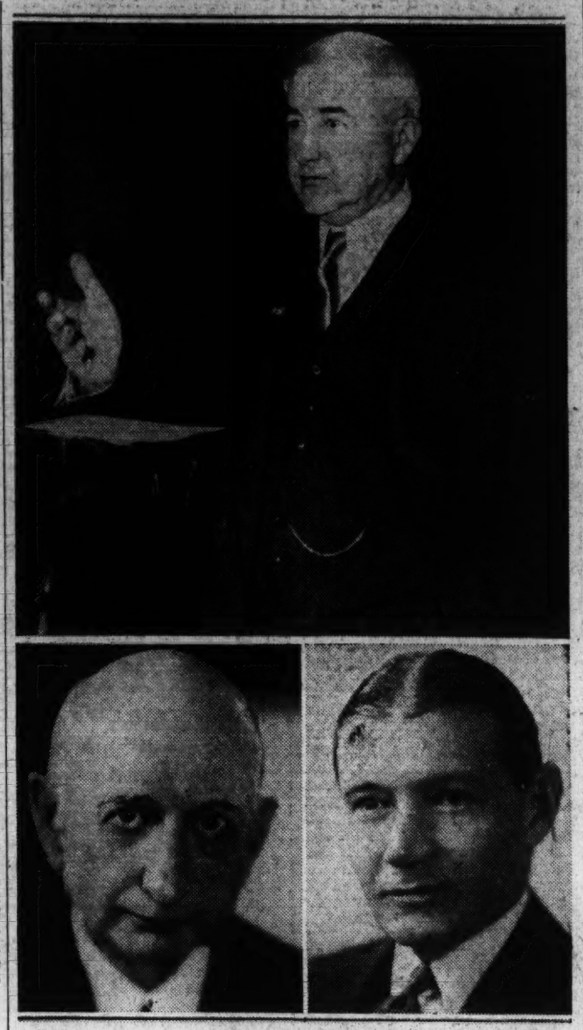
Views Bar Him Being New Deal Mainstay.

Accordingly, Lew Douglas is a bit of a tragedy. With a wider social outlook and a greater knowledge of economics—especially of the economic truth that currency is only one link between supply and demand—he would be one of the mainstays of the New Deal.

Compared with the rigid orthodoxy of Douglas, it is sad to contemplate the resiliency of the hard-money men who go along with the unrepentant "managed currency" boys without apparent qualms of conscience.

Conspicuous in this group are Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve System, that tall, lean, humorous Atlantan who was brought up from his job as governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta to act as temporary head of the reserve system, and Jesse H. Jones, one of Hoover's appointees to the RFC, a Texas Democrat, publisher, promoter, real estate owner, with more gumption than most of the people in the New Deal. He has gone along with Roosevelt, his eyes fixed hopefully on the Secretaryship of the Treasury. When Morgenthau was appointed, it hit him hard and he has never been the same since.

Black came into the picture by accident. When Eugene Meyer left the Federal Reserve Board shortly after Roosevelt came into office, it was hard to find a man to succeed him, it being only one of the many times that F. D. R. has had to apply the difficult formula of a man who possessed a technical knowledge of money and finance, who was independent of Wall street and would play ball with an Administration which was heretical on money matters. After hunting for weeks, he finally picked Gene Black, as a temporary appointment. Nine months later Black was still on the job as one of Roosevelt's most successful choices for a financial post. He is no world-beater in intelligence, but he possesses both common sense and good humor and he has played fair with Roosevelt.



Associated Press Photos.

Ease of Banker's Life Proved Alluring.

Tall and thin, with a large nose and big ears, he looks like Andy Gump and doesn't mind being told so. He is 60 years old, was admitted to the Atlanta bar and became an attorney for the Southern Railway. More than a decade ago he observed that banks closed in midafternoon and decided that it looked like an easy life befitting a Southern gentleman, suh! So he entered the banking business and became president of the Atlanta Trust Co., being elected governor of the Atlanta Reserve Bank in 1928. The fact that he was the son-in-law of the late editor of the powerful Atlanta Constitution may have helped.

He was popular in Atlanta and throughout the reserve district and when the depression hit, he continually asserted that the United States could not ballyhoo itself back to prosperity. Being blissfully ignorant of the close relationship between prices and debts, his homely recipe was for everybody to get out of debt. The attempt to do so, through deflation, produced the baffling paradox of a smaller debt load of greater weight than before it was reduced, due to the fall in prices.

Such Arcadian economics scarcely seem to qualify a man to be part of the New Deal, but Black has made his place. He has never been reluctant to state his point of view, to argue, to describe difficulties, to warn of dangers, but he has always been ready to do his best and has been a good-natured buffer between the Administration and the banker-dominated Federal Reserve System.

Where others have gone calamity-howling over the Administration's important monetary moves, Black has kept his head.

If Black suggests the Reconstruction Era, Jesse Jones suggests the six-shooting days of the old Southwest, another place where money was of comparatively small importance.

Jesse Jones Named To Job by Hoover.

Jones was one of Hoover's original appointees to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in February, 1932. A banker, promoter and go-getter, he was the sort of man Hoover would pick for such a job. But Jones could tell which way the wind was blowing, put himself in touch with Roosevelt during the 1932 campaign, and during the interregnum was Roosevelt's contact with the RFC. He and Roosevelt talked many times by long distance, and it was he who dashed South in mid-February and boarded the North-bound Roosevelt train in Georgia to tell him about the severity of the banking panic which was just beginning, Roosevelt having been at sea for two weeks on Vincent Astor's yacht.

In May, 1933, when there were only four members of the RFC left in office, Jones called the boys together and elected himself chairman. Roosevelt may have had some one else in mind for the job, but you have to move rapidly to beat Jones to any opportunity.

Like Black, he is 60 years old, and is a native of Tennessee. After a grade-school education he wandered to Texas and went into the lumber business in Dallas. He made a fortune and his real estate operations soon outran even the spacious Lone Star State, so that by the late twenties he was a big holder of office-building property in New York City. He was a millionaire many times over before the crash and even now must be the wealthiest man in the Roosevelt Administration.

By experience, Jesse Jones is a successful rugged individualist and by disposition he is a rock-ribbed conservative in economic matters. But he is an ambitious man and possesses an endless capacity for getting things done. He has a rough-and-ready contempt for the precise means to any desired end, which fits him psychologically for the New Deal's unorthodoxy. In its early days he was the most frequent telephone consultant at the White House, tried to get into the inner council and partially succeeded. He did what he was told and did it energetically.

Morgenthau Appointment Jolts Texas Titan.

While Acheson and the Treasury had the vapors over the gold purchase plan, Jones took it. He got an opinion written to show that the RFC had the power to sell its debentures for gold. He also took over the job of thawing out closed banks. The Treasury had worked out a lovely plan, but Lew Douglas tried to use it as a pawn in his game to force stabilization, saying that the Government could not afford to put out the necessary money unless the dollar was stabilized. Jones took over the whole thing in a flash. His plan was much more cumbersome, but he carried it on.

He was sailing along beautifully until Morgenthau was made Secretary of the Treasury. It was a big jolt to the Texas Titan, but he has come up smiling. He is big and hearty, strong as an ox and much more intelligent. He has plenty of shrewdness and some of his men in the RFC think he is one of the strongest men in the New Deal, in the sense that he has force and determination.

Jones runs the RFC as if there were no rules, no regulations, no precedents. Every case is an individual case which must be passed on by him in the last analysis. It is a one-man show. His staff is usually lost until Jesse says the word to go ahead. There are brainier men in the New Deal, but few brawnier ones and none busier.

Above all and behind all the monetary hurly-burly are the two financial wizards of the New Deal, Profs. Warren and Rogers, of Cornell and Yale, respectively, with their retinue of sorcerer's apprentices.

Chauffeur for Former Governor Held in Plot

Indianapolis, Feb. 22 (AP).—Herschell Cee, a Negro chauffeur employed by former Gov. James P. Goodrich, was arrested here today on a charge of attempting to kidnap Elmer Kerr, president of the Commercial Trust & Savings Bank of Union City, Ind.

Nathan Mendelhall, Randolph County prosecutor, announced tonight that Cee denied being guilty of conspiracy to kidnap Kerr, but admitted being a party to a conspiracy to rob. He said the charge probably will be changed to conspiracy to rob.

Better Air Mail Service Soon, Farley Promise

Administration Not to Be Deterred by Criticism, Says Postal Head.

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 22 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley tonight said the Administration, in its march to the goal of bringing "order out of chaos," will not be deterred by the criticisms of former leaders in Government who were "tried and found wanting."

In an address at a dinner given him by citizens of Savannah, Farley reviewed the work of the Roosevelt Administration and briefly referred to the cancellation of air-mail contracts as a move that would result in the elimination of "abuses which grew out of an unfair and stifling competition."

Better Mail Service.

He said a not very distant day would see in operation a better and more serviceable air-mail system, adding:

"It is the purpose of the Administration to see to it that the fruits of labor from now on are more equally divided, that the rights of property are adequately protected and that the rights of all the people are jealously guarded."

In reviewing the accomplishments of the Administration, Farley said "our foreign policy has changed the distrust, suspicion and, in some instances, disrespect of our neighboring peoples to confidence and understanding. We are in friendly accord with every nation."

"The President has adjusted and stabilized our currency," Farley said, "and has placed it once again on a firm foundation. Our banks have been made secure and money is beginning to flow in legitimate channels. But, more than that, the President has convinced the people of a need of a new social order and is bringing it about. * * *

Supports Constitution.

"President Roosevelt and Congress have thoughtfully mapped out a course for National recovery. The President has not, as some of his critics complain, sought to suspend the operation of the Constitution, for he knows that it is the foundation stone of our liberties and he will solemnly keep the oaths he made to support and defend it."

This afternoon, Farley was the guest of the Society of Cincinnati at its luncheon, and after the dinner tonight left for Durham, N. C., to dedicate a new postoffice building there tomorrow.

Nazis Planning To Encourage Nature Healers

Berlin (AP).—Medical circles are stirred by an announcement that the Nazi regime is considering granting licenses to 5,000 Naturheilpraktiker, or non-medical practitioners, as a feature of a sweeping medical reform being conducted under Nazi auspices.

At a medical meeting in Berlin, Dr. Gerhard Wagner, the new Nazi chief of the medical association, reprimanded German medical authorities for having "deplorably neglected" investigation into nature cures.

Ban Not Practicable.

"It is the fault of university medical faculties," he said, "that so many quack doctors have sprung up."

He described the Nazi ideal of therapy as a combination nature-cure and medical treatment method.

Dr. Wagner said: "There are more adherents to nature-healing methods than one would believe. A complete ban on nature doctors would not be practicable."

He suggested not that they be forbidden to practice but that the nation's medical men take a lesson from them.

"We must regain the ground lost to them during the past 10 years," he declared. "It is impossible to eliminate all nature-healers now."

To Eliminate Women.

Touching on women studying for the medical profession, he said: "Our aim is to eliminate women completely from medical studies."

Not only women but also bachelors would be hit by the reform.

Lower fees, Dr. Wagner revealed, are in store for them. In fact, the entire medical fee system would be scaled to matrimony and parenthood—a measure deeply significant to German medical life.

Dr. Wagner's statements indicated that more value is attached in the Third Reich to a doctor's marrying early and raising a family than to studying.

"The new medical study course will be shortened, permitting a man to practice and start a family at the age of 25," he said.

French Lose More Gold; Believe Drain Near End

Paris, Feb. 22 (AP).—Heavy withdrawals of gold continued to drain the great Bank of France hoard today, but officials said they believed the heavy purchases are nearing the end.

Nearly 500,000,000 francs were withdrawn the week ended February 16, as compared with 2,000,000,000 the previous week.

Ackerman Says U. S. Is Opposed to Dictator

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism, said today that the American people do not want a dictator.

"The American trend is toward centralized direction," he said, "but not as yet toward autocratic control." Ackerman was speaking at the annual communion breakfast of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Bill Abolishing Virginia Realty Board Favored

Committee Sends Measure to Floor Despite Protest From Medley.

By Doug Warenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Protests by Delegate William D. Medley, Arlington County, were unavailing today as the House general laws committee indorsed a bill to abolish the Virginia Real Estate Commission.

Mr. Medley reported he had been urged to fight for retention of the board by Charles W. Smith, Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board president.

"The board," he declared, "keeps the Virginia real estate business on a high plane and prevents certain unscrupulous dealers in Washington from obtaining licenses to do business in the State. We should close the doors to crooks."

The Arlington delegate explained he knew there were many reputable D. C. realtors, but insisted there were some operators in the District guilty of sharp practices. He added pending legislation to purge Washington of such salesmen might cause them to flock into Virginia should the board go out of existence.

$1,000 License Minimum.

Delegate Charles W. Moss, author, defended the proposal to abolish the commission, which he said had outlived its usefulness.

Mr. Medley, however, was more successful before the finance committee, where he obtained favorable action on his bill to lower exemptions for licensing independent building and plumbing contractors.

The measure would require payment of fees by all contractors doing $1,000 or more worth of work each year. The previous minimum was $5,000. Fees between $1,000 and $5,000 would be $5 a year. All over $5,000 would be $10.

The Senate passed a measure which would allow the highway commission to spend gasoline tax funds in maintaining as well as constructing roads.

Rum Revenue Doubtful.

Published reports that discovery of $500,000 in potential "additional" revenue would practically solve the controversy over imposition of new taxes were discredited by well-informed State officials.

The new money, anticipated liquor revenue for the remainder of the fiscal year, probably will fail to materialize because of outlays necessary to place in operation a State dispensary system.

A sub-commission of the House counties, cities and towns committee was named to consider a new Staunton charter. Brisk objection was raised by Staunton residents at a public hearing.

Gov. Peery yesterday signed the Senate bill authorizing the State highway commission to add the proposed 300 miles mountain-top highway from Carmen's Gap near Waynesboro to the North Carolina line, to the State highway system.

The bill also allows the commission to transfer the highway to the Federal Government and to sign an agreement for its maintenance.

Felony Penalties Raised.

The Senate courts of justice committee reported favorably the Scott bill increasing punishment for conspiracy in cases of arson, murder and larceny. The committee also set for special hearing next Wednesday the Hobson compulsory trial justice bill which has been passed by the House of Delegates.

The House prisons and asylums committee reported the Dan Coleman bill providing that no one may be a member of the State hospital board who is interested in a private sanitarium or has a member of his immediate family interested in a private sanitarium. The same committee reported also the Moffett bill, calling for the sterilization of persons affected with insanity, epilepsy of feeblemindedness.

Child Home Aided From Hardy Estate

West Virginian Also Left Legacy to Church.

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). The Star of Hope Child Refuge at Burlington, Mineral County, was bequeathed $20,000 by J. Z. Hardy, who died at his home in this county three weeks ago. His estate was estimated at nearly $1,000,000.

Other bequests included $1,000 to the Baptist Cemetery at Three Churches, this county; $1,000 for Ebenezer Church; $10,000 to Miss Anna E. Hardy, with all household goods at the property in Augusta, this county, and a tract of timber near Augusta; $10,000 to Mrs. Margaret P. Michael.

The remainder of the estate is to be divided among the heirs-at-law. Mrs. A. E. Barnes, a sister; Miss Anna Hardy, a niece, and Perry L. Michael, a son-in-law, qualified as administrators.

Accused Sheriff Given 4 Months

Jailer Also Convicted in Escape of Prisoners.

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Judge George W. McClintic in Federal Court here today sentenced Sheriff J. C. Fanning, of Mercer County, to serve four months in the Federal Reformatory at Lee Hall, Va. for "gross negligence" in the escape of two Federal prisoners.

Charles W. Thornton, former jailer, was found guilty of similar charges and was required to appear June 18 for sentence. A stay was granted Fanning for an appeal.

The prisoners, William Mullens and William R. Albert, escaped from the Mercer County Jail last August. Albert was recaptured a few days ago, but Mullens is still a fugitive.

Dog Carries 300 Dozen Eggs Home in 3 Years, Breaks Only 3

Pal, 7-year-old American pit bull, with his master, P. F. Dudrow, of Frederick, Md. Mr. Dudrow has taught Pal to do the family marketing and for three years the dog has been carrying his bundles. This week Pal delivered his 300th dozen of eggs, having broken only three eggs in all his trips.

Frederick Pet Important Factor in Family's Marketing.

By Marion Butler.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 22.—A black and white bulldog, known to all Frederick residents as "Pal," picked his way through crowded streets here the other day and deposited a brown paper sack at its owner's door. It contained the 300th dozen of eggs which Pal has delivered safely in the last three years.

Ever since its owner, P. F. Dudrow, taught the dog to carry delicate objects without breaking them, it has been Pal's duty to go marketing. Grocers are used to handing packages to the American pit bull that waits so patiently at their counters. The bag is folded so Pal can get a good grip on it, then he is off on his cautious journey. He has broken only three eggs in three years.

Baby chicks, rabbits, and even a parrot have been on Pal's transportation lists. Not long ago, he appointed himself guardian of four kittens, carrying them about town in a basket, permitting people to look at them, but protecting them carefully.

Once Mrs. Dudrow took Pal to Market, but forgot to hand him the customary bundle. When she arrived home she found Pal was carrying a can of beans picked from a display stack.

Weighing more than 50 pounds, the dog is a formidable looking animal. But his gentle ways and tricks have delighted Frederick children for seven years. He knows right from left and will "shake hands" with whichever paw a person requests. Mr. Dudrow's sons have taught him to play football and to tackle in approved fashion. And he delivers the family newspaper each night, waiting for the carrier boy at the end of the block.

In winter Pal is to be seen promenading Frederick streets in spectacles and a brown derby. When spring arrives, he is careful to follow fashion with a jaunty straw. But his favorite accessory is an old briar pipe upon which he chews complacently in any season.

Measles Epidemic Lay Middies Low

25 Are Stricken; Guard Against Spread.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—An outbreak of measles has developed at the Naval Academy, it was learned today, and officials are taking every precaution to guard against an epidemic.

Twenty-five midshipmen are thus far afflicted, it is stated.

New Deal Fits In Constitution, Barkley States

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). That the New Deal strictly conforms to the spirit of the Constitution as our forefathers conceived it was the idea set forth by Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, in an address here tonight celebrating the restoration of Williamsburg.

Senator Barkley said Americans do not believe in a static government, and that "the very fact that Washington and Jefferson and Hamilton and John Marshall and all of those who labored with them to establish a new order of things were willing to break away from a loyalty which they cherished, demonstrated that they did not believe in a static government. They gave America its first New Deal in its history."

He contended that those who invoke Jefferson's "the least government is the best government," isolating this piece of phraseology from its context, actually overlook Jefferson's own political ideal. Senator Barkley said that we must not fear for the welfare of the Nation simply because we are trying some new theories and remedies "that our forefathers could not visualize because of the simplicity of their society."

It was the contention of Senator Barkley that our Constitution has enough elasticity to be adapted to the changing times, and that such is its true spirit. As an example, he showed how it had been a necessity to regulate commerce among States if the Nation was to become "more than a mere confederation."

Considering the complexity of the present problems, Americans still have as much liberty as they can reasonably enjoy, the Senator said.

Maryland K. C. Will Rebuild First Catholic Chapel in State

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.). Lee Ward, head of the Knights of Columbus of Maryland, is sponsoring plans which may lead to the restoration of the first Catholic chapel built in Maryland. Units over the State will be asked to aid. The foundations of this chapel, completed in 1638, were recently discovered on St. Mary's Manor, the property of Mrs. J. Spence Howard and Mrs. James Bennett at St. Marys City. The foundations are near the present site of the memorial State House of 1676, now being reconstructed here on land donated by Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Bennett from the same estate.

To help raise funds for the restoration of this chapel, a mass breakfast will be given at the Hotel St. Mary's here March 4 by the local Knights of Columbus Chapter. Speakers will be the Rev. J. Sheridan Knight, S. J., rector of St. Aloysius Church here, and the Rev. J. Bernard, S. J., rector of St. George's Church, Valley Lee.

Retired Coast Guard Captain Found Dead

Currituck, N. C., Feb. 22 (AP). Capt. Humphries Lewark, 60, of Corolla Coast Guardsmen, who was retired four years ago, was found dead last night two miles north of Poyner's Hill Coast Guard Station by a searching party which set out after his horse had returned home at dusk riderless.

Death was believed due to a heart attack.

Hall Seeking Early Report On Liquor Bill

Virginia Delegate Analyzes Senate Changes in Rum Measure.

Richmond, Feb. 22 (AP).—Laboring longer than he had expected over the Senate amendments to the Virginia alcoholic beverage control bill, Delegate Wilbur Hall tonight said he hoped to report to the House tomorow the scope of the upper house changes in the bill.

Mr. Hall, who engineered the bill through the lower house was assigned the task of examining the bill as it passed the Senate this week, and tonight said he had not definitely decided whether he would recommend a conference committee or suggest the House concur in the Senate amendments.

Most of the amendments put on the bill in the upper house were not of a controversial nature, but Mr. Hall said "three or four of them were of the highest importance."

Assembly Far Behind.

The Assembly today was working in great haste with the realization that only 11 more working days remain in the session.

Of the controversial matters which faced the Legislature at the beginning of the session, Congressional redistricting is the only major one disposed of so far. Still ahead is the liquor bill, setting up a State monopoly dispensary system, the governor's tax program for public schools, the budget bill and others.

Final action on the liquor bill is expected within the next few days. The tax program is scheduled for House consideration next week. The House appropriations committee spent many hours with the budget bill today in the hope of reporting this week.

Calendar Crowded.

Both Houses were convened today with huge calendars. The House calendar contained 40 pages and the Senate 20.

The Moffett-Quesenbery bill allowing introduction of evidence in mitigation of damages in suits against publishers for defamation, as amended by the courts of justice committee, was advanced to third reading by the House, which advanced to engrossment, and third reading of 21 other measures.

The Senate set as a special order for Tuesday the Montague resolution for an amendment to the Federal Constitution prohibiting child labor, and passed Rogers' bill allowing the highway commission to use gas-tax funds for maintenance of the State's road system. Senator Rogers introduced the bill as a means of protecting the primary system against a shortage of maintenance funds which he said may result from the reduction of the automobile license tax recommended by Gov. Peery.

Fort Monroe Gets New Sewage Plant

$85,000 Provided Jointly by PWA and CWA.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 22 (AP). Funds supplied jointly by the Public Works and Civil Works Administrations will provide a sewage disposal plant which is being constructed at Fort Monroe at a cost of $85,000.

The project carries out the announced intention of the post authorities to cooperate in the movement for elimination of pollution in Hampton Roads.

Hagerstown Area Grading Approved

19 School Projects Given County Backing.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.). The county board of education has approved 19 school grading projects, most being now under way.

The CWA projects will cost $50,000. Many of the school yards were in such bad condition pupils were unable to use them as playgrounds. The largest project is the grading of an athletic field at Williamsport at a cost of $6,627.

No Sting

Goats Rout Bees From Sugar Warehouse.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—A herd of 200 goats is keeping bees away from sugar stored in the Southgate Terminals under Government bonded regulations, G. A. Treakle, terminal superintendent, said today. He said before the goats arrived millions of bees swarmed around the sugar and many workers in the warehouse were stung.

Treakle said the herd started with three goats. Then five others strayed in from some place and now there are 200.

There are all kinds of goats of all colors. During the cold weather when bees are not so plentiful, the goats spend most of their time devouring weeds growing around the warehouse. It is estimated that the goats have saved much sugar and have protected employes from being stung.

Hall Addresses Virginia Group On Washington

Kenmore Reception Held; Leesburg Legion Celebrates.

By Herbert Baus.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 22.—Adherence to the three principles laid down by George Washington—freedom from international entanglements, preparation for war to insure peace, and integrity in international dealings, with caution against the dissemblance of other nations—today was declared the wisest policy President Roosevelt could employ to steer the Nation through the world crisis by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, before a meeting here of more than 200 persons.

Several hundred persons from Washington and Virginia gathered today at Kenmore, former home of Col. Fielding and Betty Washington Lewis, to attend the reception by the Kenmore Association in celebration of Washington's birthday anniversary.

Four descendants of the colonel and Washington's only sister served tea. They were Mrs. Frank Taylor, Mrs. Stella Dickinson, Mrs. Carter Grimes and Miss Ellen Knox.

Leesburg Post Celebrates.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). Commemorating the anniversary of George Washington's birthday, Loudoun Post, No. 34, American Legion, held its annual banquet this evening.

Maj. Gen. Thomas Q. Ashburn was the guest speaker. More than 100 veterans attended. James Di Zerega is commander of the local post.

Annapolis Takes Holiday.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.). The National salute of 21 guns was fired from the shore battery at the Naval Academy at noon, ships assigned to the station were in "full dress" and National flags were displayed throughout the city, to mark Washington's birthday.

The day was a holiday for public and private schools, the Naval Academy and St. Johns College. Senior midshipmen who were granted overnight liberty yesterday returned to the academy tonight.

College Notes Day.

The connection of George Washington with the 152-year-old college was traced and attention called to the fact that he received the degree of doctor of laws here in 1789.

Washington gave 50 guineas of gold to the first endowment fund of the school and was a member of its first board of governors.

School Fete in Berwyn.

An entertainment is planned tonight in the Berwyn (Md.) School for the benefit of improvements in the fifth-grade room. There will be singing by Alfio Carta, with Miss Leona Parks as accompanist, and movies and entertainment by the pupils.

3,000 to Lose Virginia CWA Berths Today

Jobs Ended Under Order Cutting Non-Federal Pay Roll.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—Orders to reduce the civil works pay roll in Virginia to 45,000 will result in the discharge of some 3,000 workers on non-Federal projects tomorrow, State Administrator William A. Smith announced today.

Figures compiled by Mr. Smith showed 48,000 persons are employed on such projects in the State.

The order affects only non-Federal projects. An order to discontinue work on a large majority of Federal projects will result in the discharge tomorrow of 9,000 of the 12,000 now employed. Many of these, however, are expected to be returned to work under the plan to transfer Federal projects to State projects wherever possible.

Thus the total reduction will be 12,000 rather than 15,000 originally estimated.

The State public works advisory board today received an application from the Albemarle County School Board for a grant of $1,800 to be used toward construction of a teachers' home at Crozet.

The application said inability of teachers to obtain satisfactory homes makes the project necessary.

Hoboes Ousted After Brawls

Transients Are Blamed for Disorder at Montevue Home for Aged.

Middletown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.). Owing to recent drunken brawls among transients housed at Montevue, Frederick County Home for the Aged near Frederick, during which Supt. James A. Jones charged that indigent inmates were attacked, a number of the hoboes have been transferred to the CWA home at Brunswick.

Mr. Jones threatened to resign unless the county commissioners stopped housing hoboes at the county home.

So far 16 transients have been transferred from Frederick to Brunswick and others are to be sent there within the next few days.

Several weeks ago, Brunswick residents complained to the mayor and council of the conduct of the men at the home and asked for proper police protection. Since that time conditions have improved somewhat, but the home officials say fights are still plentiful among the hoboes. Deputy Sheriff Charles W. C. Smith has been assigned to maintain order.

Peery Commutes Death Sentence

Life Is Given Man Who Killed Policeman.

Richmond, Feb. 22 (AP).—The death sentence for James Clinton, Negro, who killed Vernon Wilson Jones, officer of the Town of Franklin, in 1932, was commuted to life imprisonment today by Gov. Peery.

Clinton was to die in the electric chair here March 23.

The Governor extended clemency when he received a letter from Judge James L. McLemore, who tried the case in Southampton Circuit Court, in which the trial judge said he felt that a request for commutation of sentence should be given "very serious consideration." Judge McLemore said he believed from the evidence that Clinton shot Jones "in an effort to get away rather than as a result of malice."

West Virginia Mine Explosion Kills 4

96 Escape; Bodies Taken Out Through Gas.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.) Fighting through dangerous fumes, rescue crews today recovered the bodies of four miners burned to death in an explosion in the Glen Rogers Mine of the Raleigh-Wyoming Mining Co., in Wyoming County, 60 miles from Charleston.

Near the bottom of the 700-foot shaft the rescuers found the bodies of Dewey Smith, 25, and Alva Smith, 19, cousins, and a quarter of a mile farther, William Gray, 50, and W. H. Brannon, 33. Gray only was married.

One hundred miners were at work when the explosion occurred last night. The shaft bottom was damaged, but 96 men reached the surface before the deadly "black damp" filled the mine.

Anne Arundel Residents Aid Starved Birds

Wild Fowl Become Tame in Seeking Grain and Water.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Scores of Anne Arundel County farmers and urban residents are engaged in feeding wild fowl and game.

The bitter cold and a heavy blanket of snow on the ground for more than two weeks, has caused the birds to become tame and approach haunts they would not otherwise visit, in search of food. Many birds have been found starved and frozen.

Wild ducks flocked to local waters in greater numbers than for years, and with the several rivers hereabouts jammed by ice, their feeding grounds have been hemmed in.

Many sportsmen have cut open spaces in the ice and distributed large quantities of grain. The better species of ducks, canvasback, ringnecks and blackheads, have flocked to local waters by thousands, and hunters feel that their efforts have saved the lives of many.

Another large flock has been near the Naval Academy sea wall for the past week and men at the reservation feed them regularly.

$50,000 Theft Laid To Bank Official

West Virginian, 72, Held in Defalcation.

Mannington, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—West Virginia's first alleged banking defalcation case under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation system has been revealed here. W. H. Parsons, 72, assistant cashier of the First Exchange Bank, was arrested and taken to Fairmont for grand jury action on a charge of defaulting his accounts for $50,000.

A statement by Judge L. S. Schwenck, of Fairmont, the bank's attorney, says that while the exact amount of the alleged shortage has not been determined, it is not large enough to endanger the bank.

The bank is the only financial institution at Mannington. It is a merger of the old First National Bank and the Exchange Bank of Mannington.

ing speculation "within reasonable bounds," Counsel Ferdinand Pecora, of the Senate Banking Committee, on the other side of the Capitol summoned three leading industrialists to appear today before the Fletcher committee.

Walter C. Teagle, of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; Henry L. Doherty, of the Cities Service Corporation, and Alfred P. Sloan, of General Motors, were the scheduled witnesses. They will be questioned on huge call loans used in Wall street for speculative purposes.

Before the House committee, Mr. Whitney, immaculately dressed, easy of speech and patiently attentive to every question, was frequently interrupted by members, some of whom took issue with his assault on the pending bill, while others inquired of alleged stock exchange expenditure of thousands of dollars for "propaganda," as charged by Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee.

He denied the allegations. When Representative Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, read copies of a telegram to every committee member charging the exchange is sending $2,000,000 to Washington to stop stock exchange regulation, he declared:

"There is no truth in that at all."

He said the telegrams were sent out by a security dealer who is suing the stock exchange for $60,000,000.

Warns Against Charges.

Turning to the stock regulatory bills now pending in Senate and House committees, the New York Stock Exchange executive warned committee members sharp changes and marginal requirements and brokers' credit "might affect the entire credit system."

"This is due to the fact that in an effort to prevent any evasion of the restrictions on margin accounts contained in the bill, similar restrictions have been placed on loans made through banks and other persons," he said.

He complained the bill directly affects all companies listing their securities upon a National exchange by requiring them to submit registration statements.

Speaking, he said, for the "investing public," he added:

"To the extent that this bill seeks to regulate exchanges to the point where it will destroy the free and open market for securities, the liquidity of the one form of investment that has remained liquid throughout the depression, will certainly be impaired if not entirely destroyed."

Offering the New York Stock Exchange's substitute plan for supervising security markets, he outlined proposals for "control" of pools and unwarranted stock activity by the "coordinating authority." This contrasted with the flat prohibition against pool operations laid down in the Fletcher-Rayburn bill.

Would Prevent Fraud.

He claimed his plan would accomplish the threefold purpose of preventing fraudulent practices affecting stock exchange transactions, barring the use of excessive credit for stock exchange speculation and eliminating practices "which, though not fraudulent, permit the manipulation of security prices."

Powers Proposed for Body.

He said the proposed stock exchange coordinating authority should have power:

To fix requirements for listing securities.

To control pools, syndicates and joint accounts, and also options intended or used to influence market prices.

To control circulation of rumors or statements of customers' men or employes who solicit business.

To study and adopt rules regulating cases where one man operates as broker and dealer.

To adopt rules regulating short selling "if it should become convinced that regulation of this practice is necessary."

"The most important question in regard to any regulatory legislation is the detremination of what body should exercise the regulatory power," he told the committee.

"Obviously this body, whether it be called a commission or an authority, must include persons who are familiar with credit conditions throughout the United States and also persons who are fully conversant with the technical problems connected with the operation of stock exchanges."

Spectators packing the small committee room listened attentively as Mr. Whitney defended "a certain amount of" speculation as necessary to provide a liquid market for legitimate investors, expressed a wish that "the little fellows would keep out of the market," or denied the stock exchange benefits from "evil practices."

Johnson Will Not 'Crack Down' If Critics Meet Specifications

Hearings Next Week to Deal With Facts, but no Theories.

By Raymond Clapper.

If critics of NRA who attend the general field day for criticism beginning next Tuesday stay within the specifications, they need have no fear that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson will crack down on them with the rough epithets he has hurled at cantankerous Senators and other notable fault-finders.

NRA officials emphasized last night that within the prescribed range the most frank criticism will be welcomed in the spirit in which it is offered.

It is hoped at NRA that the public, which is invited to bring its criticisms to Washington next week and the code authorities who are invited to come the following week will understand that Gen. Johnson wants to find out what is wrong with NRA policies and administration in detail.

Likes Criticism.

In some quarters an impression had grown up that Gen. Johnson resented criticism. When the Federal Reserve Board Bulletin some months ago pointed out that there had been declines in industries which were under NRA codes, Gen. Johnson sought to have the statement changed. When Senators Borah and Nye charged NRA was fostering monopolistic practices, Gen. Johnson called them professional dialecticians and side-line tom-tom beaters. Professional critics writing second or third-hand comment, he compared to Correspondence School Cowboys.

Actually, Gen. Johnson is a strong advocate of the policy of self-criticism. It is a necessary check when broad discretionary powers are being employed. As soon as Soviet Russia stamped out all political opposition and therefore political criticism, it was found desirable to encourage introspection. Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rex Tugwell has expounded the necessity of such self-criticism during the present period of experiment in the United States.

Johnson's Specifications.

Gen. Johnson has outlined specifications for all who wish to come to Washington for the great ringside physical examination of little NIRA.

"These public meetings are solely for the purpose of obtaining in the most direct manner the facts useful to the administrator," Johnson said, in his invitation for the general public meetings. "No arguments will be heard or considered at this time."

At the public meetings, it was explained, all persons will be regarded as witnesses and shall present orally facts only and not argument. Written briefs or arguments may be filed, but oral statements will be confined to factual statements only.

The agenda for meetings of both the general public and the code authorities is as follows:

Employment: Possibilities of increasing employment; wages and hours; comparative situation of capital goods and consumer goods industries.

Views on Trade Practices.

Trade Practices: Costs and prices; protection against destructive competition, and against excessive prices and monopolistic tendencies; control of production; limitation of machine hours; restriction of expansion of facilities; ethical practices.

Code Authority Organization: Code administration, including compliance and enforcement; inequalities, inconsistencies and overlapping in codes; interindustry and intercode coordination; financing of code administration; use and control of the Code Eagle.

Kind Not Wanted.

The kind of criticism not wanted was outlined by Gen. Johnson in an address earlier this week:

"NRA is a law for the common good and any man who seeks to undermine the common confidence in such a law—not by argument or statement of fact, but by unsupported abuse of men or arbitrary and unproved assertions—any such man is an enemy of the common good.

"At no stage has NRA obscured its actions or repelled criticism. It has operated in the open as no other administration ever did before. It now inaugurates a field day for criticism from any one who has a word to say, but I may as well remark here and now that it will not receive unsupported personal assaults and it will accept only for what they are worth academic conjectures not backed by facts as to what may—or may not—be the effect of this or that provision in a code."

Visitors also will do well to avoid the term "ballyhoo," in describing NRA efforts to enlist public support, because they will be quickly corrected. "Educational campaign" is a better term.

To Talk Price Fixing.

Out of the welter of discussion much attention will be directed to the price-posting provisions in some 90 codes. These require all firms under a code authority to file current and future prices.

Consumer champions have condemned this as encouraging profiteering and monopolistic practices. They assert it has been used by large industries dominating some code authorities to club smaller ones into holding up prices. Defenders in NRA assert it has been aimed to prevent destructive price-cutting which has demoralized many industries in the past. But controversy became so bitter that the provisions have been suspended temporarily until the policy can be thoroughly reconsidered.

Charges have been made by Senators Borah and Nye that the code authorities which are the direct controlling bodies over various industrial groups are dominated by representatives of the bigger concerns and that they are administering the codes in a way to snuff out weaker independents. One answer from the NRA is that on the contrary such provisions as those abolishing "loss leaders" have stopped the chain stores, for instance, from selling below cost in a way to drive independents out of business.

New Stage in NRA.

Underlying the coming discussions is the definite thought in Gen. Johnson's mind that NRA has reached a new stage when the hasty work of the early months must now be carefully rechecked and corrected. There is little doubt but that he believes the NRA experiment destined to continue permanently either in its present or in modified form and that its long range future will depend considerably upon how effective it can be made to operate within the next year or so.

The 300 codes now in effect cover 90 per cent of industry. Some 350 more now in preparation will complete the first stage of economic planning for concerted action by industry and labor under Governmental sanction.

Thus far NRA has been chiefly concerned with industry and labor. The consumer has been somewhat of a bystander. NRA has a consumers' advisory board, but it has been pretty much of a stepchild in among the clashing industrial giants and hard-headed labor leaders. Gen. Johnson does insist, however, that the consumer in his capacity as an employe has benefited. He asserts 3,000,000 men and women have been put to work and that $3,000,000,000 has been added to their purchasing power. But consumer critics say that the wages have been taken back through unreasonably high prices. It is expected that consumer groups will take this opportunity to muscle in on a broad guage experiment in which they feel they have participated largely as spectators up to now.

Before the procession started from the palace more than 30,000 Belgian war veterans who fought side by side with Albert in the World War, marched, unarmed, past the coffin.

Twelve grenadiers earlier had borne the body to a flag-draped catafalque in the palace courtyard, while thousands of onlookers sank sadly to their knees. The misty air was heavy with the fragrance of lilacs.

The veterans carried the colors of Belgium, the United States, Great Britain and Italy in their slow, solemn march.

Procession to Cathedral.

At 10:15 a. m. procession to Saint Gudule Cathedral started.

Mounted gendarmes and guides were first in the cortege. Then came British, Italian, Belgian and French troops, their flags draped in crepe; clergymen and a cavalry officer bearing Albert's personal colors and the horse-drawn carriage on which rested the flag-wrapped bier.

Crown Prince Leopold and Prince Charles followed their father's body. With them was their brother-in-law, Prince Umberto of Italy.

Then the brilliantly-attired foreign delegations, including President Lebrun of France, the Prince of Wales, King Boris III of Bulgaria, Crown Prince Gustav Adolf of Sweden, Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, Prince Henry of Holland. Prince Felix of Luxemburg, Prince Nicholas of Rumania and Prince Carl of Sweden, the Father of Crown Princess Astrid.

Directly behind them were the foreign diplomats—including Ambassador Morris of the United States—the provincial governors, representatives of learned bodies, and other civilian groups.

Guns Boom Salute.

At one-minute intervals guns boomed a doleful salute. These, the sobs of those who lined the route, and the sound of marching men and horses alone broke the silence.

Princess Astrid will motor from the Laeken castle to the House of Parliament tomorrow for the enthronement of her husband. A delegation from both Houses of Parliament will greet her and conduct her to a special throne in the Chamber of Deputies.

Leopold's first act as king will be to read an address from the throne outlining his program. A reply from Parliament will subsequently be read as a matter of form. It will review events in previous reigns and convey good wishes to the new ruler.

The ceremony is expected to take only a few minutes. Afterward Leopold will ride over a devious route to the royal palace in Brussels so he can visit each district.

agreement on the changes made in the House bill by the Senate.

What the President will do about the bill is now disturbing friends of the employes. House leaders said they had received no word on the subject. Senate leaders have suggested the possibility of a veto if the Administration "five-and-five" program is defeated. Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who has had charge of the bill, hinted at the possibility of a veto. Opposing the McCarran amendment in debate Senator Byrnes said the Senate could feel fairly certain that the President would accept the five-and-five rate.

Dance Partners to Be Selected Scientifically

Montreal (U.P.). — A committee whose task will be to select dance partners for bashful students along scientific lines has been organized by first-year class officers at the McGill University.

The committee not only guarantees to find dance partners, but also is willing to certify that such partners will be sure to please. The matching is not to be left to chance. It will only be done after each partner's qualifications and attributes have been carefully checked. Then a tongue-tied freshman will find himself in company with a voluble freshette, and vice versa.

This Pig Answered "Her Master's Voice"

Billings, Mont. (U.P.).—"Her master's voice" proved irresistible to a hog near here. It happened like this:

A few days ago Hoerr entered a hog-calling contest over a local radio station. He stood before the microphone and trumpeted, "S-o-o-ey, s-o-o-o-o-e-y, so-so-so-soey."

Suddenly there was a commotion in the Anderson farmyard. A sow rammed through a fence and, followed by all her litter, waddled toward the radio in the farmhouse. Only the timely intervention of Anderson saved his household from destruction.

Many Minors Involved In Hunting Accidents

Montgomery, Ala. (U.P.).—Twelve of the 27 hunting accidents which have occurred in Alabama since the hunting season opened in October have resulted fatally. Nine of these took the lives of minors. Many other accidents were caused by the careless handling of firearms by youngsters.

The State of Alabama in the Game and Fish News says, "We should like to see every boy trained in the proper use and handling of firearms by a capable instructor. A boy can not learn these by himself without the danger of disastrous experience."

Connecticut Mayor Dislikes Tiny Office

Bristol, Conn. (U.P.). — Mayor Joseph F. Dutton is dissatisfied with his "little cubby hole" of an office and, in an address before the Women's Club, urged members to use their influence to get him larger quarters

The prestige of the city "is suffering by the failure to provide more adequate quarters than the little cubby hole which does the duty as office of the mayor," he declared.

Beer Low in Montana And 'Growler' Returns

Helena, Mont. (U.P.).—Simewhat behind the march of events which saw first 3.2 beer and then "hard" liquor legalized, the good old "growler" has come into its own again in Montana.

Attorneys have interpreted Montana's newly revised beer bill to allow transportation of beer from retailers' establishments in quantities not to exceed five gallons. A growler, or beer pail, holds about one-half gallon.

French City Scoffs At German Claim

Colmar, France (U.P.).—The Alsatian town of Colmar is fighting to retain possession of an art treasure which has belonged to the town for more than 400 years, against what it terms the "impudence of Germans" who claim it for their own.

The object of the controversy is the Issenheim alter screen, one of the masterpieces of Renaissance art done in 1515 by the Alsatian artist Mathias Grunewald. The screen consists of nine panels and was done for an Antonite convent. It has been in the Unterlinden Museum of Colmar since its completion, except for one occasion in 1916 when the retreating German Army took it across the Rhine to Munich. It was restored in 1918 due to certain stipulations of the Treaty of Versailles, backed by the insistence of the citizens of Colmar.

A recent edition of the Frankfurter Zeitung published an article quoting German authorities as insisting that this masterpiece of "German Art" be returned to Munich, and the town of Colmar is in arms.

Ocean Battle Fails to Deter Deering Cruise

One of Crew Overboard, Yacht Battered, but 19 Will Resume.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Despite their experience in a storm off the Virginia coast, during which one was lost and the vessel battered, all but two of the crew of the auxiliary yacht Uvira will make a cruise to Central America on the ship.

The yacht, towed here by the Coast Guard cutter Pontchartrain, is undergoing repairs. She had 21 in her crew, but Robert Keuchenmeister, Chicago, brother of Hubert Keuchenmeister, who was washed overboard in the storm, and Nicholas Di Violi, a photographer, said they had had enough and left the vessel.

Jackson K. Deering, Chicago millionaire owner of the yacht, says when the vessel leaves here next week she will proceed to Miami where William Barvour, jr., Detroit, and Howard Kresge, son of the chain store magnate, will join them and make the cruise to Central America. The vessel will also take aboard instruments to be used in underwater experiments.

Mrs. Deering and Miss Margaret Howse, of Chicago, who were on the Uvira when she was caught in the storm, have gone to Miami by rail. Mrs. Deering is expected to board the vessel again at that place, but Miss Howse says she is not certain whether she will go on the cruise.

The damage sustained by the yact is said to aggregate $14,000. Much of her interior furnishings were badly damaged.

Steamer Damaged At Norfolk Dock

Sudden Gale Causes Loss Estimated at $12,000.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—The German steamer Lasbek today went to the Norfolk Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co.'s plant for repairs after six plates were dented by crashing against the Tidewater Terminal's dock.

The Lasbek was discharging sugar when a sudden northwest blow came up. She was unprotected from the blow and the waves hurled her repeatedly against the concrete. The wind was so severe the vessel could not get out of the dock, and she was obliged to remain at the pier and take her beating.

Damages are estimated at $12,000.

J. V. Cogbill Named U. S. Attorney's Aid

Chesterfield Lawyer Will Qualify Wednesday.

Richmond, Feb. 22 (AP).—John V. Cogbill, of Chesterfield County, has been appointed assistant United States district attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia, it was announced today.

Mr. Cogbill is expected to qualify before Judge Luther B. Way in Norfolk next Wednesday.

He is a graduate of McGuire's School of Richmond and of Randolph-Macon College, Ashland. He studied law at Washington and Lee University and has been practicing here and in Chesterfield since 1922.

Convicts to Work On State's Farms

Moundsville, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—As one means of giving idle convicts at the penitentiary something to do and also to relieve prison congestion, the State Board of Control has evolved a plan to put them at work on farms of various State institutions.

About 50 convicts will be taken to the farm at the State training school for mental defectives at Bradley.

Most of the convicts have been rendered idle by abandonment of prison factories. The Hawes-Cooper act forbids the shipment of prison-made goods in interstate commerce.

Frederick County CWA Drops 325

Middletown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.). In compliance with orders from Harry L. Hopkins, Civil Works administrator, 325 CWA employes were dropped from the pay roll in Frederick County today.

Officials stated the county quota must be cut to 736 men, and it is necessary to discharge a certain number from every project.

They are endeavoring to retain men with families in need.

House Rejects Rum Monopoly Straight Repeal

West Virginia Delegates Refuse Necessary Two-Thirds Vote.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). By a vote of 48 to 42 the House of Delegates today rejected the State monopoly liquor plan and also defeated a proposal for absolute prohibition repeal by 55 to 35.

Both measures required a two-thirds majority to pass and both were designed to replace a measure adopted at a previous session, submitting prohibition repeal to the people at the next election.

A House roll call was taken late yesterday on the monopoly plan, previously passed by the Senate, but announcement of the vote was held over until today.

Repeal Vote Hanging Fire.

Straight repeal had been banging fire for weeks on a motion to reconsider a vote by which it had previously been rejected. The existing repeal proposal contains a saloon-barring clause. Reconsideration was permitted by the Governor's call for the present extraordinary session.

Both branches of the Legislature today adopted a House resolution inviting Gov. H. G. Kump to appear before a joint session at 10 a. m. tomorrow and suggest a plan for untangling revenue difficulties. He was asked to discuss the requirements for new revenues and to submit recommendations.

Lubliner Opposes Move.

The resolution, introduced by Delegate Edgar E. Righter (Democrat), Harrison, was opposed by Delegate A. J. Lubliner (Democrat), Mercer, wno pointed out the Legislature had already asked the State budget commission to submit an estimate.

The House taxation and finance committee favorably reported a corporate franchise tax bill carrying new rates and a new basis for the tax. As amended in the committee, the bill proposes a tax of three-eighths of 1 per cent upon the assessed valuation of public service corporations, and one-tenth of 1 per cent upon all other corporations.

Oppposed by numerous delegates as a "gag rule," the House adopted a resolution giving its rules committee authority to set up a list of bills for consideration each day, excluding all other bills except those called by majority vote.

Man Finds His Camping Kit, Buried in 1893, Well Preserved

Maurertown, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). A story of a 41-year-old cache of camping supplies in Crissman Hollow, in the Fort Valley east of here, was brought to light today with the recovery of those articles after more than two score years.

In 1893, J. F., W. D., and Tobias Nisewander and Alex Shaver, residents of Mount Jackson, started on a hunting and camping trip to Crissman Hollow.

Upon their arirval in the old Crissman log cabin, "Tobias Nisewander became ill and the others carried him home, leaving their cooking utensils, spoons, knives, forks, a kerosene torch and other incidentals buried near the cabin. They marked the spot with a pile of stones, intending to return for them.

Time passed, Tobias recovered, the brothers and their friend Shaver separated, and the supplies were forgotten until last fall, when the three brothers were united here.

Among other reminiscences, the camping trip was recalled. They wondered if the articles still were buried, and J. F. Nisewander promished to investigate.

The other day, Nisewander, in company with Frank Sine, Lemuel Yew and Homer Wright, all of positors of the American Bank. Maurertown, went into Powell's Fort Valley in search of the cache. They found the Crissman cabin had been burned many years ago, but Nisewander located the pile of stones and uncovered the articles buried there in 1893. They were well preserved.

Pittsylvania Man Dies by Shooting

Danville, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Marshall Shields, 35, member of a well-known Pittsylvania County family, was dead today at his home in Shockoe from shotgun wounds.

Earlier in the day, after brooding over financial matters, his wife said, he drank a bottle of medicine which a doctor had told him would kill him. When it failed to affect him, he said he would end his life before night, she said.

His wife, alarmed at the threat, ran to a neighbor for aid and was on the way home when a shot was heard. Six months ago he accidentally shot his small son.

Figures that Speak

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company presents figures from its Annual Statement for 1933 and makes comparisons which show how the Company has carried on during the five difficult years since 1928

THROUGHOUT a period of almost unparalleled world-wide depression the institution of Life Insurance in America has furnished an example of achievement that wins admiration wherever it is understood.

Between January 1st, 1929 and January 1st, 1934, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which insures the lives of more than 25,000,000 persons—nearly one-fifth of the total populations of the United States and Canada—paid to its policyholders and their beneficiaries more than Two Billion Dollars ($2,000,000,000).

During the same period, its policyholders contributed, through their premium payments, toward the increase of more than One Billion Dollars ($1,000,000,000) in the assets held for future distribution to themselves and their beneficiaries.

After payment, during that period, of more than Four Hundred and Fifty Million Dollars ($450,000,000) by way of dividends to policyholders, the Company's surplus was increased by more than One Hundred Million Dollars ($100,000,000).

These figures, of one company alone, are striking evidence of the reliance which the people of the United States and Canada place on the security and protection of life insurance.

Life Insurance is the most effective and satisfactory means of providing for the future of one's self and one's dependents.

A. C. Taylor, Jr., Rescued After Night of Peril; Caught on Floe.

Easton, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—After drifting for eight hours in Chesapeake Bay on an ice cake, during which ordeal he almost drowned, 16-year-old A. C. Taylor, jr., was rescued last night with the help of an airplane and two men who pushed a light skiff over the ice until they reached the water.

The boy was on his way to Sherwood, 3 miles from Jefferson Island, where his father is keeper of a gun club. On his way back the ice cracked, broke loose from shore and carried him away before he could leap to safety.

Slipping off the floe once he lost his shoes, socks and food and was almost unconscious when he climbed back.

All boats in the vicinity were frozen tightly in the ice and residents struggled for hours to get one free. Meanwhile, an airplane from Easton scouted over the bay with food and clothes for Taylor.

Finally two men secured a small skiff, reached Taylor and helped him ashore.

Fearing his parents might be without food, the airplane was sent back to communicate with them. As it flew over the Taylor home, the pilot dropped a message of cheer. A few minutes later the pilot saw Taylor's father wig-wagging with a lantern that he and his wife were all right.

Airport Forces Gas Tax Fight

William and Mary College Airport Bill Arouses Legislators.

Richmond, Feb. 22 (AP).—Henry G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, today expressed concern over the item in the budget appropriating $10,000 out of gasoline taxes for the purchase of an airport at the College of William and Mary.

"It is a direct diversion of gasoline funds for other purposes and contrary to the State's policy," he said.

He added that the highway department cannot build and maintain roads if every worthy project is permitted to dip into the gas tax. He pointed out that the $10,000 is not to come from the $25,000 airplane fund allowed the highway department in the budget.

The State built a new road near the present Williamsburg airport to divert traffic from the town's main thoroughfare in connection with the restoration project there.

"A railroad is also near the airport, but I haven't heard anyone advocating paying the railroad out of the gas tax," Mr. Shirley said.

Assemblymen have run across the item and are ready to protest, it was understood. They have fought proposals to divert road funds to schools and other agencies, and see in the airport item an entering wedge to permit other State supported institutions to divert funds from the gasoline tax, it is reported in legislative circles.

Marine Band Veteran Dies

Louis N. Kruger, U. S. M. C., retired, for years a member of the Marine Band, died Wednesday night at his home, 1344 Harvard street northweast. Kruger, 72 years old, began his service with the band as an apprentice with John Philip Sousa.

Kruger and Sousa, the March King, served together many years. Sousa rose to be leader of the band and Kruger served for 12 years under his apprentice companion, retiring in 1917. Both spent their boyhood in Southeast Washington.

Kruger is survived by his widow. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at Chambers' undertaking establishment, Fourteenth and Chapin streets northwest. No time has been set.

At the services, the band will play "Aloha" Hawaiian farewell song, a dying request of Kruger. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

Rooster Made 42-Mile Journey Back Home

Cantril, Iowa (U.P.).—When Augustin Knox sold a big rooster along with a flock of hens and shipped them off to Ottumwa, 42 miles distant, he thought he had seen the last of them.

However, the rooster a few mornings later sounded "Reveille" under Knox's window, just as he had done before that sort of thing forced Knox to part with him.

Poultrymen looked for a broken slat in the crate, but Knox swears the rooster hitch-hiked home.

Skidding Auto Brings About Informal Call

Bridgeport, Conn. (U.P.).—W. C. Merritt, of Hartford, had no intention of calling on Joseph Zurowsky when he motored through town. In fact, he didn't even know him.

However, his automobile skidded, climbed an embankment, crossed Zurowsky's lawn, smashed through the sun porch and front door and came to rest in the hall, a few feet from where the Zurowsky family was quietly passing the day in the living room.

Winter Wheat Crop Damaged In West Virginia

Freezing Weather Blights Stands; Low Yield Is Forecast.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—The wheat crop of Eastern Panhandle apparently has suffered heavily from February's intense cold, coupled with the lack of snow to provide a sheltering cover for the new-sprung grain.

Experienced wheat growers today note that the fields appear lifeless in most cases, and are certain that much wheat has been killed.

Wheat had a poor starting season last fall, they note, with cold weather shutting off growth before wheat had gained its desired start. This may in part explain the lifeless appearance of the wheat fields now, they admit, and some recovery may be made.

150 at Orchard School.

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). Fully 150 orchard men of Hampshire and Mineral Counties attended the annual horticulture school here, conducted by D. I. Law, county agent, and Dr. E. C. Sherwood and Dr. H. E. Knowlton, West Virginia University Extension Department. The spray programs, orchard cultivation and all problems brought up by the orchard men were discussed.

Edgar Jenkins, Hotel Man, Dies

Former Willard Employe Had Been Ill for Four Years.

Edgar Jenkins, 43, former assistant manager of the Willard Hotel, died Wednesday at Oteen, N. C., where he had been a victim of tuberculosis for the last four years.

Mr. Jenkins was assistant manager of the Willard up to the time he was stricken. Prior to that he was manager of the Monticello Hotel at Norfolk, Va. He was in the hotel business for 20 years.

Mr. Jenkins served in the Navy during the World War. He will be buried today at Arlington Cemetery after services are held at Hysong's funeral parlor, 1300 N street northwest, at 2 p. m.

The survivors are his wife, Mrs. Anna Morrison Jenkins, and a son, Edgar Jenkins, jr., who make their home in Washington.

Dog Industry in U. S. Valued at 80 Millions

New York (U.P.).—There are about 12,000,000 dogs in the United States and their value does not exceed $48,000,000.

However, when the various food concerns, small animal hospitals, breeding kennels and other canine industries are considered, the value of the animals rises to $80,000,000, according to a pet magazine.

U. S. Devil Dogs Just Devils To Sandino, Rebel and Patriot

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

"Little August" is dead. They finally got him.

Gen. Augustino Cesar Sandino, one of the most famed and perhaps the most difficult individual enemy Uncle Sam's "devil dogs" ever have known, has met the death that passed him by in countless jungle battles of revolutionary warfare.

This "most killed" soldier—he was reported "killed" a score of times—was a world figure for several years and was one of the great military leaders who have, by shot and sword, written their exploits in blood across the exciting pages of Latin American history.

He had always said he would die with his "boots on, on the field of battle," but he did not. He was slain by National Guardsmen about a year after he had made peace with his fellow Nicaraguans.

Had Premonition of Fate.

"Bandit" and even "murderer" to some, patriot to others, this fiery and fierce little fighter had a premonition of the fate he received.

He felt he and his men were exposed to attack since they laid down their arms and turned to the peaceful pursuit of farming, and he feared the Guardsmen—once ranked with the United States Marines as his "bitterest foes"—as he had never feared them when he was in the jungles, leading a well-equipped army.

There were many who believed Sandino would not live long, despite his voluntary ending of years of fratricidal strife, and his wars with the "Devil Dogs," who were told time and time again to "go and get him."

Sandino's short career was filled with tumult and hatred, campaigns against "Yankee imperialism" and efforts to "free Latin-America from Yankee domination," struggles for a "Spanish communistic republic" and uprisings against "government collapse," revolts against his former friends, sacking of cities, killings of natives and foreigners.

Death to Marines.

His personal seal showed one of his followers holding an American Marine by the hair and cutting off his captive's head.

He attached that seal with a flourish to his personal letters and official documents. It was his "emblem for freedom" when he fought the Marines—"invaders" to him—through steaming hot jungle lands, over almost inaccessible mountains, up and down the country for about five years.

Augustino, "Little August," his followers belovedly called him. They thought him a "deliverer sent by God" to clean up their little nation and "boot the foreign devils" out.

The "Devil Dogs" of Uncle Sam were just "devils" to him.

Sandino was born in May, 1893, the son of a small coffee planter, and from him learned the arts of politics and jungle fighting.

When Dr. Juan Sacasa—now President—led a Liberal revolt with Gen. Jose Maria Moncado at Puerto Cabezas, he joined in. His military career really starts there.

Often Reported Dead.

He was wounded in the first battle and fled to his own jungles. Once his wounds were healed, he obtained arms from Sacasa, and then began his famous guerrilla raids on the U. S. Marines.

A dozen times he campaigned against the "Devil Dogs" and each time fled back to the jungle or mountain regions to escape their efforts to kill him and his followers.

Once the Marine command announced he was "dead," but he turned up alive. That started a long series of "killed" reports. He was always being reported as "dead in action," but turned up somewhere to laugh at the United States forces.

Airplanes bombed his forts and camps. They couldn't "get" him. He was wounded countless times; occasionally he was actually near death. Often he was ill. But death kept passing him by. Sandino probably lost about 4,000 men in his years of battling against his fellow countrymen and the Marines. Official statistics showed the United States forces lost 133 men, killed in action or dying of wounds, between 1926 and February, 1933. Marines served in 1912 as legation guards, and in 1927 some 5,000 Marines and sailors were landed there.

"Little August" was a Communist of sorts. He detested the Russian brand of Communism and preferred a "softened, Spanish" type. Of the Russian he once said: "It is too much agitated. I want a quiet Spanish communism, softened and made orderly. Spain and Spanish America will yet communize the world."

Tax Collector at Waynesboro, Facing Loss, Goes on 'Strike'

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Collection of Waynesboro borough taxes for a commission of only 1 per cent as ordered by the borough council would put the tax collector in the position of paying for the privilege, according to unofficial calculations.

The peculiar circumstances developed when John G. Mumma, tax collector, refused to accept the borough duplicate and the council promptly appointed Borough Manager A. Stover Fitz. The low commission rate was set so the borough would save the commission rate for itself.

The duplicate for 1934 will amount to approximately $88,000 based on a tax levy of 15 mills. If 70 per cent of the taxes is collected this year, the collector would receive between $500 and $600, allowing for rebates on the collected taxes.

A bond would cost the tax collector about $350 and his miscellaneous expenses would amount to about $400, including clerk hire and postage. His total expenses therefore are estimated at not less than $750 for the first year.

Fr. Matthews, Capital Pastor 41 Years, Dies

Priest, 79, Was Pioneer in Development of Negro Parishes.

The Right Rev. Mgr. J. Roger Matthews, 79, for 41 years pastor of St. Cyprian's Catholic Church, died early yesterday in the rectory. He had been in failing health for three years.

Mgr. Matthews was a pioneer in the movement for the creation of colored Catholic parishes in Washington. He founded and built up St. Cyprian's Church, personally directing the erection of buildings and formation of congregations, until the number of Negro Catholics in the District reached 14,000.

Considered one of the best organizers and leaders in the field of Negro Catholic religious education, Mgr. Matthews was vested with his title by the Pope in appreciation of his work.

He was born in Johnstown, Pa., and was educated at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore. In 1886 he was made assistant pastor of St. Peter's Church, and in 1891 he built St. Athanasius Church in Custis Bay, Baltimore. In 1893 Cardinal Gibbons appointed him to found the Negro Catholic Church here.

In 1903 he visited Rome, where he received the benediction of the Pope for his work here.

Mgr. Matthews is survived by a brother, Luke Matthews, of Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Funeral services will be held Monday at St. Cyprian's at 10:30 a. m., with Archbishop Michael J. Curley officiating. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Motorists in Britain Praise Fuel From Coal

Montreal (U.P.).—Developments in the extraction of oil from coal have progressed to such an extent that the fuel called benzoline now is popularly supported by the British motoring public, according to Colin Wemys, British manufacturer, who is visiting Canada and the United States.

"Although the price of benzoline approximates that of the best gasoline, it is hoped that large contracts will be placed with the producers by the British admiralty for the use of the royal navy," Wemys said.

"In that event the development of the industry, which could, in time, make Britain independent of foreign interests, would be more or less assured."

Science Refutes Unemployment Charge; Cites Millions of Jobs

Millikan and Compton See End of War Near by New Developments.

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Four million jobs created by science were cited tonight by America's foremost scientists in answer to widespread hints of the past three years that science made unemployment.

The 4,000,000 was mentioned as only a fraction in the total scientific job-making.

The end of war was also foreseen in the scientific offing by one of the speakers, Dr. Robert A. Millikan, Nobel prize winner. He and Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and head of the President's Science Advisory Board, made principal addresses at a joint meeting of the American Institute of Physics and the New York Electrical Society.

An exhibit of the cavalcade of scientific jobs was given at the New York Museum of Science and Industry. Machine tools were shown as creators of 87,000 jobs; electrical industry, 1,000,000; radio, 100,000; motion pictures, 389,000; telephone, 357,000; airplanes, 50,000; rayon, 41,000; steamships, 217,000; refrigeration, 72,000; automobiles, 2,400,000. These totaled 4,713,000.

It was pointed out that these new creations involved more jobs than the old lines they supplanted. Automobiles give jobs to more than twice as many persons as the old carriage and wagon industries.

For the immense power industry, no job figures were available. Likewise for cotton, except the statement that since Ely Whitney's gin, cotton production increased more than 4,000 times, while population went up only 31 times.

Dr. Millikan said:

"Developments in the natural sciences rapidly are rendering it inimical to National interests to embark upon an aggressive war. So soon as the jingoes have seen that light, or have ruined their nations by shutting their eyes to it, another social miracle will have happened."

Both Millikan and Compton said it is true that with the new inventions there have followed losses of jobs, but they asserted these were not only temporary, but that it is possible by wise planning to take care of the workers without losses.

Too Much Romance.

French governmental scandals have generally been financial, and French financial scandals have generally followed the traditional French formula for the novel of infidelity: to begin with romance, to conclude with tragedy. The Affaire Stavisky is running true to form.

There was the incredible international adventurer, "Handsome Alex," wooing and winning a bond-buying public with promises previously played until they would have been played-out in any less credulous country than "realistic" France—perhaps wooing and winning powerful politicians, too, by promises no more scrupulous. Then the crash; Stavisky's disappearance; the police chase; capture at the instant of the arch criminal's suicide in an Alpine chalet attended by a devoted mistress; allegations that this reported death was merely an elaborate plot to let Stavisky escape and so save high-placed confederates. Two cabinets fell; Paris rioted.

Now comes the news that the fearless Parisian judge investigating the case was lured aboard a train by a fake telephone call, then murdered and his body thrown upon the rails where a passing engine might conceal the crime. Here is melodrama surpassing the efforts of Agatha Christie and her emulators in detective fiction. But it is melodrama with very serious implications for the Third French Republic. That institution has indeed survived many politico-financial scandals. This does not prove it can survive many more.

Desperate Remedies.

Lieut. D. O. Lowry, of the recently militarized air-mail service, died yesterday when his plane crashed near Deshler, Ohio. The ill-starred craft, bound from Chicago for Cleveland, had been winging through thick weather; there was heavy fog and some snow along the route south of Toledo. Lieut. Lowry nosed into a wood. He seemed to have known his danger before it was wholly upon him, but he thought first of his duty; to save the mail bags he was carrying, he threw them out—then it was too late to save himself. He maintained the high traditions of the Army as a pioneer in the Postmaster General's hazard of new fortunes. Was he a martyr, too?

Three other officers, it will be remembered, were killed during the scant preparations for the shift to the new form of air-mail operation. Those who asserted that there is a big difference in the type of risk between normal Army flying and normal air-mail flying appear to have been only too correct. A mounting death rate concentrates attention upon the question of whether Mr. Farley's remedy is not more dangerous than the still imperfectly diagnosed disease for which it was applied.

Restoring Party Government.

One British bye-election doesn't make or break a cabinet, any more than a swallow makes a summer. But it may indicate an interesting trend.

In the recent election for North Portsmouth the government put its best foot forward by advancing the candidacy of Sir Roger Keyes, admiral of the fleet and hero of the Battle of Zeebrugge. Portsmouth is a naval base and in the circumstances Sir Roger might have been expected to win a smashing victory. Instead, the Conservative majority was reduced from 14,149 in the previous election to 5,848 for Sir Roger. Other recent local elections have shown similar results.

Immediately following the Portsmouth surprise, in a division on a minor amendment to the unemployment assistance scheme, the government majority dropped to 52 votes, although the MacDonald administration musters over 500 supporters with less than 100 Laborites and Liberals in the opposition.

The sharp drop in the majority does not necessarily indicate a crisis in the offing. As a matter of fact, dissatisfaction with the government is still largely uncrystallized. But it is beginning to focus on the unnatural composition of the government created when England went off the gold standard. The nominal Labor leaders—MacDonald and Thomas—have been read out of the Labor party and the National Liberal leaders—Runciman and Simon—have been deserted by at least half their following. The Conservatives have a majority by themselves, but, under the terms of the coalition, they are bound to the Simon Liberals, which the English say are anything but simon-pure Liberals, and to MacDonald, whose speeches are now caustically referred to as "Lossiemouthings."

The British have lately been governed by an administration with an enormous parliamentary majority and have thereby been deprived of the benefits of a critical opposition. This is so contrary to national traditions that, with any lessening of economic emergency, one would expect losses for the government and gains for the Labor and Liberal groups which have maintained their independence. The voters must turn to the anti-government candidates to express their faith in that party government which has been one of England's most notable contributions to political science.

Our Neglected Schools.

At the request of the Board of Education, Superintendent Ballou has prepared an extensive report on the need for additional school buildings in Washington. It presents convincing evidence of past neglect, and the mere recital of facts constitutes a cogent argument for a more liberal policy of school construction.

Without making any allowance for anticipated increases in enrollment, the elementary schools require 129 additional classrooms, the absence of which prevents abandonment of buildings that were condemned 26 years ago. Two new junior high schools are needed to house pupils now enrolled. At Langley Junior High efforts are being made to accommodate 406 students in excess of the building's capacity. One new senior high school, with a capacity of 1,600, would be sufficient to take care of the excess enrollment in the upper grades.

Eastern High is said to be the most congested school in the District. Built to accommodate 2,000 students, it has an enrollment of 2,691. To relieve this situation and provide additional facilities in Anacostia Dr. Ballou proposes the construction of a combination senior and junior high school in that neighborhood. His plan may afford a happy solution of Anacostia's school problem, if the necessary funds are made available.

Twelve portable schools are still in use. Some of these will be replaced by permanent buildings now under construction, but others will be used indefinitely unless additional funds are forthcoming for more suitable quarters. Indeed, with enrollment steadily increasing and a meager allowance in the budget for new buildings, it may be necessary to bring more of these fire-traps into use.

Rules adopted by the Board of Education provide that "so far as practicable, not more than 40 pupils shall be assigned to one teacher in the elementary schools." Actually, one-third of all classes enroll more than 40 pupils. The number of oversize classes is greater now than it was in 1930 or 1925. At least 56 additional classrooms are needed to overcome this handicap.

Thirty of our school buildings are at least 50 years old, and the Wallach School was built during the Civil War. Many of these old structures ought to be replaced. But, as Dr. Ballou says, "the enrollment in our public schools has increased so rapidly that major attention has been given to new buildings to take care of increased enrollment, and only incidental attention as a rule has been given to the important problem of replacement of buildings unfit for further school use."

After a thorough investigation of Washington's school facilities in 1908 a commission recommended the early abandonment of eight buildings. Four of them are still in use, three as elementary schools and one as a junior high. In some of the old buildings the heating equipment and sanitary facilities have deteriorated to a deplorable state.

Dr. Ballou has promised to make a special survey to determine the need for replacement of Grant School. In his report he says this is "one of the buildings which should receive attention in the preparation of a priority list" whenever appropriations become available for the replacement of old structures.

Considered as a whole, Dr. Ballou's report constitutes an indictment of the niggardly policy of Congress in dealing with the District's school system. Because of an absurd law, giving the Federal Budget Bureau control over all estimates for local projects, neither the Board of Education nor the District Commissioners can make an appeal to Congress for a more adequate school building fund. It remains for influential citizens and civic groups to urge upon Congress the adoption of a program permitting school facilities somewhat more in keeping with the dignity of the National Capital.

Terra Firma.

Albert of the Belgians was buried, in this new era, among all the appurtenances of an era we had considered impossibly old. It was not remarkable that the Prince of Wales and Boris of Bulgaria should attend this royal funeral. They represented royalty. It was not surprising that other states should send representatives. This was a state affair. Nor was it curious that the Belgians should so truly mourn, as individuals, the death of a most upright, lovable and courageous man. What does give pause to the political observer is the fact that, politically, the mass of those Belgians should have accepted the principle of a continued monarchy as a matter of course.

For Belgium was recently evincing much the same tendency away from orbs and crowns as most of the rest of the world. That republicanism which played a part in the little country's creation a century ago was active only yesterday; the Walloons were loud in a democratic separatist movement; the Socialists were clamorous, and, of course, there were plentiful Belgian Communists violently vocal for a Communist regime. But none of these groups has seriously attempted to fill the gap between Albert and Leopold with anti-monarchical propaganda.

One wonders if this is not typical of something that is going forward on soft feet almost everywhere: something often unnoted precisely because it is a silent manifestation. One wonders whether here is an explanation for the more audible successes of the successful dictators. Upon an earth become of late so economically and governmentally insecure, mankind is now eagerly groping after old-fashioned stability and certainty rather than for any novelty from Utopia.

Government By Invective.

It is to be hoped that Senator Fletcher has adequate evidence to support his scathing denunciation of stock exchange "propaganda" against the regulatory bill which bears his name. The attack is certainly unbalanced when it attributes all responsibility for the market collapse last summer to inside manipulators. Speculation at that time was definitely encouraged by the Administration's monetary experiments and ever since last March fear of inflation has almost forced many people into the market, a fact certainly to be balanced against malpractices of operators. The major issue raised by Mr. Fletcher's blast, however, goes deeper than the chapter and verse of his justification.

The fair-minded public is heartily sick of efforts, similar to this by Senator Fletcher, to cry down legitimate criticism by vilifying those who express dissent. It seems to be entirely forgotten that the vitality of a democratic society depends upon the right of individuals and groups to give free expression to their views, whether interested or disinterested. As a matter of fact, the most trenchant, because best informed, critics of legislative proposals and regulatory policies are usually individuals directly affected and selfishly concerned about contemplated changes.

In former days, Senator Fletcher's attack upon the critics of his bill might have been dismissed as one man's effort to prevent revision of a measure known by his name. Unfortunately, his jeremiad today reflects an all too frequent response to any analysis of legislative and administrative proposals. Whether the question relates to monetary policies or cancellation of air-mail contracts, those who have voiced objections are subjected to personal attacks the more objectionable because they seem calculated to distract attention from fundamental issues. From Dr. Sprague, whose professional reputation was openly disparaged by Gen. Johnson, to Col. Lindbergh, just the other day, those who have exercised their fundamental rights as citizens have been denounced instead of being met on the ground upon which they have taken their stand.

It is high time that the true significance of this contemptible practice be realized. Government by decree is the prerogative of dictators; it has no place in the United States. But if our legislators abdicate their right to discuss and criticize the measures that come before them, and if men in political power hold dissenters up to public contumely, we shall soon be living under a system in which the difference between autocracy and democracy will be difficult to define.

Boomerang.

Dissatisfaction with the AAA's experiment with milk is not confined to congressional circles. Secretary Wallace also recognizes the shortcomings of price-fixing as a means of relieving dairy farmers. He told a Senate committee that the milk-control plan was not working smoothly at least a month before 100 representatives brought forward their resolution condemning it.

The AAA undertook to help dairymen by bolstering up antiquated price arrangements. As a result milk prices were maintained at a relatively higher level than butter prices. Consumption of fluid milk decreased, and excessive supplies were diverted to the production of other dairy products. Soon there was an excessive accumulation of butter in storage. "For a time," Mr. Wallace said, "butter prices were stabilized through purchasing operations, but eventually it became evident that such temporizing methods could not provide a lasting solution to the situation."

Protesting Congressmen assert that the AAA's price-fixing has worked to the disadvantage of producers. A month ago Secretary Wallace said that "one of the undesirable consequences of the earlier policy was the necessity of fixing retail prices as well as wholesale, with its consequent tendency to raise distribution margins."

One significant difference between the attitude of Secretary Wallace and the irate Congressmen is that he recognizes the milk policy as an experiment, while they seem to assume that the AAA is negligent in applying an infallible formula worked out by Congress to make dairymen prosperous. As a matter of fact, Congress merely relinquished its own responsibility for adoption of a sound agricultural policy into the hands of the AAA. Having ordered experimental hash, these Representatives are now gesticulating and shouting "communism" because they have not been served with a good substantial steak.

MILE POSTS

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

TWO AMERICANS and two Britons were reported as "missing" in Mexico. Consuls there sent a plea to President Wilson asking aid in search of them. One was said to have been condemned to die for treachery to the Mexican army.

SENATOR WILLIAM KENYON, of Iowa, told Baptists in Philadelphia that the reason bills went astray in Congress was because Senators and Representatives were sapped of their mental and physical energy by too strict attendance on tango teas and dinners.

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE squelched the idea that he would favor a third party. He issued a statement saying he intended to remain a Progressive Republican.

DR. MARY WALKER, famous dress reformer, speaking in New York, created a furore by advocating trial mating as a cure for the divorce evil.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

JAMES MORRIS, of Philadelphia, won The Post's marathon. More than 100 started the race to the Capitol, and 95 finished. Morris' time, 55:34 4-5.

SENATOR WALSH, of Montana, announced that he expected to call Blascom Slemp, secretary of President Coolidge, before the Senate oil inquiry to explain a mysterious trip to Florida.

J. W. CRABTREE, secretary of the National Education Society, issued a blast of complaint against the greater expenditure for cigarettes by the American people than for education.

The Grant School.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial "Against the Clamor" came as a shock to many of us.

We appreciate your anxiety concerning the spending of public funds, but we do not understand how any man or woman who knows the facts concerning the Grant and many other schools in the Southern parts of Washington could have commended Dr. Ballou's position. The taxpayers of Washington want all our schools made fit for children living within the Capital City of our great Nation. Some take pride in the fact that we have no bonded debt, but I tell you that we "grown ups" are so deeply in debt to the children in many sections of Washington on account of poor school conditions that we can never in years to come pay this debt of neglect.

We have no debt and we have millions laying idle in the Treasury. What is that to be proud of? We should be ashamed to look in the face any child, who has not a fine sanitary, wholesome school building in which to attend, and a place in which to lawfully play. You say "as a check on his judgment in this matter Dr. Ballou is having a survey made." Who is making this survey? Are there any funds available for this work? You say "no one recognizes the need for additional school facilities in the District more keenly than Dr. Ballou." I can not refrain from wondering how you came to that conclusion. There has not been a completed school census since 1926. There have been many changes in these past eight years; sections in the older parts of Washington have developed, due principally to the development of parks and parkways by the Federal Government in its efforts to bring happiness to many people.

The superintendent promised the people of the Southwest, if they would accept the old Jefferson School Building, which had been condemned 20 years before as a Junior High, that he would give them a new building in three years. Have they a new building? Go and see for yourself. It's a disgrace to any school system. I for one am ready and willing "to join in the stampede with the view of obtaining funds" for these schools. The school officials have for years discriminated against the entire Southern section of Washington. The Grant School is one block from George Washington University, amidst a growing apartment house community. Two years ago it was so overcrowded that the boys' playroom in the basement had to be taken for class work; the plumbing is old and decidedly disagreeable; there is no hot water. Since this school has been so neglected by school officials, a handsome parochial school has been built near by which is full to capacity with Protestant as well as Catholic children.

There is no reason why a fine "unit school" should not be built in this section to care for children from the kindergarten through the ninth grade. A "community school" would be a center from which the child life for blocks around would radiate. When this is done, then and then only, will the "improvements which are considered essential to the maintenance of educational standards" be reached.

MARY ELIZABETH RAFTER
Washington, Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with care your recent editorial in regard to the "clamor" for expending public funds, and I wish to say, I can appreciate The Post's position in regard to the unnecessary expenditures, and I heartily agree with you in the same.

But, we of the Grant School have been "persecuted" for a long time. Any school which has stood for 52 years and has been permitted to remain open, without repairs most necessary and essential to the welfare of its pupils and teachers, is surely justified in requesting its just rights. Hence the "clamor" should not apply to the Grant School, as stated in your editorial.

I am sure if you personally could have seen the deplorable conditions of the Grant during this school term you would not hesitate to assist in the recommendation of replacement.

Due to its condition the Grant is not giving its pupils a fair chance to gain the foundation of their education. And the mental rating of this school has been reported to be one of the lowest in the city. We know that a change of environment to a new school would reap a vast benefit, mentally, physically and morally, to the children who attend the Grant now and those who may have to attend there in the future.

Surely, anyone imbued with the power of reason could not do other than resent the neglect of the Grant and heartily recommend the best facilities for this school, its pupils and teachers.

I do not wish to criticize Dr. Ballou, for I know there must be some reason for the neglect of this school and my sole purpose is to correct the situation.

As a native of the District of Columbia and a pupil of the Grant School about 30 years ago, I will appreciate any help you may be able to give us.

MRS. RUTH W. HOOVER.
Washington, Feb. 14.

An Appeal to Taxpayers.

Our governments that are unfortunately controlled by party politicians, who are more loyal to their parties than the people whom they misrepresent, are primarily responsible for our deplorable situation that has encouraged public discontent.

The masses of people in America today are practically leaderless. Our legislative body of 531 men and women practically signed away the rights of freedom and liberty of the American people when the President requested Congress to grant him the power to experiment with his economy program, and to finish the job of completely relieving them of any further responsibility to end the depression.

By such a procedure, this patriotic group of legislators were compelled to acknowledge their inefficiency and failure to show any responsibility to the people who elected them—the taxpayers of the United States.

The President now has full control of the monetary situation. Our supine Congress had one slipped over on them. The President knew in advance of his inauguration the material he would be compelled to use and he has put into execution a moratorium on these belligerents.

Now, if the President has no further use for them for the next two years, what use have the taxpayers to keep these apostles in Washington?

Worn out ideas and traditions are slated for the junk pile, the same as obsolete and worn out machinery.

Now, when we come to the President, his actions go to the extreme the other way. He has incorporated theories of men who are labeled as professors of economics, and he has allowed them to run away with the situation in adopting their alphabetical panaceas as a code to adopt for industry and labor that would expedite the recovery program. It now has been under experimentation for 11 months, and has been devoid of results as expected from the masses it was supposed to help.

Both political parties have been given ample power and time whereby we could reasonably hope for some results. The background of our Congressmen and the high speed of the President of not observing the danger signal of spending and speculating, behooves the people to call a halt and give the taxpayers a chance to step into the picture with a practical program.

The program the President is so enthusiastic about is just an experiment for temporary relief, trusting and hoping some miracle can be performed. The miracle will occur just as soon as all men and women assume their individual responsibility—by a united front of the taxpayers of America.

I have submitted a program to the President and also to some of our loyal Congressmen. I think as far as they are concerned it may be just a waste of effort. But I don't intend to let them pass their opinion on a practical program which they are not familiar with. I will leave it to the final judgment of the taxpayers whenever they are interested in a program that will bring recovery and make depression a thing of history.

A TAX PAYING VIGILANTE.
Washington, Feb. 8.

Diego Rivera's Art.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That The Post should see fit to write an editorial upholding the vandalism resulting in the destruction of Diego Rivera's painting, is a sad commentary on American journalism.

Many years ago the conservative critic, Roger Fry, said in an essay: "The situation as regards art and as regards the disinterested love of truth is so similar that we might expect this argument in favor of a plutocratic social order to hold equally well for both art and science, and that the artist would be a fervent upholder of the present system. As a matter of fact, the more representative artists have rarely been such, and not a few, though working their life long for the plutocracy, have been vehement Socialists."

Diego Rivera is not the greatest artist of Mexico. His work does not have the simplicity or power of Orozco, nor the revolutionary fervor of lesser artists. Politically, Rivera is a renegade Communist; isolated from the international movement by his adherence to certain tenets of the bourgeoisie. He is actually no more a Communist in the broad sense of the word than A. J. Muste or Norman Thomas. However, it is necessary at this time for all intellectuals and workers to defend the work of artists against the ignorant, and underhand attack of the person or persons who wish to destroy works of art under the thin disguise of political prejudice. The cultural murder at Rockefeller Center is merely an indication of the precarious position of American art in a society dominated by wealth. If the so-called "democratic art" is to survive, I am afraid the artists will have to protect it by building barricades. Any local exhibit will reveal the stultified growth of contemporary art. One searches in vain for a glimpse of the American scene that surrounds us; it is smothered by nudes, and flowers and still-lifes. My sympathy, Diego Rivera. At least you have tried to paint. Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

OF all the poignant stories necessarily attendant upon a revolution with its shifts, readjustments and upsets in men's lives, that of the economists will rank, I believe, along with Longfellow's "Evangeline."

BARGERON.

Here were a race of men who after a long struggle over the years were emerging from their suppression and gaining an assertiveness. They were ascending from the employe to the employer class, from men who merely laid their findings on their bosses' desks to men with authority to carry their findings out.

The sun was beginning to shine for these men in their long pilgrimage through the valley of darkness. There is a school that holds to the thought that their becoming conscious has held recovery up, but even if that is true you can't blame them for trying to hold onto their gains. I know of no class that has been kept down more.

It is not that as a rule they have been poorly paid. Mostly it is that their names have not appeared on the firm's stationery and they have not been able to press buttons and have secretaries. They worked in their shirt sleeves with figures and charts and punched the clock. Some of them like Babson and Irving Fisher have attained the lecture platform, of course, and found a market for their statistical wares but by and large they constituted just another man on the pay roll of a bank or a merchandising house.

With the advent of the Roosevelt Administration they came into their own. To them was given over the money, the farms and the Nation's industries. From being just another man on the pay roll they came to have employes of their own. They came to be in demand at dinner parties and wax rich from the sale of their books and syndicate articles. It was a great mass movement from the backroom to private, well-furnished offices up front. The depression, in part, was over. It was over for them.

• • • •

Then, so help me goodness, along comes a Bureau of Standards scientist, Dr. H. C. Dickinson, with a machine to do away with them.

Yes, sir, he has invented an economonstrator which, as I understand it, can be handled by a child. By the flow of a liquid through its various cells we can all observe, right before our eyes, the economic forces of the country at work. For example, when our interest burden becomes disproportionate to our National income, a red light will show, and the only thing we will have to do is to tilt the country to one side and start the flow another way. Our present trouble, I am informed, is not that we do not know what to do once we know what is wrong, when we know just where the economic structure is out of repair, it is that we can't just find the defect.

It will be contended, of course, just as it has been contended in the introduction of labor-saving devices in the past, that this economonstrator will create a demand for economists rather than replace them. There will have to be men to tilt the country, take out its kinks here and there, men to reverse and divert the economic trends in accordance with the machine's decrees. Admittedly, this is true.

But they won't have to be highly paid experts. There is the catch. It is in most labor-saving devices. Instead of economists we can have unskilled laborers, even children over the age of the child labor ban to run helter skelter about at the machine's bidding, taking a bolt out of the economic structure here and putting one in there. There is no art in applying and unloosening bolts if you have a good monkey wrench and know where the applying and unloosening should be.

Of all the heartaches and disappointments that come to men, I know of nothing more touching than this. What a break for the economists to get!

HOMING TERNS.

Five terns were taken from the bird rookery of the tip of the Florida peninsula and carried by a roundabout steamer route to a position off Cape Hatteras, where they were given their freedom. Five days from the date of capture three of them were back on the nesting grounds, according to Science, where they were identified by the metal bands with which their legs had been encircled before they were taken on their long voyage. The straight-line distance from Cape Hatteras to Bird Key its about 850 miles; by coast-line flight the distance is 1,081 miles. This latter is greater than the record flight for trained pigeons, 1,010 miles.

FIRST FEW HOURS.

The first hundred years may be the hardest, but we have long been assured that the most important years in a person's life were those from one to six, says the New York Evening Post. Now comes Dr. James J. Ganders to tell us that one's habits of learning and general disposition are probably influenced considerably in his first few hours and days. If this condition imposes a much heavier responsibility upon parents for that early period than they have been assuming, it correspondingly lightens the burden all the rest of the way. An up-to-date mother, receiving a complaint about the antics of her child in the house of a neighbor who has been giving a tea party for grown-ups, will merely smile and murmur, "But you know Willie's disposition is fixed now. He's almost a year old."

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Column a Day.

I spent the early part of last evening reading the book columns for some weeks back, of Mr. Harry Hansen in the New York World Telegram, of Mr. Lewis Gannett in the New York Herald Tribune, and of Mr. John Chamberlain in the New York Times. They are gentlemen who have my complete understanding and sympathy—a column a day to keep up with current books resembles that old Arabian story which goes on repeating "and another bee flew into the hole in the roof of the granary, picked up a grain of corn, and carried it away," so on forever.

The differences among them you already know—that Mr. Chamberlain is the most learned, that Mr. Gannett is the most delicate and sympathetic, that Mr. Hansen is the liveliest and most disputatious. But these shades of personality worked no such disagreements among them as the recent critical tiff over Rearden Conner's "Shake Hands With the Devil," which Mr. Ernest Boyd called "a thoroughly incompetent piece of work . . . a travesty of the life it purports to describe." Whereupon Mr. Liam O'Flaherty cabled back, "This novel is one of the truest and best pictures of Ireland in the revolution I have seen."

* * * *

In a number of instances the three reviewers above were singularly unanimous. Each of them, for example, noted the remarkable first sentence of James M. Cain's "The Postman Always Rings Twice." Yesterday, when I mentioned the book rather too briefly, I left that out. Here it is: "They threw me off the hay truck about noon." They are quite right; that is a notable sentence. But it was Mr. Gannett, as I remember, who put the reason most neatly when he noted that the sentence held the whole character of Frank—only one kind of man would be put off a hay truck, only one type of man would tell it that way.

And with the same book each reviewer thought it well to remark on the influence of Mr. Hemingway. I beg to differ flatly in this. The dialogue of Mr. Hemingway had, has, and always will have a distinct ritualistic cadence, a kind of calculated and subjective rhythm which belong more to the author than to his characters. This is quite absent from Mr. Cain—his characters speak for themselves. Surely clipped sentences and brief, passionate phrases are not copyrighted by Mr. Hemingway.

* * * *

It was Mr. Gannett who took the gardening books to the country and remarked that mushroom growing was not feasible for week-ends. It was Mr. Hansen who, alone among his confreres, looked at Gertrude Stein's "The Making of Americans" (and I'm still chuckling over the way he romped on the book). It was Mr. Chamberlain who told a gorgeous anecdote on Herr Oswald Spengler, which was so good I'm sure he won't mind my repeating it here. If you have ever felt like disputing the German Jeremiah, read this and take heart.

It seems that Mrs. Edith Wharton, a lady learned in her own right, wrote to Herr Spengler complaining suavely of his interpretation of baroque art in "The Decline of the West." Herr Spengler came right back at her, cited his authority from chapter and verse in a certain encyclopedia. To this Mrs. Wharton made an answer which is something better than perfect. "I know," she replied, "but I wrote that article myself, and I was misinformed at the time."

But reading these pleasant gentlemen was getting nowhere with my own granary.

Two Novels.

The book on the top of the pile was "Business As Usual" (Houghton Mifflin, $2), by Jane Oliver and Ann Stafford. It deals with a young Scotswoman who goes down to London and gets a job on the book floor of a big department store. The tale is told in the form of letters, telegrams and business memoranda, all very bright and chatty. You'll like it for its irreverent, informal flavor and for its pictures of salespeople behind the scenes. Miss Stafford added a number of very funny little drawings.

* * * *

As I was reading Morley Callaghan's "Such Is My Beloved" (Scribner, $2) I couldn't help feeling that it would have been better as a short story. As a novel, it is too long-drawn-out. It dissipates its own force too often.

Father Dowling, young and earnest priest, meets two street-walkers, Ronnie and Midge. He sympathizes with them, brings them money and gifts, tries to get his rich parishioner, Mr. Robison, to do something for them. When Mrs. Robison hears of this state of things she becomes bitterly self-righteous, and causes her husband to complain to the bishop. The girls are arrested and sent out of town. Father Dowling goes mad—which seems a bit unnecessary.

As character study, Callaghan has done an excellent piece of work. The girls, half brazen, half moved by the priest's simple words; the bishop weighing public scandal against his inner sympathy; Father Dowling struggling to treat these girls with the charity he would show to the most respectable members of his congregation—all this we understand through the very simple prose. But for all the clarity and directness of style, the action seems to take place in a mist, somehow remote and ethereal. Perhaps it is the spiritual overtone which makes the characters, in spite of the verisimilitude of their dialogue, appear to live in another world. For it is all a kind of poetry, and the poet in prose remains most successful in the short story.

If Friends Won't Tell You, Diagnose Yourself

By Robert Quillen

Your best friend, as the advertisement says, won't tell you. And because our friends and relatives are so considerate, or so reluctant to invite comparison, all of us unwittingly develop faults that are apparent to everybody except ourselves.

We are like the man who goes to his office with a spot of egg yolk on his chin—content as we are because we don't see the flaw that would shame us.

But if our friends will not tell us the truth, we can find a way to take stock of ourselves.

These questions, for example, will serve as a mirror:

Are you at ease when dealing with the poor and embarrassed in the presence of the rich?

Do you pretend to have more knowledge than you possess, and are you ashamed to confess your ignorance of any matter?

Do you try to make strangers think you more important than you are?

Would you care if all of your friends knew just how often you bathe?

Do you fool yourself with other excuses when fear makes you postpone a visit to the dentist?

Do you make catty remarks about people whose only fault is that you envy them?

Are you as courteous to your husband or wife when you two are alone as you are when guests are present?

If you borrow a coin, umbrella or book, do you return it as promptly as you expect others to return your property?

Do you interrupt other speakers and yet feel offended when you are interrupted?

Do you laugh at your own jokes or repeat the point when others laugh?

Do you glare at people who talk during the show and yet occasionally whisper to your companion?

Once you have gained the group's attention, do you string out your story to hold the floor as long as possible?

If some employe of a big corporation gives you too much change, do you return it?

Do you talk about family affairs or criticize the children before "outsiders?"

Do you change your mind to avoid inconvenience after making a promise?

If you can get a laugh by hurting somebody's feelings, do you do it?

That is enough. Such a list of questions might be lengthened indefinitely, but you aren't a bad sort of person if you get the right answers to these.

Two Army Pilots Die in 4 Crashes

landed in a tree when Hollstein was trying to make his way through a heavy fog.

Lieut. Lowry, bucking a wall of fog and snow, crashed down to his death with 358 pounds of mail. Capt. Fred C. Nelson, on air-mail duty at Toledo, Ohio, will make an investigation and report back to Selfridge Field, Mich. His report will be forwarded to the War Department in Washington.

Lieut. Patrick was expected to return to Shreveport, La., tomorrow to complete organization of the air-mail field there. He was not carrying air mail.

Despite the accidents, the airmail went out tonight with Army men in the cockpits as if nothing had happened. But in Washington, an echo of the crashes rumbled in the House when Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, said sending Army men out with the mail without necessary training was "legalized murder."

The casualties today followed crashes last Friday in which three Army pilots, flying to their air-mail posts, were killed—Second Lieuts. Jean D. Grenier and Edwin D. White in a Utah snowstorm, and Second Lieut. James Y. Eastman in Idaho.

Unable to Use Parachute.

Lieut. Lowry was far off his course on the Chicago-Cleveland run when he crashed, and out of radio communication with land stations. Seeing the end of the flight, apparently, Lowry began to toss out the mail sacks and tried to use his parachute. The parachute caught on the plane's rigging, making a jump impossible.

Charles Thurston, farmer, at 6 a. m., heard the plane pass over his home and then heard the motor die. He opened a window and heard the crash. He telephoned a nearby airport and notified authorities.

Course Traced by Bags.

Lieut. Lowry's course above the woods and into a small creek could be followed along the ground where the mail sacks were found at irregular intervals.

Lieut. Hollstein's thoughts as he crashed also concerned the mail. After walking to a home in the mountains and telephoning Cleveland, he went back to the wrecked plane and removed the mail. Like Lowry, he shut off the ignition before striking earth.

In Detroit Mrs. Dorothy Lowry Reisdorf saw a headline over the shoulder of another passenger in a bus and learned that he son, Lieut. Lowry, was dead.

"Good as they are," she said, "these Selfridge Field fliers shouldn't have had to fly at night through winter storms over unfamiliar courses that it took months for commercial pilots to learn."

Lowry had been at Selfridge Field since 1929 and was a graduate of the University of Michigan.

Hollstein said after his accident that the failure of his radio was the immediate cause. The Army radios have a range of only 15 miles.

Missouri Prisoner Slashes Self in Eyes

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 22 (AP). Missouri State Penitentiary officials said today James Creighton, serving a life term for murder, attempted to gouge out his eyes in an effort to obtain a parole.

They said he used a razor-sharp knife fashioned from a nail file. Creighton was taken from his cell to the prison hospital, physicians said he might lose sight of both eyes.

Mellon Asked Air Contract, Says Brown

Hoover Not Informed of Conferences, Probe Witness Says.

flooring company which secured a Government contract.

Brown insisted that such evidence was entirely extraneous.

He admitted, however, that Bagley, in addition to representing the floor block company, had also secured options on several possible postoffice sites and had sought to have them taken over by the Government.

"That was a practice we could not tolerate," said Brown, "and we had nothing to do with taking over options."

Questioned again about details of two checks paid to Brown by Bagley, one for $11,000 and one for $45,000, Brown repeated that they were for his share of their joint account, but could remember nothing further about those transactions or about any other check exchanges between Bagley and himself.

"Senator, I cannot remember clearly all the details of what happened five years ago. Of course, if you have any evidence or records that might help, I should be glad to try and recollect."

The whole atmosphere of the committee room changed as Senator Black turned the witness over to his Republican colleague. Brown straightened up, Austin cleared his throat, and Black slumped down into his big chairman's chair until only his eyes were visible over the edge of the committee table.

Acted Within Law.

To the first question by Austin, whether he felt he had been guilty of any of the things charged by Postmaster General Farley in his letter last week to Black, the former Postoffice head replied:

"I always acted in accord with the law, and always with the approval of the President."

After the luncheon recess Austin sought to clear up the relation of President Hoover to Brown's administration of postal affairs, and Brown amended his original statement thus:

"Mr. Hoover approved the broad policy that we pursued in developing the aeronautical industry. He never approved individually any of the contracts or extensions, because details of the administration were left to us."

Austin then read the Farley letter, almost paragraph by paragraph, seeking to draw specific defenses from the witness. Brown reiterated that every act of contract, extension or route certificate award during his administration had been strictly within his interpretation of the law and the purpose of Congress.

"The ultimate purpose of Congress, as I interpreted it, was to make the industry self-sustaining," he said. "The idea was to get away from subsidies, and at the same time to develop a sound transportation system, and to give the country a great craft and pilot reserve in case of National emergency.

"We felt that the thing to do with the money appropriated by Congress was not to give it to the little fellows to pay off their losses for a couple of years, but to give it to the big operators who could really develop the aviation industry. Some people apparently think that we were fostering a great octopus, but I do not think that is a sound opinion."

Farley Held Meetings.

Austin drew Brown's attention to the fact that his successor in the Postoffice Department, James A. Farley, had also held meetings of operators, similar, said Austin, to the spoils conferences of 1930 which constitute the greatest single charge against Brown.

Austin read the testimony of W. W. Howes, Second Assistant Postmaster General, before a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee, in which Howes said:

"We called a meeting of those who held contracts, told them we had only $14,000,000 to spend this year, and asked them to submit plans of possible operations under the curtailment. We adopted our own plan, taken in part from the six given to us by the operators."

"Now, Mr. Brown, is there any difference in principle between a Republican and a Democratic meeting?" asked Austin.

Veterans Lose First Senate Pay Skirmish

a motion may be made to report the bill adversely to the House. If such a motion is made and carried, the bill goes to the calendar and the discharge petition becomes ineffective. It would then require a rule from the Rules Committee to get it before the House.

The debate in the Senate over veterans' compensation got off to a slow start. It was preceded by the reading of Washington's Farewell Address and when that was concluded several Senators spoke on other topics. Senator Arthur R. Robinson (Republican), Indiana, spoke on behalf of the veterans for several hours.

Veterans Destitute.

Waving his arms into grotesque shapes, his hair disheveled, the Indianan at times appeared to be giving an imitation of Lon Chaney as he assailed the veterans' provision of the economy act and declared that only stock market speculators and Wall street wanted the veterans' compensation reduced. The result he said, was destitution for many veterans. He warned the Senate not to discourage the wearing of the country's uniform.

Senator Henry D. Hatfield (Republican), West Virginia, urged the complete restoration of all the rights and compensation enjoyed by veterans before the passage of the economy act. He contended that only in this way could the "injustices" of that measure be remedied.

Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, said he usually agreed with every denunciation made of the economy act. But he said he could not vote to repeal it, because such action would restore to the compensation rolls those veterans who had got there by fraud and those who enlisted after the armistice but before the World War was formally ended.

The Oregonian said that while the evils of the economy act were widespread, the measure also had some good points, which should be preserved. The evils, he argued, should be corrected one by one, and that was what he and Senator McCarran proposed in their amendment.

The Administration spokesman in beating back the attacks on the economy act was Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina. He said the Hatfield amendment would put those who served after hostilities ceased in the World War and the misconduct cases on the same level with the fighting men.

Would Restore Part of Pay.

The South Carolinian urged that his amendment was adequate to take care of any injustices done by the economy act. He explained that under his amendment all veterans whose service-connected presumptions had been denied would be given 75 per cent of their pre-economy act compensation pending determination of their cases by the new special board of reviews here. Every veteran removed from the rolls would have the right to appeal, he said.

He explained that this board would be made of eighteen persons outside the Government and twelve attaches of the Veterans' Administration. His amendment also grants hospitalization to ill veterans to the limit of existing facilities.

In the vote on the Hatfield amendment—outright repeal of the economy act—11 Republicans, 2 Democrats and 1 Farmer-Laborite supported it. They were Senators Carey, Davis, Frazier, Gibson, Hatfield, Kean, La Follette, Metcalf, Nye, Patterson and Robinson, of Indiana—all Republicans—and Long and Clark, Democrats. Senator Henrik Shipstead was the Farmer-Laborite.

Great Expectorations.

The appearance of "Anthony Adverse" was certainly one of the chief literary events of the year 1933; and its sale continues with unabated fervor. While it is by no means an impeccable masterpiece, for the last 500 pages could profitably be omitted, it does richly deserve its success. In the midst of dull realistic novels, this huge historical romance came as a welcome relief; and it is possible that it may point the way to a change in popular taste. And it shows that the automobile, the motion pictures, the victrola and the radio have not killed the sale of books or the willingness to read them. There are at least 1,000,000 persons who have the time and the inclination to read a novel of 1,240 pages.

Whatever may be the final place of this book in literary history—and when all is said, it is surely not so great a book as Tolstoi's leviathan, "War and Peace" (1,560 pages)—the incident in "Anthony Adverse" that I shall remember the longest and the most vividly, is the Yankee captain's marvelous power of spitting. Only two pages are devoted to this, but the incident is described with tremendous gusto, and with a monstrous roaring mirth worthy of Mark Twain.

When Dickens first visited this country he was impressed by the proficiency of Americans in spitting; and many other foreign observers have commented on the same thing. We can not be entirely without rivals, however; for in all foreign countries we see signs forbidding the custom. One man in a street car, seeing the sign, "Do not spit on the floor," inquired if he were expected to spit on the ceiling.

In "Anthony Adverse," in the presence of Frenchmen, who are filled with awe and wonder, the captain deluges a lizard, and the farther the animal scuttles away the more accurately does the captain submerge him. Finally bets are made on the range and accuracy of the captain's powers; and one Frenchman, who puts all he has on the captain, wins a very large sum of money. For the muzzle velocity of the captain is as remarkable as his copious concentration. Frenchmen have always admired any art when it is seen in its highest perfection; and the Yankee becomes a hero.

While I have myself no ambition to excel in this game, I have often been filled with amazement at the range and accuracy of men I have seen in the offices of country hotels. I have seen a man, otherwise ordinary, hit a receptacle 15 feet away with absolute precision, and apparently without taking any careful aim. He glances up for a moment from the paper he is reading, and flitch! the thing is done. I wonder at such concentration. If I should attempt such markmanship, I should spray the room.

I am sure many thousands of the readers of "Anthony Adverse" must have been impressed as I was by the captain's power and Mr. Allen's vivid description of it.

The Once Over

THE COURTEOUS TRAFFIC COP.

(Police Commissioner O'Ryan, of New York, is instructing motorcycle and traffic cops in courtesy, demanding that they be more gentlemanly in dealing with automobilists."—News item.)

Traffic Cop:
Good morning! It's a lovely day—
I trust you're feeling bright and gay.

Motorist:
Good morning, sir! And how are you?
I hope you're well, indeed I do.

Traffic Cop:
I thank you, sir, and now I must
Ask something you won't mind, I trust;
I hate to ask it, sir, of you—
Pull over to the curb, please do!

Motorist:
The pleasure's mine assuredly,
I'm flattered that you've thought of me;
I lead a rather lonely life

Traffic Cop:
I'm glad you look at it like that;
There's nothing like a friendly chat.
A motorcycle cop, you see,
Just dotes on sociability.

Motorist:
I know exactly how you feel
All day upon a motor wheel;
I know at heart you're very kind—
Go on, dear sir, and speak your mind!

Traffic Cop:
Well, sir, I merely wish to state
You haven't any license plate—
You have no markers, front or rear—
You haven't registered this year!

Motorist:
I haven't any plates, you say?
I noticed that the other day;
I realize I need 'em, yet
Year after year I quite forget.

Traffic Cop:
If I might ask it, sir, of you
I'd like to see your license, too.
There's something in the law, my son,
That says you ought to carry one.

Motorist:
I left it home quite carelessly,
But thanks, sir, for reminding me;
It's four years old, as I recall,
But still its something, after all.

Traffic Cop:
Quite so, and now I hate to add
Your driving style is very bad;
I saw you just a while ago
Run down six people in a row.

Motorist:
Did I do that? I'm sorry, sir;
I don't see how such things occur;
I beg of you, good fellow, please
Extend them my apologies.

Traffic Cop:
A thing like that I might condone
But you shrieked through a quiet zone;
You tore right through a school zone, too,
And killed a child and maybe two.
Such things as this I hate to say
To you on such a lovely day.
It hurts my feelings like the deuce—
I hope you have a good excuse.

Motorist:
Now that's the spirit, and from me
Accept thanks for your courtesy;
To take me in would be the bunk—
I couldn't help it . . . I am drunk!

Traffic Cop:
I thought so. Well, go on your way
And don't drink any more today . . .
So long! Good luck! And pleasant weather!

A NEEDED REFORM.

More than 150,000 people signed the petition to legalize betting at New York race tracks. A big percentage of these are people who probably are tired of being knocked down and trampled on by the hordes of bookmakers and their assistants at New York race tracks.

Mr. Ponzi, who got out of jail recently, served 11 years for doing what thousands of people thought was a National custom during the boom era.

The New York City commissioner of accounts finds that no audits were made of department accounts under Tammany. He doesn't seem to realize that the average Tammany man thinks an audit is a tropical bird in five letters.

Senators Admit Interceding For Silverman, 'Army Trader'

ing and, representing himself as being a citizen of New Jersey and one of my constituents, said that he was interested in the sale of certain materials to the Army and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

"I treated the incident in the same manner, and as a matter of office routine, as I have done in countless other instances where constituents have come to me, as their representative in the United States Senate, to seek information of various officials or otherwise help them in a purely routine way.

"I personally had no dealings with Mr. Silverman or anyone else, nor, in the personal sense, the slightest interest, directly or indirectly, in either Mr. Silverman or his undertakings."

Barbour put into the record a letter he wrote to Woodring on January 15, telling of the plan of the Breecot Co., of which Silverman is an official, to sell back to the War Department underwear which he had previously bought from the department.

He also called attention to the agreement that Silverman was to be allowed to purchase surplus supplies in the future. He pointed out that the Breecot Co. had made such a contract with the department in December.

Cites "Apparent Savings."

"I would be very grateful," the letter continued, "if you would advise me the present status of this deal, the impediment existing therein, if any; particularly in view of the apparent savings to the Government if the transaction is consummated as contemplated."

On the same date, Barbour wrote the following letter to Woodring:

"Last spring in the midst of the rush for the purchase of clothing and other supplies for the Civilian Conservation Corps by the Army, a policy was announced to the effect that the Army would not repurchase materials previously sold by them for use of the Civilian Conservation Corps. This apparently in spite of the fact that similar materials still in the warehouses of the Army were being issued to troops and enrolled members of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

"I would be grateful, indeed, if you would advise me the premise upon which this policy was instituted and why the policy should be continued, and wherein the advantage to the Government lies through pursuit of this policy."

The memoranda given Barbour by Silverman called attention to the policy of the War Department in not repurchasing equipment, and said that this policy had cost the Government at least $3,000,000 in connection with three transactions in which his company was interested.

"There is no reason for a continuation of this policy which is plainly detrimental to the interest of the Government and public policy," Silverman's memorandum said.

The second memorandum asked Barbour to find out about the underwear deal, declaring it would save the Government $750,000.

Letter From Copeland.

In conclusion, the memorandum said:

"We are attaching hereto a copy of a letter from Senator Royal Copeland written when this negotiation was originally entered into."

The memorandum was signed "The Breecot Company." The Copeland letter was not put into the record.

After telling the Senate that he was "one of those who sent an inquiry," Senator Reynolds said:

"Some weeks ago I was informed that a purchase was about to be made pertaining to equipment and supplies for the War Department. At that particular time, I was informed that the Government was about to be occasioned to make an expenditure of $750,000, which it should not make because, according to the contentions of those with whom I conversed, a saving of $750,000 could be made.

"As a consequence thereof, being a member of the Committee on Military Affairs, I became interested, because I was desirous of being instrumental, or, at least helpful, in saving the Government $750,000 if something of that sort could be accomplished."

Following is the letter Reynolds sent to Woodring:

"I am advised there is a matter pending in your department with reference to a suggested purchase of wool underwear from the firm of J. Silverman in New York City. In view of the tremendous difference in price at which this lot of underwear is purchasable from the above firm as compared to what the Army is now paying for similar materials, I would request that the War Department give to this particular matter very serious consideration.

Asks Woodring for Reasons.

"I am informed that purchase of underwear from the Silverman company would save the Government at least $750,000 and if there is any reason whatsoever why this enormous saving should not be made for the Government, I should like to be advised, with reasons clearly set out."

Meanwhile, the District grand jury investigating War Department contracts is in recess until Monday. The jury is expected to hear Woodring when it reconvenes. In addition, it will hear Ralph T. O'Neil, former national commander of the American Legion, and Robert W. Lyons, New York lawyer. Both have asked permission to explain their connection with War Department contracts.

Raw Materials' Cost in Ratio To Gold Price

General Commodity Level Lags, but Reaches 1931 Status.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Feb. 22.—Statisticians studying effects of abandonment of the gold standard by the United States find that the dollar price of sensitive raw commodities has been swept upward approximately as much as the gold price has been advanced.

The general wholesale commodity price level, however, has advanced little more than a quarter as much. But it has pushed up to the highest level since the spring of 1931, after having fallen well under the levels of the years immediately preceding the World War, in fact, to the lowest since 1906. Currently, it approximates the price area of the end of 1915.

Sensitive world staples, including cotton, rubber and tin, which are particularly responsive to changes in the value of the dollar in terms of other currencies, were expected to reflect promptly new monetary developments.

But the general price level, as reflected in the Bureau of Labor index of wholesale quotations for 784 items, is based very largely on goods which are almost wholly produced and consumed within the United States, and are, therefore, not sensitive, immediately, at least, to changes in the world value of the dollar.

Since the price of gold was fixed on January 31 at $35, and the value of the dollar stabilized at 59.06 per cent of its old parity, there has been a slight rise in prices, but statisticians agree it is probably too early to draw any conclusions.

The price of gold, raised from $20.67 an ounce to $35, or approximately 70 per cent, compares with a jump in sensitive raw staples, as measured by Moody's index of 15 principle commodities, of approximately 75 per cent, since speculative quarters concluded that the United States was leaving the gold standard. In contrast, the general commodity level is up only about 20 per cent.

Pacific Ports Resume Trade With Soviet

Soviet Steamer Gets Salt Cargo on First Call in 17 Years.

San Francisco (U.P.).—Arrival and departure of the first steamer flying the flag of Soviet Russia ever seen at Pacific Coast ports has stimulated interest in the potentialities of commerce between San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle, and Vladivostok.

Not in 17 years had a ship flying the Russian flag entered American ports of the Pacific. Never before had a steamer flying the flag of the U. S. S. R. entered Pacific ports.

Possible War Cargo.

The Karise, manned by a Russian captain and crew, departed for Vladivostok with a cargo of San Francisco Bay refined salt, destined for Siberian fisheries. San Francisco editorial writers pointed out, incidentally, that it was sufficiently refined to be used in the manufacture of chlorine gas.

It was the fifth cargo of salt shipped from San Francisco to Vladivostok. The four previous shipments went by American boats.

J. A. Lambert, head of the San Francisco office of Amtorg, said the Karise will be used by the Soviet Union Fur Trust as a supply ship or feeder for transpacific liners plying between here and Vladivostok.

Russia Plans to Pay Cash.

Pacific Coast interest in Russian trade was further stimulated by Lambert's announcement that Soviet Russia aspires to no long term credits here. Instead, he said, she intends, so far as possible, to pay cash for her purchases.

Lambert said Russia's credit plans for United States purchases were divided into three groups.

For consumer goods, such as textiles, she will ask the usual short term credits. For so-called producer goods, such as machinery, she will ask the three-year credit she now receives from Germany and other European nations. But for the millions of dollars in transportation equipment, including several thousand locomotives, Lambert said it was proposed to pay cash.

Reece Defense Opens At Nashville Today

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 22 (AP).—The defense will open tomorrow in the case of J. I. Reece, accused of stealing $100,000 in bonds from the State insurance department.

After more than two weeks of testimony, during which Attorney General Richard M. Atkinson and Seth M. Walker, counsel employed by Gov. McAlister to assist in the prosecution, clashed frequently in a dispute over authority, the State rested shortly after noon.

Texans Hold Suspect In $200,000 Robbery

Dallas, Feb. 22 (AP).—An unidentified man was held incummunicado today as Texas Rangers and the State atorney general's staff sought to connect him with the $200,000 robbery of a stock exchange messenger in New York City last May.

A Dallas atorney said he had been informed the man was taken into custody in Oklahoma City and brought to Texas without extradition papers.

Senate Ignores Long Charges, Women Claim

Louisiana Group Attacks Upper House on Fraud Complaints.

Another petition from the Women's Committee of Louisiana, charging the Senate with "deliberately ignoring the fraud and corruption" of Senator Huey P. Long, was received yesterday and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

"* * * This accused senator," the petition said of Long, "is wielding such nefarious influence in the Senate as to put that body in the position of not only preventing the public exposure of his fraud and corruption, but of condoning it.

"Thus is presented to the public the farcical picture of the Senate, on the one hand, very properly investigating at this time the fraud, corruption or reprehensible conduct charged by it against private citizens of the United States, and, on the other hand, deliberately ignoring the fraud and corruption which has been practiced by one of its own members."

Details Long Fight.

The petition, which was submitted by Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, detailed the long fight for removal of Senator Long and his colleague, Senator John S. Overman. It charged that Long had blocked investigation from the first by having the case transferred to the Committee on the Judiciary, "of which he is such an influential member."

After hearings in New Orleans, the Judiciary Committee reported the Committee on Privileges and Elections had jurisdiction, the petition related. Hence, the case was transferred back, but "notwithstanding this action," Mrs. Hammond continued, the fact that questions raised by Long are still unanswered by the Judiciary Committee is being used to prevent public action on the charges.

Attacks Closed Hearings.

She declared that a scheduled hearing February 14 was held behind closed doors, in deference to the Committee on the Judiciary, which has yet to decide on the questions whether the charges are privileged or receivable by the Senate, and also that objection was raised to the Women's Committee counsel. Until the questions are decided, she quoted the Elections Committee chairman, all meetings will be executive.

"Thus," the petition alleges, "it was Mr. Long who, by his strategy of having the charges against him referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, supplied the excuse for the Committee on Privileges and Elctions to hold only closed hearings—in effect, no hearings at all—until the Committee on the Judiciary reports, if it ever does report, and until the Senate shall have decided, if it ever does decide, upon Mr. Long's 'questions,'"

FACA Opens Study Into Liquor Costs

Questionnaire Aims to Cut Price Spread.

The Federal Alcohol Control Administration yesterday set to work to learn how much it costs to manufacture and rectify whisky and to produce gin, the Associated Press reported.

Forms for submitting cost and other data by March 10, covering the fermentation, distillation, aging and rectification of whisky and the cost of manufacturing gin were sent out to members of the distilled spirits and the distilled spirits rectifying industries by Harris E. Willingham, assistant director of the administration.

Accompanying the forms was a letter asking for "immediate and careful consideration."

British Confirm Iron Sales to Japan

Say Europe's Huge Nitrate Orders Are for Farming.

Liverpool, England, Feb. 22 (AP).—Liverpool shippers today confirmed reports from Panama of heavy shipments to Japan of scrap iron, steel and cotton, but said they were unaware of big movements of nitrates to Europe. Japan recently has been a big buyer of old British ships, they said, but had been in the market for such vessels for several years.

London traders said heavy nitrate shipments through the Panama Canal were due to an increased demand by agriculture.

Official figures released at Colon, C. Z., showed that Chilean nitrate shipments to Europe this year were 700 per cent greater than those during a similar period in 1933.

Schacht Is Fearful Of Cash Juggling

New Devaluation Danger Seen by German.

Berlin, Feb. 22 (AP).—Fears that the United States and Great Britain would meet any German financial move "with further devaluation" were cited by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Reichsbank president, today as one reason for opposing "financial experiments."

In an address before 60 bank executives—whom he warned to catch the Nazi spirit or lose their jobs—Dr. Schacht maintained that "stability of conditions is fundamental for all successful economic management."

"This government will embark upon no financial experiment," the central bank president asserted. "Its will is to retain the purchasing power for the worker and the saver."

FEDERAL employes killed two birds with one stone yesterday when at various parties and dances they honored the first President, while at the same time celebrating the Senate's action of Wednesday, which has every indication of being the death blow to the well-known 15 per cent.

BAKER.

It looks to this column as if the 5 per cent promised for the more than 80,000 Federal workers here in Washington won't be hoarded. Downtown stores, open yesterday morning, were crowded, indicating how the city's prosperity will get a boost with the addition to the Government pay roll.

Help Replace Workers.

A civil service stabilization committee has been appointed by the District Federation of the National Federation of Federal Employes, with L. E. Barbour, of the Bureau of Standards, as chairman. This committee will try to replace in the Government service members of the organization who have been dropped or furloughed.

All locals of the National Federation are preparing lists of such persons. The lists will be sent to Henry G. Nolda, secretary of Local No. 2, N. F. F. E., who already has had several requests for such lists from the Civil Service Commission.

A big event is the A. A. A. dance for tomorrow night at the Roosevelt Hotel. It will begin at 10 and last until 1 o'clock in the morning, with Bernie Jarboe's Nite Hawks making the melody.

Miss Ruth Prosperi, selected as the most popular girl in the A. A. A., will be hostess. Assistant chairmen will be Helen Gotnwaite and Hall Fleming. Other committee members include Fred Lambertson, Henry Barber, Joseph Hoover, Howard Peters, Jack Donohue, Glenn Dewey, Lon Shields and Elmo Seger.

This is a want ad. The Marine Corps Golf League would like to interest some of the other Government departments in a competitive league for gutta-percha knocking during the summer (if it ever comes).

WELCOME is the criticism of William A. Weber, who writes that The Diary did not mention one of Montana's prominent sons on "Montana Day" in the column. Mr. Weber refers to Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms of the House of Representatives.

As Mr. Weber says: "There are 430 Representatives, but only one sergeant at arms. The sergeant at arms of the House is elected with the some solemnity as is the Speaker. Montana is proud of Kenneth Romney."

Bowling has found the fancy of a number of women workers at the Tariff Commission. Among those who are in regular training are Mrs. Margaret Wilbar, Mrs. Mary Keesecker, Mrs. Alice Poston, Mrs. Lila Scott, Mrs. Rita Cavanaugh, Mrs. Bertha Robertson and the Misses Sarah Cohn, Bessie Gries, Grace Quimby and Helen Rowe. Good scores have been rolled, though all are novices. Highest of the week, 95, was made by Mrs. Wilbar.

One of the important events of the celebration of George Washington's Birthday was the All States Ball last night at the Washington Hotel. Many Federal employes were among the throng which heard Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who was guest speaker.

Tonight the Willard Hotel will be the scene of the Colonial Ball of the Virginia State Society. I. C. Buchanan, Army Air Corps, is chairman of the floor and music committee.

Two Federal scientists received the degree of doctor of philosophy last night at the winter convocation of George Washington University. They are Joseph Everett Alicata, junior zoologist, Bureau of Animal Industry, and Henry Stevens, research fellow of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils.

Dr. Alicata is a native of Carlentini, Italy. He has attended Grand Island College and Northwestern University. Dr. Stevens was born in Vermont. He is a graduate of Syracuse University and the University of Wisconsin.

The checker tournament of the Identification Unit of the Division of Investigation, Justice, has been completed. The Class A winner was G. E. Syphers with F. McCullough and L. Beckstead, second and third. In Class B, the winner was L. Shankin, with T. Griffith and F. Major, second and third.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name in this column is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary Editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, three vaudeville acts; screen, Ramon Navarro in "The Cat and the Fiddle"), or to Loew's Palace (Greta Garbo and John Gilbert in "Queen Christina"), or to Loew's Columbia (Jackie Cooper in "The Lone Cowboy"). Persons whose names appear on holidays call the next day.

Postettes.

The engagement of Miss Naomi L. Bersh, RFC, to Abraham H. Levin, Census, has been announced. They will be married at an early date.

J. C. Carroll, RFC, correspondence section chief, is spending a few days in New York City.

These three persons are recent appointees at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation: Cecil Duncan, of West Virginia; W. N. Engles, of Georgia, and Howard Haines, of Texas. They are in the accounting section.

Thomas Whitcroft, Navy, will make his customary week-end trip to Philadelphia.

Walsh to Lecture On 1914 Conditions

Opening his tenth annual series of public lectures on "Capitalism at the Crossroads," Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, will speak at 8:30 tonight in Gaston Hall.

Dr. Walsh's series from year to year have dealt with the Russian revolution and its world effects. In the present series he will deal with capitalism in Russia and the United States and with the theories of Communism, Fascism and National Socialism in the Third Reich. In a later lecture, the speaker will discuss President Roosevelt's New Deal.

His lecture tonight, "The World Scene in 1914," will lay a general background for the series. Others will be given on successive Friday evenings at the same hour.

Boy Accused of Taking Purse From Motorist

After allegedly jumping on the running board of an automobile driven by Mrs. Rowena Wood, 3618 Connecticut avenue northwest, and snatching her pocket book from the front seat, John B. Williams, colored, 13, of 427 Ridge street northwest, was arrested yesterday and identified.

The boy was arrested a few minutes after Mrs. Wood complained to police. She said he was one of three youths who jumped on her car near Fourteenth and R streets northwest.

Only 2 Drinks

But Abstainer Since 1920 Found Them Potent.

William Gill, 50, tasted liquor for the first time since 1920 and yesterday found himself in Police Court charged with intoxication.

"I took just two drinks, your honor," he told Judge Gus A. Schuldt, "and the next thing I knew I was in jail. It was good liquor."

"What kind?" the court queried.

"They said it was Bourbon."

"Well, the drinks must have been pretty big, but if it was your first drink in all those years I'll suspend sentence. Be careful in the future."

New Treasury Offer Is Less Than Maturity

(Associated Press.)

This path was marked clearly yesterday in an announcement of a $75,000,000 offering of six-month bills. The bills will be dated February 28 and sold to highest bidders.

Treasury bill sales are a weekly routine, with new bills being sold to raise cash to meet maturing issues. But the importance of today's announcement was that for the first time in many months, the new offering is smaller in amount than the maturity.

Adds to Cash Balance.

The February 28 maturity is $100,000,000. In almost every recent case, especially during money market uncertainty, the Treasury has borrowed more than the amount of bills falling due, thereby adding to its working cash balance.

The decision to pay part of the February 28 maturity out of cash already on hand was believed to indicate Morgenthau's determination to convert some of the Government's big short-term indebtedness into long-term paper. To do so will lessen the Government's frequent trips to the money market and probably encourage, some officials believe, flow of money into industrial channels.

The Treasury has a billion and a quarter dollars in three and six-month bills outstanding. Converting some of this into long-term obligations was a course recommended by Earle Baile, recent financial assistant to Morgenthau, who helped map this year's $10,000,000,000 borrowing program.

The Government's next large maturity is March 15. On that day, $460,000,000 is due. It was thought likely Morgenthau may employ a bond issue to raise cash for this maturity and also add to the Treasury's cash balance.

Sets Aside Gold Profit.

This balance, while at a record figure of $5,000,000,000, includes $2,800,000,000 of gold profit which the Treasury has said it does not intend to use for current expenses. This leaves only $2,200,000,000 for every-day needs, a sum small in comparison with projected recovery spending of nearly $7,000,000,000 between now and June 30.

In April a billion of Fourth Liberty bonds falls due. A March bond issue would enable the Treasury to offer Fourth Liberty holders a second opportunity to exchange their maturing bonds for new bonds. This offer was extended once before in October when $1,875,000,000 of Fourth Liberties were called, but only about $900,000,000 were so exchanged.

Dollfuss Praises Socialist Bravery

Ninth Member of Rebel Guard Is Hanged.

Vienna, Feb. 22 (AP).—The conviction that "we must do all we can to heal the open wounds" of civil war was expressed today by Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss.

He paid tribute to the "high bravery" of the Socialists who fought a lost cause in the streets and houses of Austrian cities, declared that Austrian Jews need fear no change in government policy toward them and asserted that a Nazi ultimatum would be answered in due time.

Another member of the Socialist Republican Guard, the ninth within a week, was hanged tonight for participating in the uprising last week.

Eden Is Confident Of Arms Progress

Briton Feels Support of Germany First Step.

Berlin, Feb. 22 (AP).—Capt. Anthony Eden, the British lord privy seal, finished half his circuit of European capitals tonight with Germany considered won over to a British memorandum as the basis for future disarmament negotiations.

He will leave for Rome tomorrow to discuss the arms question with Premier Mussolini and lay before the Italian leader results of his talks here and in Paris.

After concluding his conferences with German statesmen, Ctpt. Eden said that "a common basis has been found."

World War Ace Here in New Plane

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker arrived at Washington Airport yesterday in this plane, the new Douglas DC-1 passenger airliner in which he made a record air-mail run on Monday from Los Angeles to New York in 13 hours and 4 minutes. His trip from New York yesterday took 1 hour and 18 minutes. Rightly called the "Queen of the Skies," the plane is among the most luxurious of recent build.

Mines Bureau Change Made

Roosevelt Order Finishes Shift From Commerce to Interior Rule.

President Roosevelt yesterday completed transfer of the Bureau of Mines from the Commerce to the Interior Department. He informed Congress of the action in a 50-word special message.

When the President consolidated various departments soon after taking office, transfer of the Mines Bureau to the Interior was inadvertently overlooked. Later it was placed under jurisdiction of Secretary Ickes, but its funds were left under control of the Commerce Department.

The order sent to Congress yesterday said:

"Pursuant to the provisions of section 16 of the act of March 3, 1933, as amended by title 3 of the act of March 20, 1933, I am transmitting herewith for the information of the Congress an executive order transferring the Bureau of Mines from the Department of Commerce to the Department of the Interior."

Dog Sled Derby Won By Emil St. Godard

Peterboro, N. H., Feb. 22 (AP).—Emil St. Godard, veteran musher, driving Maj. A. E. Goyette's light, fast team, today easily won the Peterboro Dog Sled Derby. His time was 37 minutes 15 seconds over a 7½-mile course.

Cross-Country Record Plane Is Shown Here

Flying from Newark Airport to Washington in an hour and 18 minutes, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker brought the latest in commercial transport airplanes to the Capital yesterday for an inspection by Government officials.

The giant Wright-powered Douglas transport is the same ship in which Rickenbacker and a party flew from Los Angeles to New York last Monday in the record-breaking time of 13 hours and 4 minutes.

The ship was designed to carry 14 passengers, mail and express on the routes of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc. However, with mail contracts canceled, the fleet plane may not be placed into service for some time. Forty additional ships of this type are under construction at the Douglas plant, Santa Monica, Calif.

Several demonstration flights were made yesterday from Washington Airport with newspapermen and Government officials. Others are scheduled for today.

The new plane is equipped with a sound-proofed cabin, wing-flap air brakes, Sperry automatic pilot, retractable landing gear and two supercharged 700-horsepower Wright Cyclone engines. It has a rated top speed of 217 miles an hour.

Jack Frye, vice president of T. W. A., served as chief pilot on the flight yesterday. Others in the party included Thomas A. Morgan and Albert Lodwick, of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation; D. W. Tomlinson, T. Park Hay and Joseph Brennan, officials of T. W. A.

The public is invited to inspect the plane at Washington Airport today, according to Capt. Rickenbacker. No plans have been made for its immediate departure.

Midyear Rites Graduate 178 From G. W. U.

Dr. Moulton, Dr. Marvin Address Class on Changing World.

Even in this age of bewildering changes there is hope for the development of the individual, Dr. Harold Glen Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, told the midyear class of 178 George Washington University graduates last night at Constitution Hall.

"It does not seem to me that the development of the individual need necessarily be arrested," he said. "It is, I believe, possible to extend greatly the field of Governmental supervision—over industrial codes, for example—without destroying the necessary incentives to progress.

"It is possible," he pointed out, "to place competition on a new plane, without abolishing it. We may establish new boundaries within which private initiative shall operate—by establishing on the one hand minimum standards to which all members of a trade must conform, and, on the other, by preventing the extremes which have so often characterized the system of unrestricted private initiative.

Dr. Moulton observed that this latter fundamental consideration is not being ignored under the New Deal. As a source of greater concern, he pointed to new National policies.

Dr. Marvin Speaks.

"If governments are to formulate or administer economic policies with practical wisdom, it seems obvious that the accumulating experience of the world with reference to kindred policies should be assembled and analyzed," he declared.

"In the age of laissez faire, statecraft was a simple matter," he told the graduates. "In the age which lies before us it presents an incomparable challenge."

Also discussing the changing world, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, told the graduates that "you are of the day in which you live—the best day the world has had to offer."

"The world needs what you have to offer," he told the members of the class, "and I can assure you that the world needs more laborers today than it has ever needed."

At the conclusion of the addresses Dr. Marvin conferred the degree of doctor of laws upon Dr. Moulton. The exercises were supplemented with a program of organ music by John Russell Mason.

Representative Succeeds Starbuck; Baltimore Postmaster Chosen.

Anning S. Prall, Democratic representative of the lower portion of New York City for the last 12 years, yesterday was nominated by President Roosevelt to succeed William D. L. Starbuck as a member of the Federal Radio Commission.

The appointment—a personal selection of the President—will nenessitate Mr. Prall's retirement from Congress. But whether he will resign immediately, in that Mr. Starbuck's term expires today, or await the end of this session before assuming his new office, he has not decided.

The radio commission appointmenf was contained in a lengthy list of nominations transmitted to the Senate, including that of Fred W. Catlett, of the State of Washington, as a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and more than 100 postmasters.

The President named Ernest Green to be postmaster at Baltimore, thus promoting to the titular position an assistant and acting postmaster who has long been in Government service. A popular movement in favor of his appointment, which is not political, has been reported at Baltimore.

The President also asked the promotions to rear admirals of three captains in the Navy: Adolphus Andrews, Manley H. Simons and William S. Pye.

Mass to Be Held Today for Albert

Catholic University Shrine Will Be Scene.

Solemn pontifical mass of requiem for Albert, King of the Belgians, will be celebrated in the crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University today at 8 a. m.

The services will be conducted by His Excellency the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States. Eulogies will be delivered by the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University, and Bishop of the Titular See of Modra.

Among the invited guests are President Roosevelt, Ambassador Paul May of the Belgian Embassy, Vice President Garner, Justices of the Supreme Court, members of the Cabinet, of Congress, and the Diplomatic Corps.

Mexican Town Wars on Chinese

Score Forced to Leave After They Cut Prices.

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 22 (AP).—A Mexican Nationalist drive designed to force all Chinese out of Ensenada, Lower California, went on today, although Chinese merchants looked to officials for protection and protested against what they termed discrimination against them in favor of Japanese.

There was no violence, although more than a score of Chinese were reported to have left Ensenada last night for the safety of the border cities of Tia Juana and Mexicali.

Snow, Allah's Blanket, Awes African Natives

Bengazi, Cirenaica, Africa, Feb. 22 (AP).—Hordes of awestruck natives formed caravans from the lowlands today to see "the blanket of Allah"—snow which covered the hinterland of the Plateau of South Bengazi for the first time in the recollection of the oldest inhabitant.

Skull Fractured in Fall.

Alexander Murphy, colored, 61, suffered a fractured neck yesterday when he fell down a flight of stairs at his home, 111 N street southeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital in a critical condition.

Chicago State Move Started

Illinois Commsision Urged to Study Possibility of New U. S. Star.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22 (AP).—Illinois legislators selected Washington's birthday to start a move which might increase the number of stars in Old Glory to 49 and more.

Creation of a commission to study the possibility of establishing a separate city-State of Chicago was asked today in a resolution introduced in the Legislature by Clinton P. Searle, Republican, of Rock Island.

A similar move was proposed recently in Washington, where it was suggested that Hawaii be admitted to Statehood.

The question has been discussed frequently in connection with several large cities including New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles. Suggestions also have been made that Texas and California be divided.

Several obstacles stand in the way of such city-States. In both Illinois and New York such new States would be planned to include present metropolitan areas which would require Congressional action. Chicago probably would want to include parts of three present States, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana.

Similarly New York would like to take in the river ports of New Jersey, parts of Westchester County in New York, parts of Connecticut and all of Long Island.

Constance Cummings Foils Auto Thieves

Hollywood, Feb. 22 (AP).—Constance Cummings, movie actress, recovered her automobile today, after it had been stolen, but it cost her a bruised hip.

She reported she saw the car with three young men in it and jumped to the running board, but was pushed off. Others pursued the car and found it abandoned.

Doomed Slayer's Wife Asks Mercy

Seeks Clemency on Behalf of Unborn Child.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Robert H. Wiles, whose husband is sentenced to die in the electric chair March 12 for killing young H. H. Harris, jr., today appealed to the people of South Carolina for clemency for him, saying she was an expectant mother.

Gov. Blackwood has indicated that he will not intervene.

Harris, 15-year-old schoolboy, was kidnaped and slain last December. Wiles confessed and said he intended asking $1,000 ransom from the boy's father, a chain store executive.

Program at Webster School.

The Business Women's Council will be entertained by the pupils of the Marjorie Webster School in a program of dramatic and musical numbers at its meeting in the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, February 27, at 8 p. m.

Arctic Huskies Race Beneath Skyscrapers

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—With the towering sky scraper apartments of Manhattan as a backdrop, Harry Drennan, of Buck Hills Falls, Pa., today drove his team of Arctic huskies to an easy victory in a dog sled race in Central Park.

With some 2,000 youngsters cheering him on, Drennan finished the five miles on a half-mile oval in the park, two in 44 minutes 10 seconds.

Kitchens Boy Convicted In Killing of Father

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 22 (AP).—Gerald Kitchens, 16, was convicted here today of the slaying of his father, T. J. Kitchens, Glascock County tax receiver, last September 8. The jury recommended mercy. Sentence will be pronounced later.

The elder Kitchens, partially paralyzed, was struck with an automobile crank as he sat in a chair.

Nation Warms Up As Freeze Wanes

Slush Follows Snow in Many Sections.

Snowdrifts changed to slush in many parts of the country yesterday, as the atmosphere grew steadily warmer, according to the Associated Press.

Financial Writer Dies in Taxi.

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Charles W. Storm, 46, financial writer and editor, died in a taxicab yesterday while on his way to the city from Yonkers, N. Y. He was editor and vice president of the News Service of Wall Street.

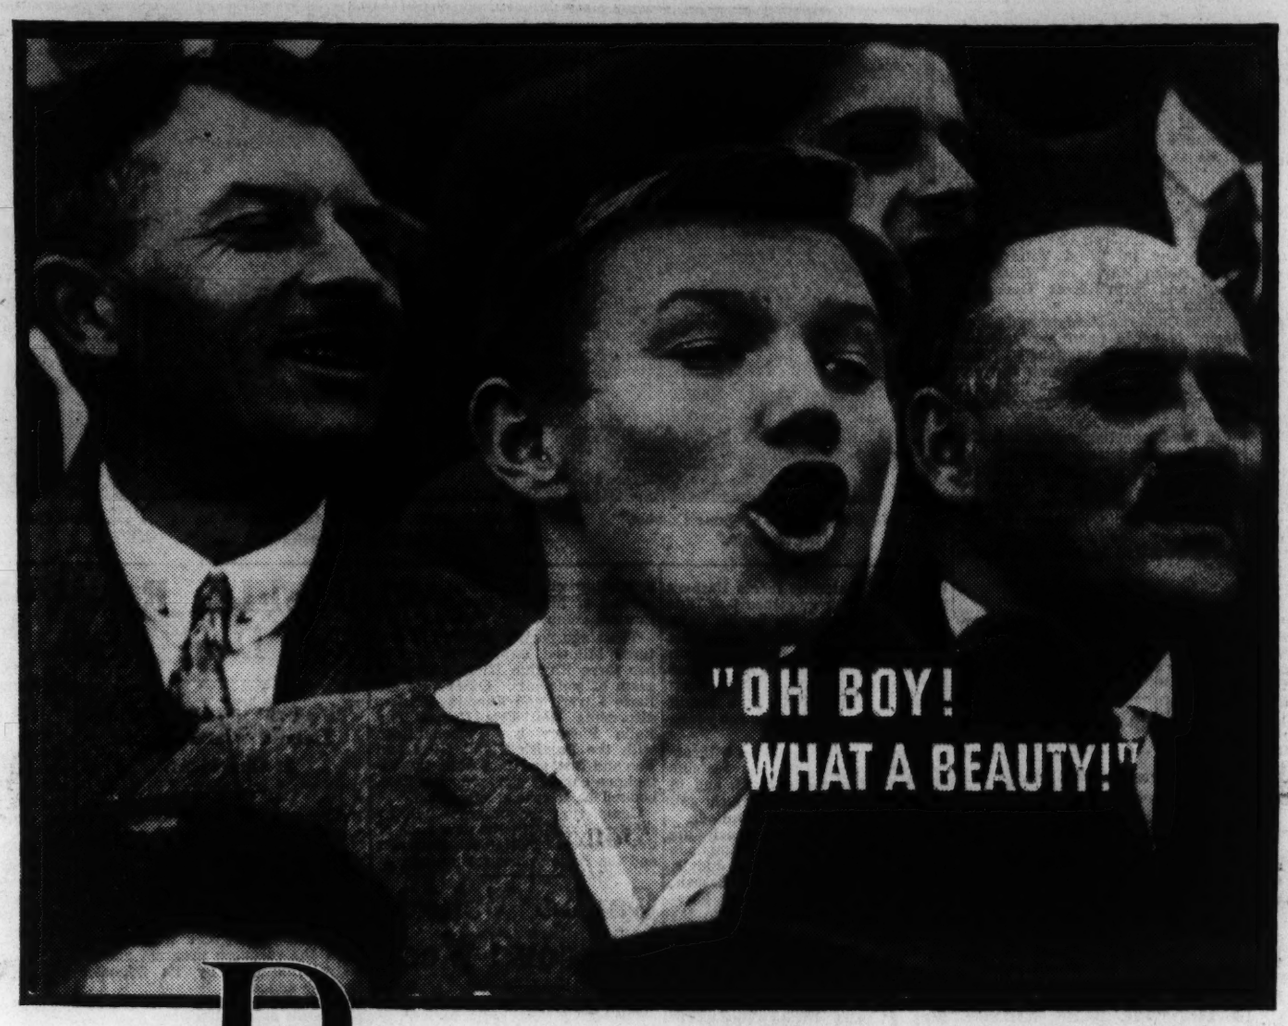
"AN EYE TO THE FUTURE — AN EAR TO THE GROUND"

—this describes General Motors' policy, a policy by which the public is given what it wants in better cars year after year, and yet is safely protected against ill-timed or dubious experiments



PROGRESS

out of the common sense of the common people

IT IS no secret that the new cars of General Motors this season are riding the flood tide of popular approval.

We think they deserve to, being the ablest automobiles and the finest values we have so far been able to offer.

They represent progress, in every direction that contributes to the pleasure and usefulness of an automobile.

That the marked departures this year in our cars are sound and successful is only in part our achievement.

To a very substantial degree their source and perfection is the common sense of the common people.

The three outstanding advancements in modern automobiles — NO-DRAFT VENTILATION, KNEE-ACTION WHEELS, STREAMLINE DESIGN —are each and all General Motors contributions!

The results confirm once more that he travels farthest in the right direction who is willing to listen as well as to lead.

This medallion commemorates the twenty-fifth anniversary of General Motors and of its public-minded interest in the advancement of motor transportation

New Screen and Stage Programs Being Introduced Locally Today and Tomorrow

Theaters Will Present Extra Holiday Shows

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

In anticipation of the holiday crowds that customarily throng the theaters on Washington's Birthday, plans have been made by the local theater managements to observe what in many instances comprise completely revised schedules of performances today.

At RKO-Keith's, for example, the doors will be thrown open to the public at 9:15 a. m., with the first performance beginning at 9:30. The Earle similarly has advanced its usual "time table" to permit the presentation of five de luxe performances with complete stage bill.

Attention is also directed to the fact that a special holiday matinee performance of "The School for Husbands" is being presented at the National Theater this afternoon at 2:20 o'clock.

Similar policy has been adopted in the neighborhood pictures houses, where matinees will be given and continuous performances presented thereafter until closing at night.

It will be the part of discretion, therefore, to consult published schedules of performances before launching forth upon a day or evening of amusement seeking, in order to avoid arriving at the theater at precisely the wrong time and finding access to desirable seats difficult.

The attractions for today and the new week are hereafter set forth on this page.

George Raft, Carole Lombard in "Bolero"—Earle.

Gloria Stuart, John Boles in "Beloved"—Rialto.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—President Samuel P. Duke announced today that 71 scholarships, paying $15 monthly, will be granted to students at the State Teachers College here.

The scholarships are being financed by a grant of $1,000 monthly from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. At least 25 per cent will go to girls not now enrolled in college.

The allotment of jobs for each college may equal, 10 per cent of its full-time enrollment of students of college grade last October.

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.). With a total freshman enrollment of 61, of which 22 are women students, Washington College has added 12 more students to its freshman class as the second semester opens, the added enrollment being made possible partly by the new Federal aid plan for needy students.

Novarro Here In Person and On the Screen

Ramon Novarro, romantic star of the screen, gifted concert artist and possessor of one of the country's finest singing voices, comes in person to Loew's Fox Theater, as well as to the screen, with Jeanette MacDonald, in "The Cat and the Fiddle," on the program starting tomorrow.

His Capital engagement marks one of his only two footlight appearances in the United States on this trip East. In addition to singing several infectious melodies from "The Cat and the Fiddle," and indulging in some Hollywood intimacies, Novarro is expected to favor Fox patrons with a most pleasing period of entertainment.

While Novarro will be the chief magnet, the Fox stage will bristle with other talent, including the Broadway revue stars, the Three Ritz Brothers, in comedy, songs and novel dances; Gracolla and Theodore, in dance fantasies and the international mimic and pantomimist, Georges Compo.

Uniting Ramon Novarro and the lovely Jeanette MacDonald, two of cinemaland's foremost romantic singing stars, "The Cat and the Fiddle" offers one of the most memorable photoplays of the year.

It is high romance, flavored with heart drama and spiced with some of the most glorious music of recent years. It is brought to the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the stage success by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach.

Frank Morgan, Jean Hersholt, the delightfully droll Charles Butterworth, Vivienne Segal, another splendid vocalist, Earl Oxford, Frank Conroy and Henry Armetta give commendable support to the stars.

Phil Lampkin wields the baton for another special overture by the Fox orchestra. A comedy, news and short subjects comprise the supplementary program.

Jackie Cooper Columbia Star For Next Week

Jackie Cooper is the star of a brand-new kind of outdoor romance in which he teams up with another "champ" in the picture, "The Lone Cowboy," which Loew's Columbia Theater will feature, starting tomorrow.

It is a story written and directed by Paul Sloane and was suggested by Will James' famous book.

It unfolds the dramatic narrative of Scooter O'Neal, a wide-eyed kid from the Chicago tenements, who is sent West. There he forms a strange partnership with a hardened killer who is in search of the man who has stolen his wife. Scooter's attempts to prevent a murder, at the risk of his own life, win him a lifelong place in the heart of the man who has learned to love him, and who, to Scooter, is the "greatest guy in the world."

News events, a comedy and short subjects are added.

Gable, Colbert Seen Together At RKO-Keith's

Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, two of Hollywood's most popular stars, are teamed for the first time in the Columbia Picture, "It Happened One Night," currently showing at RKO-Keith's, with the doors opening today at the early hour of 9:15 a. m., following the generous turnout last midnight for the special world premiere showing.

Gable skyrocketed to fame a couple of years ago following his appearance with Norma Shearer in "A Free Soul," and overnight became the most popular star on the screen. Following this sensational screen debut, Gable was given the leading roles opposite practically all of Hollywood's outstanding feminine stars.

He appeared agian with Shearer in "Strange Interlude," and with Joan Crawford in "Dance, Fools, Dance," "Possessed," and most recently in "Dancing Lady." He was costarred with Jean Harlow in "Red Dust" and in "Hold Your Man," with Helen Hayes in "White Sister," and with Greta Garbo in "Susan Lenox."

Miss Colbert's stardom and popularity is based upon her splendid work in such productions as "Sign of the Cross," "The Torch Singer," "Three-Cornered Moon," "I Cover the Waterfront," and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

In the supporting cast of this Columbia production, directed by Frank Capra, who also was responsible for "Lady For A Day," are Roscoe Karns and Walter Connolly.

John Boles in Music Epic on Rialto Screen

Back to his first love, music, John Boles returned to the Rialto Theater screen in "Beloved" last night at a midnight performance that prefaced the week's engagement of the picture, which begins today.

Mr. Boles is sharing starring honors with the lovely Gloria Stuart in a film that is hailed as the finest musical romance of the season. Victor Schertzinger directed the production and he and Howard Jackson wrote the music and lyrics.

The story covers a span of 80-odd years and the world events included in this broad scope are the Austrian revolution, the American Civil War, the Spanish-American War, the World War and the present day.

"Beloved" provides Mr. Boles with one of the greatest singing roles of his career.

The Rialto completes its program with selected shorter subjects and Graham McNamee as the talking reporter with the latest Universal News.

Zane Grey Hit With Ace Cast Begins at Met

Opening today, Washington's Birthday, "The Last Round-Up," Paramount's picturization of Zane Grey's novel, "The Border Legion," will be the new screen attraction at Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater. America's favorite radio and stage tune, "The Last Round-Up," provides background for the story.

Randolph Scott, Barbara Fritchie, a newcomer to Hollywood, in her first picture; Monte Blue, Fred Kohler and Fuzzy Knight head the imposing cast, which was directed by Henry Hathaway, who has been behind the megaphone on almost all the recent Paramount outdoor romances.

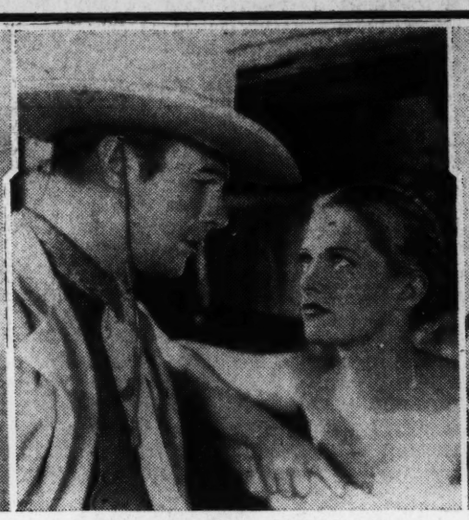
The story, a vivid account of the thieving "Border Legion," opens with a terrific fun fight in which the "legion" is driven from California. Headed by Monte Blue, with Fred Kohler as his right-hand man, they hit for Arizona. En route, Blue rescues Randolph Scott from a mob determined to lynch him for a murder he did not commit.

Now an outlaw, although guilty of no crime, Scott casts his lot with the gang. Later he meets Barbara Fritchie, former sweetheart of Blue who, previous to his bandit days, had jilted him. Scott and Miss Fritchie fall in love, but when Scott attempts to take her away, his plan is frustrated by Blue. When Scott later saves Blue's life, the bandit chieftain takes a liking to the young fellow.

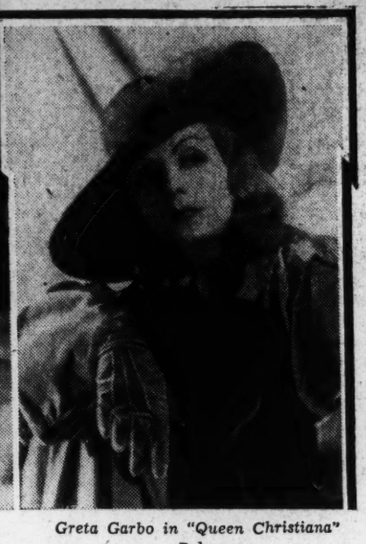
Then, however, develops a three-cornered pursuit of Miss Fritchie by Blue, Kohler and Scott, and in a thrilling finish, amid much gun play, the two lovers are united.

Short reel subjects, including "Pugs and Kisses," a Vitaphone comedy, starring Charles Judels; Borah Minnevitch and His Rascals, and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News, complete the program.

Jackie Cooper in "The Lone Cowboy"—Columbia.



Randolph Scott, Barbara Adams in "Last Round-Up"—Metropolitan.



Greta Garbo in "Queen Christiana"—Palace.

Sally Appears In Fan Number On the Screen

With "Bolero," Paramount's drama of the life of a dancer, based on Ravel's famous musical composition, with George Raft, Carole Lombard and Sally Rand, featured as the screen attraction, and a stage bill headed by Mildred Bailey, radio's Rocking Chair Queen, Warner Bros.' Earle Theater, starting tomorrow, presents a very promising program.

"Bolero," directed by Wesley Ruggles, features Raft as a glamorous dance star who rises to the heights by trampling upon the hearts of his beautiful dancing partners. Carole Lombard carries the leading feminine role, while Sally Rand, the original Chicago World's Fair fan dancer, displays her world-famous fan dance for the first time on the screen. Frances Drake, William Frawley and Gertrude Michael are also featured.

As an ambitious but ruthless mine laborer, Raft plays the role of Raoul de Baere, who rises from his squalid surroundings to become the world's most sensational dancer. Yet, with each move forward, he leaves a broken heart. To him women are just another means of accomplishing his goal. From New York to the European capitals he dances his way into the hearts of all women, discarding them as they become useless to his ambition.

Then two important things happen. He meets a new partner, Carole Lombard, and the World War begins. What follows brings about a stirring climax against a background of Maurice Navel's famous musical composition, "Bolero."

The stage portion of the bill features Mildred Bailey, assisted by her three Rhythm Kings in a program of song hits. Other acts are Earle Lavere and Jimmie O'Brien, dispensing fun; Una Cooper and Rollo Pickert in "Personalities," with the English Tivoli Girls and Vee and Bee, and Ben Blue, the Vitaphone comedy star, who has been booked as a special attraction.

Completing the program will be short-reel subjects, the new issue of the Graham McNamee Newsreel and the Earle orchestral prelude.

Garbo Vehicle A Second Week

With her splendid performance in an appealing role, causing box-office receipts to soar even higher than those established by Mae West, Greta Garbo will continue in "Queen Christina" for another week on the screen of Loew's Palace.

This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer triumph marks Garbo's return to the screen after a two-year absence. the picture, in both story and setting, gives this glamorous star every opportunity for great emotional expression.

John Gilbert is reunited with his screen love of silent days after five years. Excellent support is given by Lewis Stone, Ian Kieth, Elizabeth Young, Reginald Owen, David Torrence, Gustav von Seffyertitz and C. Aubrey Smith.

Beehler Raps New Deal Jobs

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator, fired another broadside today at Senator A. C. Herold (Democrat), Braxton, chairman of the State CWA investigating committee, in a dispute over patronage charges.

Declaring he agreed with Herold "that the recovery program should be administered by its friends," Beehler added:

"The real point is: Who are its friends? The Senator places too much faith in mere labels and lip service. Although I realize fully that the leaders of the Republican party are opposed to the recovery program, and I strenuously oppose them in this, it does not follow that all Republicans are its enemies and all Democrats its friends."

Beehler's statement was in reply to one issued last night by Herold in which the chairman said the relief program should be handled by those "who are thoroughly in accord with the Roosevelt New Deal." The Senator, he asserted, "has yet to produce one single county welfare board with a majority of Republican membership, but where an overwhelming majority of key positions are not held by Democrats."

3,462 Virginia Idle Given Jobs

Federal Office Director Reports for Week.

Richmond, Feb. 22 (AP).—A gain of 3,462 in the number of employed persons in Virginia for the week ended February 17 is reported by George W. Guy, State director of the National Reemployment Service.

These figures do not include the cities of Richmond, Norfolk, Roanoke and South Norfolk, where the reemployment offices are not under the supervision of the State director.

Conley-for-Governor Group Is Organized

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—A Conley-for-Governor Club was organized tonight, when several hundred Democrats gathered at a dinner on the invitation of Dr. J. Hubert Wade, former chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee. The dinner was held at Beaver Creek.

Dr. Charles H. Conley, Frederick, who announced his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination some weeks ago, spoke.

Princess Anne Hospital Funds Asked of PWA

Richmond, Feb. 22 (AP).—An application for $125,000 PWA funds to build a tuberculosis hospital in Princess Anne County to serve the Second Congressional District has been resubmitted to the State advisory board.

The application was made by the Tidewater Tuberculosis Hospital Association of Norfolk.

Use of Almshouse For Transients Hit

Pittsylvania County Not in Favor of Plan.

Danville, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—The board of supervisors of Pittsylvania County will meet Saturday to oppose the plan of the State transient director to open a transient concentration camp for Negroes in the old county almshouse. The county gave the property to the State recently for a game refuge.

Objection to the transient camp is that 200, mostly destitute Negroes taken from freight trains, will be placed there.

A second objection, it was learned from R. G. Carter, board member, is that if conversion of the farm into a game preserve is to provide jobs these should go to Pittsylvania men and not to unemployed imported into the county from elsewhere in Virginia. Carter said that the board had no knowledge of the intention to use the almshouse as a camp until announcement came from Richmond.

Nominations Approved For 6 Postmaster Jobs

Among the nominations for postmaster made here yesterday, applicants from the States of Virginia, North Carolina and Delaware were approved.

Talk Slated On Virginia Early Homes

Mrs. David Tucker Brown to Deliver Lecture March 7.

Robert E. Lee Memorial Association Sponsors Program.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Mrs. David Tucker Brown, of Virginia, will give a lecture, "An Evening in Historic Homes and Gardens of Virginia," in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel at 8:30 o'clock, March 7.

The lecture, sponsored by the District of Columbia committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Association, will be illustrated with stereopticon slides which belong to the Garden Club of Virginia.

Mrs. Louis S. Greene is in charge of the program, and her daughter, Miss Ann Carter Greene, will direct the ushers, who will be Miss Elizabeth Burke, Miss Bettie Peelle, Miss Gertrude Faust, Miss Katherine Braxton Hall, Miss Maryheurs Hall, Miss Lee Washington, Miss Sallie Fairfax Harrison, Miss Elizabeth Boothe, Miss Agnes Shands, Miss Elizabeth Nolting, Miss Annabelle Essary, Miss Peyton Hawes, Miss Carolin Thompson, Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, Mrs. Wilfred Goodwin, Miss Virginia Flannery, Miss Isabel Fontaine Flannery, Miss Marvin Breckenridge, Miss Rosaline Wright, Miss Barbara Wright, Miss Cecelia Robb, Miss Eliza Mitchell, Miss Marion Shouse, Miss Elizabeth Shouse and Mrs. Louis Preston.

Many of the homes and gardens which will be open for the Virginia Garden tour later will be described by Mrs. Brown. These annual pilgrimages have become a major social event of the spring season.

Rich in historical traditions are Montpelier, Stratford and Gunston Hall. On these spacious grounds and in these charming paneled rooms the contemporaries of Washington spent many hours in political discussions and arguments that bore heavily on the destinies of the United States.

Memories of Colonial days will be revived by pictures of Williamsburg, which is being restored by John D. Rockefeller. The town hall; the old tavern, center of social life of the times; the tiny white frame houses that edge the main street, and their quaint gardens will be described by Mrs. Brown.

There will be slides of Woodlawn, the home of Nellie Custis, adopted granddaughter of George Washington. Although the house was not completed until 1802, building was begun on it under the supervision of Washington a few years before his death.

Dinner Honors Trade Arbiters

Col. and Mrs. C. H. March Are Hosts to Federal Commissioners.

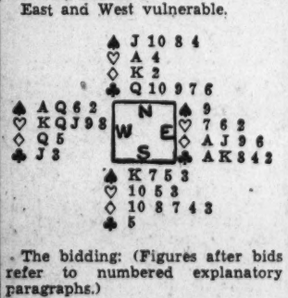
Culbertson on Bridge

A Successful Bluff.

If Mr. Raymond Balfe, of New York lives for a hundred years and perpetrates one of the bluff doubles of which he is so fond once every day, he will probably get no greater satisfaction on any occasion than he did during the play of the pair championship in the Grand Nationals of the United States Bridge Association, held in New York in January. He was paired with Mr. Lester Bachner in this event, and the pair was having its ups and downs. Some of their scores were good, some average, some indifferent when they reached the table where Mr. William J. Huske weas seated East and Mr. Charles H. Goren was West.

The hand and bidding were:

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	1♣	Dbl. (1)	1♡ (2)
Pass	Pass (3)	Pass

1—Of course, a pure bluff, and those who play with Mr. Balfe regularly, particularly in rubber bridge, are aware of his propensity for this kind of an obstructive measure against vulnerable opponents.

2—West, of course, should redouble and immediately disclose to his partner the fact that East and West should be able to make a game. Mr. Goren argued in defense of his overcall that this also was a strong bid, and that as he had a two-suiter he wished to be able to show both suits at a low range of bidding.

3—Probably East should take further action While his club suit is not rebiddable, the fact that he holds 3 hearts, the suit bid by his partner, and a singleton in spades certainly is an argument to continue the bidding and find out who is fooling. Mr. Huske, in defense of his pass, contended that he asked himself the question whether West over the double had a better bid, and decided that if West held a hand of game strength, he certainly must hold a better bid—namely, a redouble. He decided to leave the question of any further bidding up to Mr. Balfe.

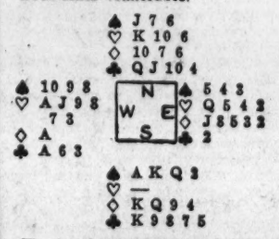
As a matter of fact, both East and West were to blame. Unquestionably, West should have redoubled rather than make the bid of one heart, and it is almost as clear that East should have found another bid, either two clubs, two diamonds, or two hearts. The preference for these bids should run in about the order named. The Notrump response at this point is not desirable, because South may have a sound double, and obviously North and South have at least eight spades, as disclosed by the bidding up to this point.

In the play Mr. Goren, of course, made five hearts, but as a game was not bid, the score of East and West was almost the bottom—in fact, the only East and West players with a lower score were a pair who bid six hearts, going down one trick at the Slam contract. As a matter of fact, six can be made except against the opening of the Trump Ace.

Tomorrow's hand.

If South is playing a contract of two spades, in what way can East and West defeat it?

South, Dealer.
Both sides vlunerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Soap Situation In Capital Shops Full of Interest

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Just what the soap situation is, or whether there is a soap situation at all, never troubled us until recently. Inquiries by both telephone and letter as to what soaps were this, and what soaps that, finally pricked our curiosity. During yesterday's reconnoitering in local shops we seized on a buyer whose reputation for having first-hand information about toilet goods is well established. Assuming the role of unofficial guide she led us down aisles and up aisles, pausing here and there to point out, to explain.

It is surprising to find how indefinitely varied prosaic soaps are. Ranking high among the fragrant groups is the pastel gardenia assortment, small cakes, ranging from light pink to orchid, each one fully capable of turning the bath into a sweet scented luxury.

Special sale prices make some buttermilk soap unusually interesting. This, we were given to understand, is adapted to any kind of water, and lathers as freely and foamily in hard water as soft. A dozen cakes cost 65 cents.

A group of bouquet soaps seemed extraordinary. Artistically colored cakes included such flower scents as jasmine, violet, carnation and geranium. These, too, are especially priced.

At another counter were the soap aristocrats. A large pink bar is given to floating lightly on the surface—a remarkable feat, we assumed, from the $1 price tag attached. Another, much smaller, was a special importation, recommended by its cold cream qualities. It is said to relieve chapped skins and to prevent roughness.

A large, pink bath dome outdid the dollar nobility by a quarter. But, the buyer explained, such a large cake and such a fresh geranium fragrance.

Several pink wash cloths in an oil silk waterproof container turned out to be the soap extravaganza. Each of the ample cloths had been especially processed in a soap preparation. They needed only a little warm water to lather delightfully. It is hard to imagine anything more convenient for traveling. Without the bother of carrying the customary cake of soap, one may be assured of a sufficient supply in the soap cloths, compactly packed to fit into a small space.

Know They're Good Bags.

When a man stands enraptured before a counter of women's hand bags there must be a good reason why. When he is so engrossed he's obviously unconscious of two steadily staring eyes, it's a case worth investigating.

We recognized the gentleman as the merchandising manager of the store. Despite the fact we fastened our eyes full upon him and stood by awaiting his attention, he continued to be unaware. Finally he looked up and seemed startled to find himself the object of attention.

Clearing his throat a trifle embarrassedly he said he thought the new silk crochet bags most attractive. In fact he really did, he said.

Picking up one of the bags, he pointed out its splendid workmanship and remarked on the large amount of thread used in making one. In view of that, he marveled that they could sell for $1.

Soapless Shampoo Kit.

Although there are many travel kits there are few which include such complete hair preparations as the one now featured in a downtown store. It contains a 2-ounce bottle of soapless shampoo, a bottle of fluid which is used for training a natural wave in hair, a sprayer to facilitate its application, and an "art finger" to aid in putting in the wave.

This fluid is held to be good for the hair, and very excellent for either maintaining or training waves. The young person who has charge of this new product demonstrates how it is to be used, and gives implicit directions. She says she has seen people with absolutely straight hair manage to get lovely large waves by use of it.

Really Novel Bridge Prize.

The most novel bridge prize suggestion which has appeared on the market lately has just now arrived at a large department store. A large box which includes four bottles of perfume, each set in little, diamond, heart, club or spade shaped container, would be worth winning. If the hostess prefers she can use this for four separate prizes or use the set as one.

The perfumes bear no name aside from that of their creator, but the different scents are distinguished by numbers.

New Draperies Bring Spring Into Home

Crisp and Fresh Curtains Chase Doldrums of Winter Away.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

Crisp new window curtains and draperies pull a room out of the winter doldrums and give it a new outlook for spring.

For those of us who are following the latest trend toward blue rooms there are some attractive glazed chintz draperies in larkspur blue. These are tailored and shirred on a rod. Heavy white cord in four loops, one above the other, across the top of the window makes a unique and effective vallance. The white cord is used also to hold the draperies back. The glass curtains, which are straight hanging, are of white voile.

The larkspur draperies would be harmonious in a room with slate blue walls, light fruitwood furniture, bibelots of pale pink glass and an accent or two of bright green.

White artificial gardenias make an interesting decorative change when used as tiebacks on white organdie curtains. The gardenias may be found in the trimming department of any shop. The white organdie curtains are hemstitched in chartreuse green. They are edged with wide ruffles which are knife-plaited and picoted in chartreuse.

For the room needing brightness and color there are glazed chintz draperies of daffodil yellow patterned in a field flower design in blue, green and white. A scalloped white ruffle is an attractive way of finishing the edges and also emphasizes the accents of white. Deep cuffs of the flowered chintz with the white scalloped ruffle hold the draperies in place. Glass curtains of soft honey colored net give the effect of sunlight filtering into the room.

Cellophane fabric strikes an entirely new note and adds cachet to the dullest room. It is smartest in white, simply tailored with pinch plaits across the top and plain bands as tie-backs. Cellophane helps form an harmonious background for rooms in the contemporary feeling.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Trout Easily Prepared and Delicious for Fish Course, Says Susan Mills, Who Gives Several Recipes, Including One for Frogs Legs.

By Susan Mills.

In our tour through the consecutive courses of a formal dinner we arrive today at the fish course. If this course is served, naturally, it is wise to omit a shellfish cocktail.

Any fish in season, large or small, boiled, baked, fried or sauteed, is appropriate for this course. Cucumbers, tomatoes, radishes celery—anything crisp and fresh can be served. If the fish plates are hot, the crisp relishes should be placed on lettuce leaves so the meat will not wilt them.

Trout is easily prepared and delicious. Dip six large trout in olive oil, salt and pepper them, broil 10 to 15 minutes. Maitre d'Hotel sauce should be poured over it. The sauce is made with 4 tablespoons butter, creamed, two tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley salt, a little pepper and cayenne. It should be heated and served immediately.

Here is a recipe for baked fish that is sure to please:

Fish au Parmesan, Baked.

Make a dressing of 1 cup bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons melted butter, a teaspoon minced parsley, ½ teaspoon minced onion, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 2 tablespoons hot water, a teaspoon each of capers, gherkins and olives, a teaspoon each of tomato catsup and lemon juice or vinegar. Stuff a three pound fish with this dressing, sprinkle with two tablespoons Parmesan cheese and butter cut in bits, bake 20 minutes, add 2 cups cream and bake slowly half an hour, basting frequently. Serve with sauce from the pan, strained and poured over.

These dishes can be made with a moderate amount of expense, but if the frivolous hostess cares to fling away her husband's week's salary into her very formal dinner here are some recipes that will make her glad she was somewhat extravagant.

Sole and Vin Blanc, Baked.

Bake six filet of sole with a tablespoon lemon juice and ½ cup hot water for 10 minutes. Cook together a tablespoon each of butter and flour, a teaspoon chopped parsley, ½ teaspoon minced onion, ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of cayenne and a blade of mace and a cup of white wine. Pour this over fish and bake 20 minutes, serve with strained sauce poured over. Flounder or pompano may be used instead of sole.

If you have the usual amount of curiosity, you might wonder just what frog's legs taste like (provided you have never tasted them). You might wonder, too, how they are prepared. The recipe is fairly complicated, but if you want to take the day off, and experiment for yourself—here it is:

Frogs' Legs a la Poulette.

Cook two pounds of frogs' legs, prepared, with a tablespoon butter. Cook 1 minute. Add a cup of white wine, or lemon juice and water, ½ cup of water, ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper and nutmeg. Stew for 15 minutes, add a cup white stock, simmer until legs are tender, drain and place on hot dish. Make a sauce of the liquor in which legs were cooked, adding it to a tablespoon each of butter and flour, thoroughly cooked; when boiling add two egg yolks slightly beaten and a tablespoon minced parsley. Pour this over frogs' legs and serve.

Rhine wine, chilled, may be served with the fish course. Moselle is appropriate, as well as Sauterne or white Burgundy.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If February 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 to 9 a. m., from 2 to 3 p. m. and from 6 to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 4 to 5 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m.

If you were born on February 23, it might be advisable to control any inclination you may feel to seek having your personal vanity satisfied by drawing from your friends laudatory expressions regarding your individuality. Seeking praise is a dangerous form of egotism to indulge in, and does not help create popularity. People who do not display a sense of self-consciousness of their superior personal attractiveness usually receive genuine admiration.

The child born on February 23, as it grows up, must not be allowed to practice forgetfulness, which is primarily a habit. Inattention is the principal cause, and this can be easily remedied by insisting the child listens when told something. Unless this fault is corrected when the child is young, it can become a very serious fault in later years. This child should also be instructed carefully how to apply itself to a given task. Every child is endowed with a good memory, but it is like the muscles in your body, it will lack the proper development if not exercised.

The woman born on February 23 will be wise to learn to control a rather sensitive temperament, so as not to display signs of irritation if people happen to rub her the wrong way. Possessing many lovable traits, but predisposed to express herself in a very outspoken manner, she must watch out that this characteristic does not become too pronounced.

The man born on February 23 would be wise not to overindulge in his inclination to, by sarcastic comments, be witty at the expense of others. You need only once inflict a deep wound in a person's self-esteem to gain a foe, so avoid inflicting this form of pain.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Don't Sneeze Carelessly.

A correspondent asks for an article about the way some people have of coughing and sneezing on others. He wrote of having been at the theater and of having a man sitting immediately behind him cough frequently.

When breathing is quiet and normally subdued the expired air is not very well stocked with bacteria. The act of breathing removes from air some bacteria and dirt and adds to it some waste matter, water, and bacteria. The bacteria added just about balance those subtracted. This is not true if breathing becomes labored. A snorting snorer is a fairly efficient bacteria sprayer.

But a cougher is much more efficient than even a high grade snorer. And a hard sneezer heads the list. It has been proved that a good, hard sneeze will drive bacteria a distance of 20 feet. This was proved by having men take in their mouths a kind of red, easily identified coccus, placing culture plates at varying distances, and having the men sneeze violently. In this way the ranges of efficient spraying by quiet breathing, labored breathing, coughing, and sneezing were determined.

A man in the row in front is easily within range. If he must sit and take it, the best arrangement is one where the sufferer gets the load in the back. In the cigar industry it was found that colds, coughs, pneumonia, and consumption could be prevented by having the cigar rollers sit face to back instead of face to face, as was once the custom. When one goes now into a well organized cigar factory he finds the rollers sitting face to back, according to the arrangement of seats in a school or theater.

Further argument and illustration need not be offered.

Good manners support the rules of good health in prescribing that coughers and sneezers should hold a handkerchief in front of the face. If the emergency arises too suddenly to permit reaching for one, the bystanders should be shielded in some way. Holding the bare hand in front of the face is better than making no attempt to respect the rights of others.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

While returning to London after visiting Lord Edward Keynsham, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British home secretary, is abducted, taken to a building resembling a prison, placed upon a gallows and told he will be hanged unless he grants a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be hanged the following morning for murder. A message arrives that Mrs. Brandt is waiting at Rossiter's home to give him fresh evidence. He is released, hears her story, promises a reprieve—and faints as he lifts the telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. When he regains consciousness he learns Brandt has been hanged.

On her way to Rossiter's home for dinner, Mrs. Brandt vanishes, Rossiter disappears. Scotland Yard is called. Young Detective Pank learns that Lord Edward engineered the abduction of Rossiter the night before Brandt's execution. Rossiter and Mrs. Brandt return. He tells detectives he and Mrs. Brandt went into hiding to escape from a mysterious band, of which Keynsham supposedly was a member. A key was sent to Rossiter by Brandt. The gang make desperate efforts to obtain possession of the key.

Keynsham rejoins his associates in France. He tells them Brandt sent the key to Rossiter as a matter of vengeance against his associates in the international ring. Keynsham appears and reveals that the gang had made millions in the bootleg racket in America.

"Twice we suffered, and suffered badly, from informers. They were men whom we had invited to join us, men whom we thought our friends. We held a meeting to decide how to deal with this danger. There were seven of us then. We were all, in a sense, strangers, brought together by circumstances, chiefly by the war. We trusted one another, but we had trusted others and had been deceived almost to the point of ruin. We decided at that meeting to fight our battles as others fought them—to defend ourselves when we were attacked. That we have done. It was impossible to hold together by entirely peaceful methods. When we were struck at we retaliated. When we had to fight we fought."

The light of understanding flashed into Rossiter's eyes.

"Stop!" he insisted.

Keynsham looked questioningly at him.

"Take your hand away from that book," Sir Humphrey enjoined.

"Humphrey," the other pleaded, "that book is better back in my possession. Let it go at that, I beg of you."

"Take your hand away."

Very slowly and very reluctantly Keynsham obeyed. The home secretary, with a deft movement, shut down the lid of the box, produced the key and locked it.

"Gentlemen," he begged, "I shall ask you to excuse me for three minutes."

He crossed the room toward the writing desk. The eyes of all of them followed him, but curiously enough, as they thought afterward, no one asked a question. Sir Humphrey deliberately adjusted his monocle, drew out a sheet of paper and wrote a few rapid lines. These he inclosed in an envelope, which he addressed and sealed. He turned to the table and handed the letter across to Pank.

"Inspector," he said, "can I trust you to see that this is delivered at once?"

"Certainly, sir," was the prompt reply.

Sir Humphrey glanced at his watch.

"You have several cars outside. May I take it that it will be delivered within 10 minutes?"

Chapter XXX.

"Now you can go on with your story, Edward," he invited. "Tell us what you were going to say about this book."

"Just this," Keynsham proceeded. "At the meeting I have spoken of it was decided that the best means of keeping us all together, and of guarding against any one of us turning informer against the others, was to place on record in this book of the organization the deeds or misdeeds, whichever you choose to call them, of each of its members. They are recorded there. To us, who lived out in the thick of it, they were, as we knew, just part of the job. To the ordinary human being who did not understand the conditions they would amount to a series of confessions. To an English cabinet minister, controlling the police of his country, they would present an entirely different aspect; they would probably seem to him to contain absolute and vital information of which it was his duty to make use. That is why, when there appeared to be a chance of this book falling into the hands of the home secretary, the organization of the Keynsham Trust have striven by every means they could think of to prevent it."

"The matter," the home secretary pronounced calmly, "begins to present a more rational aspect."

"Sir," Keynsham begged passionately, "I am short of words and breath tonight, but I implore you, for your own sake and for ours, to hand that book over to me as the head of the trust. It does not form part of Mrs. Brandt's estate. It is not part of your duty as Mrs. Brandt's executor to look inside it. That it is in that box at all is simply a devilish act of malice on the part of a dead man."

Pages Turned Carelessly.

Sir Humphrey picked up the book. He turned over the pages carelessly. The sense of strain seemed to have passed from his tone and manner.

"Beautiful handwriting," he remarked.

"Cecil's," Katherine confided, with a shiver. "He used to spend hours writing in it."

Keynsham's features seemed to tighten. There was a sullen fire in his eyes. For a moment he had the look of a wounded animal about to spring.

"Sir Humphrey," he implored, "let the book alone."

Rossiter ignored him. In turning over the pages he had stopped at a printed headline consisting of three words:

"ROLL OF HONOR."

The first name upon the list was the name of Lord Edward Keynsham, and underneath in Keynsham's own handwriting was one brief and terrible sentence:

"'I confess that on January the 1enth, 1928, I killed Jake Grogan on Pinder's wharf, New Jersey.

"'Signed: Keynsham.'"

Rossiter started a little as he read. Involuntarily he glanced across the room. Keynsham was sitting back in his chair with folded arms. He had done his best. The worst had happened. Rossiter continued to read:

"'Armand de Lusigny.

"'I confess that in a fight at the corner of 122d street and 3d avenue in Chicago I killed the Chilean, Initos, whose body was found at that spot.

"'Signed:

"'Armand de Lusigny.'"

"'Richard Van Pleyden.

"'I confess that I killed Rawson who turned informer against us and tried to remove our stores from Merlees, on the Canadian frontier.

"'Signed:

"'Richard Van Pleyden.'"

"'Cecil Brandt.

"'I confess that I killed Commissioner Dane, who, after having accepted a hundred thousand dollars in bribes from us, threatened to withdraw police protection unless we made him a partner in the syndicate.

"'Signed: Cecil Brandt.'"

"'William Meadows.

"'I confess that in a fight on Fourth avenue in March, 1922, I killed Michael O'Corrigan and wounded a man whose name I never knew, so that he died in hospital.

"'Signed: Will Meadows.'"

"'Sam Clowes.

"'I killed Tony Burke on Pinder's wharf in February, 1923, and he got what was coming to him.

"'Signed: Samuel Clowes.'"

Tapestry Weaving Becomes Popular Calling for Women

Tapestry weaving, which is becoming increasingly popular for women, will be the subject of two lectures tomorrow at the Neighborhood House Settlement, 470 N street southwest, by Geza Gilbert Foldes. The lectures will be at 10 and at 2 o'clock and will be open to the public.

Herr Foldes is director of tapestry and weaving at the Roerich Art Museum in New York, and his work is widely known in art circles. His aim is to put the old techniques to modern use and to develop a distinct twentieth century tapestry.

Tapestry weaving, according to Herr Foldes, offers new opportunity for artistic self-expression and also for economic independence. Expert craftsmen often make as much as $75 to $100 a week.

Herr Foldes, a Hungarian, studied in Vienna, Munich and Paris and founded his first school at Ujpest, Hungary. His work has included the design and execution of tapestries for European governments, as well as the restoration of Gobelins in the state museums and palaces of central Europe. He is recognized as one of the leading educators in the art of tapestry weaving.

A subscription luncheon for 50 cents will be served persons attending the lectures Saturday, provided reservations are made in advance. The lectures are a part of the year's program of the settlement school of weaving.

"Posing" of American Women Scored by One Who Is 109

From the vantage point of 109 years and many tours of the world, Dr. Charlotte de Goliere Davenport, now visiting in Washington, feels called upon to give advice to American women. This is it:

"Stop posing and be yourselves. Don't be so artificial, so stiff and so self-conscious. Be more impersonal and more unselfish. Think more and you won't get fat."

Stiff figures and parrot-like voices are two of the chief physical defects of American women, Dr. Davenport believes.

"If women here were not so self-centered, they would be more graceful," she declared. "Thinking on a lower plane causes harshness of voice."

While she scolds women of this country for their faults, Dr. Davenport believes they have great potentialities.

"They would be the most attractive women in the world," she said, "if they would develop themselves more on the inside and would stop depending so much on material things."

Despite her advanced years, Dr. Davenport has an erect, supple figure and walks with the springy step of a young woman. She was born in Russia of a noble family and as a girl studied piano under Franz Lizst. She has been married three times and has a large family of sons, the eldest of whom she says is 93 years old. She has lectured on health and physical culture throughout the United States during the last 50 years, has enjoyed the friendship of many noted persons. At the Ambassador Hotel, where she is staying, she is renewing associations with many of her Washington friends.

Blues Blended With Grays for Men's Clothes Give Smart New Shade to New Spring Styles

Happy Combination Meets Demands of Males Liking Those Colors.

New York, Feb. 22.—There have always been so many men who preferred their suits gray and so many others who like everything blue, no wonder the blue-gray idea has taken hold the way it has, as one of the really important ideas in men's clothes this spring.

American men have long wanted something really a little different in their clothes. But had to be a color they knew they could wear.

So logically enough, they've picked a combination of the two colors they like most and wear most—blue and gray. And you can put it down in your book that two of the most interesting, good-to-look at, and sure-to-be-worn shades for spring are bluish shades of gray and grayish shades of blue.

One Man in Ten.

You won't see them all over the place. But you will see them on about one man in ten. The man who wants something definitely gayer, more interesting, smarter than what he's been wearing.

Essentially what these spring blue-grays will give you is the wearability of gray plus the dressiness of blue. Which gives you a distinctive, individual kind of fabric. And one you're not apt to tire of, either.

Then there's this point. These blue-grays are smart (and are already being worn) in a number of other things besides suits. Hats are one of them. Your next one might very well be a light gray with a suggestion of blue in it.

Shirts are another thing that have been touched by the blue-gray idea. Not harsh, strident blues, but the mellower shades that result when blue has been grayed.

Ties, Socks Blue-Grayed.

Ties are under the influence, too. Instead of the blue ones being rich blues, as they used to be, some of them have been softened with gray. When it gets warmer, you'll spot a good many more grayed shades of blue hosiery. Especially when they're lisle

Now there's no law to make you go blue-gray whole hog. And it certainly isn't necessary nor advisable for any man to get everything in his outfit in the same color, in order to pass as well-dressed. But you'll be smart to have some of this blue-gray in your wardrobe this spring—in your furnishings, if your suit is gray or blue; and in your suit itself, if your furnishings are gray, blue or wine. And you'll admit, when you wear it, that it does give you a gayer, sportier and more individual look than you dared to boast during the long, lean years.

Champion Ski Team Is Recognized as Among Europe's Best.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Winter sports in Russia are drawing the Soviet women en masse. Workers, men and women, gather out of working hours by the hundreds and make up huge skiing parties, or cluster around and down the many toboggan slides.

The U. S. S. R. champion women's ski team has won European recognition. In both speed and figure skating Russian women are making strides that give promise of equal acclaim.

Winter sports meets are held between different trade unions, within the country, and international competitions with teams from the Scandinavian countries broaden the competitive horizon.

During the first five-year plan the number of participants in winter and summer events rose to four times the original size. The government is working out a dual theory of good workers, good sportsmen and sportswomen.

Ski trails are being broken across the wide distances of the country, and a notable number of women are going out for ski-jumping with zest, vigor and success.

Soviet Regime Demands Body Building Efforts by All Women.

Russia demands of its women good muscles and a smoothly coordinate body. The present aim of the Soviet Government is to bring the women out of the homes and into jobs. To effect this, physical standards for women are being brought up as near as possible to those of the men.

Pole-climbing and rope-climbing are two of the types of physical training now widely mastered by Russian women. Both must be done with proficiency to gain the highest medal for women's sports, the medal titled "Ready for work and defense."

This badge signifies that the winner is physically fit, skilled in a wide spread of sports, trained in first-aid and in leadership and expert in military drills.

Over 100,000 women and men took part in last summer's national sports meet. Women in the national and local meets are constantly striving to pass the tests for the work and defense medal, and its high ranking draws a constant stream of new enthusiasts into competition.

Woman Who Ascends Throne Today Had Story-Book Love

Belgian Journalist Describes Romance of Princess Astrid of Sweden and Crown Prince Who Succeeds Albert as King of Belgians; State Did Not Dictate Union.

Mme. Andree Royon, Belgian journalist now in Washington, gives in the following article an intimate view of Crown Princess Astrid, who today becomes the Queen of the Belgians.

By Andree Royon.

A few years ago, at the house of a well-known Swedish family then living in Paris, I met a very lovely woman, tall and elegant, who had the bearing of a queen. She was not a queen, but a queen's sister-in-law, Princess Ingrid, wife of Prince Charles of Sweden, the brother of the King of Sweden.

In a corner of the drawing room, talking with the youngest daughter of my host, sat a girl scarcely out of her teens, lean-limbed and graceful. She had lovely brown eyes, dark bobbed hair, parted in the middle, and an engaging smile. Her name was Astrid * * * Years have gone by * * * Today she will be made Queen of Belgium.

Princess Astrid is the youngest of three sisters. Although niece of the King of Sweden, she was brought up very simply. Her parents didn't believe in coddling their children, but saw that they were carefully educated. Princess Astrid was never a bookworm, but she showed a keen interest in all sorts of things.

Ripening of Their Romance.

She went to cooking and sewing classes and learned to run a house skillfully. She also studied music. Later she took up nursing, and as a trained nurse, was a frequent visitor to hospitals, especially in children's wards. She is very fond of outdoor sports and is a splendid horsewoman, a good golfer and a keen skater. In Stockholm, as a girl, she often went about alone, driving her father's car. Among her many friends she was very popular and was expected to marry in her own circle.

In 1924, while staying in Copenhagen with her elder sister, the wife of Prince Axel of Denmark, she met the Belgian Crown Prince Leopold, a tall, serious young man, with fair curly hair and deep set eyes. They became friends and found many interests in common.

Soon after, the prince visited Stockholm. He had fallen in love with Princess Astrid, but nothing was known about this in Belgium. The people were told, several times, that the prince was going away incognito to an unknown destination. And, indeed, on each trip to Stockholm he took great care that his identity should not be known. He would travel second class, like a bourgeois, and get out of the train at a little country town, where it stopped before it reached Stockholm. There he was met by a car. No one knew who this visitor was.

Progress of Courtship.

Prince Leopold was thus several times a guest of Princess Astrid's mother, both in her beautiful town residence and in the country home. The romance was developing into a fairy story * * *

When King Albert heard of Prince Leopold's wish to marry Princess Astrid he said his son was free to make his own decisions. And so it was that Belgium's crown prince came to marry the princess he loved.

The civil wedding took place in the throne room of the royal palace in Stockholm, November 4, 1926.

Two days later the happy pair arrived in Antwerp. I recall the lovely autumn day. The sun was shining on the water and the sky was of a very soft pale blue. A huge crowd was waiting on the pier and everyone was straining their eyes to see the Swedish warship, which was to bring the royal pair.

The ship came in a mass of dark gray iron, flying both the Belgian and Swedish flags. On the deck was a girl, dressed in white, carrying a bunch of flowers, and smiling. I saw her, beside her husband, setting foot on the land over whose destinies she is now to help preside. With a captivating smile, she waved her hand to the crowds. For that gesture of simplicity, the hearts of everyone of the thousands went out to her.

She made a triumphant entry into Brussels. On the next day, an impressive religious wedding ceremony took place, in the Catholic Cathedral of St. Gudule. The town had been decorated with gayly flying flags and every church bell in the city was ringing. Afterward, she took a trip with her husband through the country's principal cities and was received with great enthusiasm.

When little Princess Josephine Charlotte, born in 1927, was a baby, Princess Astrid was often seen pushing the child's carriage along the boardwalk. Often also would she go on the beach, to play with her chubby little girl and help her to make sand pies. Prince Baudouin, heir presumptive to the throne, was born in 1930.

Today a new life will begin for Princess Astrid, as Queen of Belgium. My feeling—and I am quite sure that it is the feeling of every Belgian citizen—is one of confidence that she will be a popular and a good queen.

Rare Old Rugs To Be Auctioned

Sixteenth Century Ispahan Among Finer Items at New York Sale.

New York, Feb. 22—Rare and antique rugs, the property of Sydney M. Rogers, of this city, and other owners, will go on public sale Saturday afternoon. They are now on exhibit at the American Art Association-Anderson galleries.

In the early carpets appears a fine late sixteenth century Ispahan example, with mellow rose-crimson field and deep blue-green border. A magnificent Kashan silk palace carpet, 21 feet long and more than 12 feet wide, has a field of soft-toned sang de boeuf and a mazarine blue border.

Among the many eighteenth century examples in the catalogue is a fine Perso-Caucasian silver-woven silk rug, with glittering silver ground, beautifully woven in a raised tawny rose velvet pile with a close arrowhead lattice design, the border in a pale water blue, enriched in orange and ivory with a running angular pinnacle design suggesting a formalization of the Kufic script, between tan and dark blue guards embroidered with rosettes in gold thread.

A rare Indian silk rug of the seventeenth century comes from the collection of Kouchakji Freres, displayed at the American Art Association in 1920. It has a ruby field.

There is a group of Asia Minor prayer rugs of the Ghiordes, Rulah, Ladik and Konia weaves. Eighteenth century examples here include an important Ghiordes prayer rug of the early eighteenth century, with a magnificent turquoise blue field, bordered with tiny red carnations, and enclosed by a pointed mihrab with old gold spandrels woven with rows of serrated turquise and celadon leaves.

This is one of the Rogers collection, as are another Ghiordes prayer rug with a mellow leaf-green field and celadon spandrels, and two eighteenth century Kulah prayer rugs, one with mazarine blue field and narrow pointed prayer arch and the other with celadon field, woven with three hanging pendants of brown and russet leaves beneath a low-stepped prayer arch. A rare early rug is an Asia Minor prayer rug of the seventeenth centuy with fawn colored field and tawny orange spandrels.

Parisian Coatee Wins American Buyer's Acclaim

Jodelle, New Dressmaking House, Brings Out New and Striking Style.

A new dressmaking house in Paris has won its place in the haute couture by introducing such a striking coatee that American buyers, on their recent trip to the French capital, were unable to resist it. Jodelle is the name of the new house. According to many persons who make a business of following fashions, Jodelle will soon be as familiar a name as Chanel, Mainbocher and Lanvin.

The coatee introduced by the newest star in the style firmament has immense balloon sleeves, which are fastened only at the top of the shoulder. The lower half of the armhole seam is left free, giving a fly-away, windblown effect that is most engaging for warm spring days. Black satin and pale mauve-pink satin were used by Jodelle for the original coatees. When the models reach this side of the Atlantic they will probably be copied in everything from chintz to taffeta.

Silk and wool are combined to good effect in many of the spring coats and coatees. A dark blue woolen model has circular yoke and huge sleeves of matching taffeta. Another one is made of heavy dull crepe with satin top and sleeves.

'34 American Girl Depicted by Barclay

Famous Artist Says She Is Less Flapperish.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—A new woman—the child of broad-minded parents—is the 1934 American girl, as seen by McClelland Barclay, who for more than a decade has depicted the prevailing mode in feminity.

She is less "flapperish," this 1934 girl of the debutante age—but equally as sophisticated as her immediate predecessors, said Barclay, "and she is a lovely creature who doesn't think it smart to drink."

"There is as much romance as ever in the make up of this modern miss, but if she should choose wrongly in the selection of her mate, "why she'll wash it up quickly, and not ruin two lives.

"She will not have tried to cast herself in a mold with thousands of other women. She will have skillfully devised means to accentuate her individuality, with an accent on feminity. The boyish trend is now definitely in the discard."

This 1934 girl, Barclay says, has broad shoulders, but her hips are slender.

Bath Towel Craze Spreads in Florida

"Turkish" Evening Gown Is Seen at Miami Dinner.

That utilitarian article that has hung unsung on the Nation's towel-racks for lo, these many years, is in society now. It's the favored fabric of the Florida resort centers.

And it fashions not only beach robes, but evening gowns as well. A white toweling evening gown, cut on lines of classic simplicity, revealing the bronze of a sun-tanned back, created a sensation at a recent dinner dance here.

With it was worn a loose three-quarter mandarian coat of the same white toweling, its wide sleeves banded in white fox.

Toweling already has established itself as the height of both comfort and fashion in beach clothes.

Gentler Sex Asks No Odds Of Men on Track and Field

Soviet women go out for track on equal terms with the men. Heights and distances are set on the same scale. As fast as possible, the government wants Russian women to be able to do everything side by side with Russian men.

Nina Kukhorkine, all-round sportswoman, as illustrated by her holding of the coveted medal presented by the Association for Labor and Defense, which requires high ability in many fields, is a well-known figure on the track. She is shown in her customary easy-swinging stride.

Workers are encouraged by the government to enter into sports. Shamonova, expert chemical worker in one of Moscow's factories, leads in the 60 and 100 meter events. Getling, 20-year-old factory worker, in three consecutive swimming meets, lowered the national record for the 100-meter free style for women to 16.5, 16 flat, and 15.4 seconds.

Post Parade

Washington And Moscow Alike—Unlike

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

Here in Washington—preferring to be nameless—is a specialist in New Deals. His book on Russia is one of the best on what has happened over there. Another volume from this writer on Hitlerism is much respected. Now the incognito specialist is feeling the irregular American pulse, as registered in the Nation's Capital.

Much of the buzzing about in Moscow and Washington is alike on the surface, says this student of New Deals. Here are some of the superficial comparisons of Russians and Americans as they hurry about making over their respective countries, according to this incognito writer:

BRIEF CASES. Russia has a play that has much to do with brief cases. In Moscow, as in Washington, New Dealers carry home papers that they ostensibly pore over in the night.

CONFERENCES. New Dealers in both capitals continually excuse themselves to rush off to conferences.

SPOT DECISIONS. The quick way both Russians and Americans must decide about procedure in their respective reconstructions.

MASS MEETINGS. Russia had no word for the gatherings of hundreds of people, so infrequent under the Czars, so has actually adopted the English word "meeting" into its language.

TRAFFIC. Government workers in Moscow have no parking problem. So few have automobiles. But no Washington traffic load ever approaches the regular Moscow jam. In Moscow one must enter a street car by the rear door and leave by the front, or be arrested and fined, regardless of what impassable wedged mass of humanity is between the doors. And the gendarme who sees one or more passengers hanging to the steps of the street car blows his whistle, halts the car, scrapes off the hangers-on and fines them one and all.

But there are contrasts, too.

"In Moscow and Berlin alike, everybody is afraid; in Washington everybody is confident," says this writer who is seeing his third governmental metamorphosis. In Germany, in both industry and government employ, more jobs are lost in a week than Federal employes in the United States have lost in a year, he says.

Barbs Here Not on Wire.

Not long ago a rotund person wearing a rather soiled white collar on a pink shirt with equally soiled cuffs, appeared at the information department of one of the new Government agencies and asked numerous questions. He received perfunctory answers until he bristled up and broke the news that he was a British member of Parliament. Then, when the supplied information ceased to be perfunctory, and he was pumped full of lore about functions and plans of the office, he looked pensively out of the big window and remarked:

"I've been in several European capitals right after a revolution. The only difference I see in Washington is that there is no barbed wire in the streets."

* * * *

Bow-wow. All Out!

Two small, dark passengers, among the best-behaved of all those riding on the bus, sat very still. They said nothing. Their tongues were hanging out a little, though they were breathing naturally. The actions of no one on the bus interested them, until a man just ahead pulled the stop signal rope. Then the small, dark passengers jumped into action, darted down the aisle and leaped out the door most precipitately. They were English bulldogs that often ride over from Virginia with their master.

Possibly the only Washingtonian unwilling to give the late King of the Belgians whole-hearted admiration was a man gazing at an array of photographs of the monarch displayed in an F street photographer's window. The observer turned from the display, and said indifferently: "He was not so great a man as Thomas A. Edison."

Over the Tea Cups.

Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, New Orleans society woman opposing Senator Huey Long, never before has been actively interested in politics. She is determined to stay in Washington, despite having to leave behind in New Orleans her husband, her four children and just now the Mardi Gras life of her home town.

Women of U. S. Held Gaining as Europeans Lose

Women of foreign countries are losing prestige. Women of America are gaining it—and they have President Roosevelt to thank.

"I have only been in your country a short time on this visit," said Dame Rachel yesterday at the Dodge Hotel. "In reality, I suppose I have only a worm's eye view of things, but it does seem wonderful to me that the women here are making rapid strides to the fore.

"I was in Europe before coming to the States, and of course the comparison between the position of women here and there is pathetic. American women should consider themselves very fortunate in having such a leader as Mr. Roosevelt.

"In Europe we find the national dictators doing all they can to relegate women to the home. In Germany Hitler has declared himself against women in public life. In Italy Mussolini encourages women to be wives and mothers—nothing more.

Retrogression in Europe.

"But here your leader is doing all he can to raise the status of women, to encourage them to hold high positions."

Dame Rachel said that even in her own country women had lost influence to some extent, due probably both to the employment situation and the proximity to the continent.

"For example," she said, "a short time ago in England some hospitals and medical schools that had held their doors open to women for more than 40 years suddenly dropped their women students. They gave as their reason the delicacy on the part of the young men students over attending to practical things with women in the classes. Screamingly funny, I thought!

"It is true, though, that there is a world commission convening in London now to consider the admission of women to the diplomatic service. This would jolly well be an advanced step!"

More than anything else it was curiosity which prompted her visit to the United States at the present time, Dame Rachel said.

"Peace Here at War Pace."

"I was eager to see just what was going on over here," she declared. "It seems very peaceful—peace at a war pace, really! There seems to be such tremendous activity, everybody working toward improving the state of affairs.

"I take that as an indication that you have a real leader. I think it's the most remarkable thing the work he has done toward abolishing child labor and sweat shops.

"I've noticed, too, that there seems to be so much less party feeling than I've seen before.

As soon as Dame Rachel leaves the United States, she is going to Greece and then to South Africa.

"Why? I don't know. I just thought I'd like to," she said. "You see, I'm working on a book and it bothers me. I guess this travel spree of mine is just an excuse to stop writing."

King George Is All Set For Chill Spring Days

London, Feb. 22 (AP).—King George has several "sets" of new "woolies" for England's chill, raw spring. Queen Mary herself bought them at the British Industries Fair.

Message to Maidens.

By Katherine Smith.

Flatter men and they will love it
(This old method's never wrong);
Let your eyes grow wide with wonder—
Tell them they are big and strong.

Let them think that you're completely
Dazzled by their winning ways,
But don't ever, ever tell them
They're susceptible to praise.

Miracle House Vision of Future

Devices in Tomorrow's Home Equal Energy Used by 864 Servants.

Mansfield, Ohio, Feb. 22 (AP).—The "home of tomorrow" has been dedicated here to the women of America. A veritable miracle house, the 8-room house is the engineer's conception of what may be expected in household equipment five or ten years hence.

The scores of devices for labor saving—installed with the view to giving the housewife a 40-hour week even though she may have no servants—include many that have not yet been placed on the market.

Convenience, comfort, health and a higher standard of living, all are exemplified in the brick and wood structure, built at a cost of $12,000. Its many switches, if turned on at one time, would release energy equivalent to the efforts of 864 servants.

The home is more than a house, however. The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. has designed it as a laboratory of household research and has installed equipment which, it says, can not be expected to be placed on the market for years.

It has its own communication equipment to connect with the upstairs, its own telephone and radio. There is a three-unit washer and an electric clothes dryer, which between them wash, rinse, blue, wring and dry the clothes in a continuous operation.

Fine Art of Creative Laziness America's Need, Scholar Says

Dr. Reymart, Director of Mooseheart Child Research Laboratory, Holds This Country Trails Europe in Practice That Develops Individual Genius.

From the cradle to the grave, American people up to now have never been taught to lie down on the grass—weather and the park policeman permitting—look up at the sky and do nothing. So genius seldom burgeons amongst us.

A Norwegian scholar, now an American educator, says so.

"On the contrary, the American idea of efficiency seems to be to pack the greatest possible amount of exertion into the simplest act," Martin L. Reymert, Ph. D., director of the Mooseheart Laboratory for Child Research, told a Post woman's page reporter yesterday.

"The American who sees fit to run around a desk four times to pick up the pen within arm's reach is the one most likely to be made the company's efficiency expert," he said, with sardonic humor.

Dr. Reymert, internationally known psychologist, and listed in "Who's Who," now conducting the brilliant pioneering experiment in child education founded by Senator James J. Davis at Mooseheart, Ill., 20 years ago, was discovered lunching with a company of equally brilliant educators at the Willard Hotel. He is here attending the midwinter conference of the grand lodge of the Loyal Order of Moose at the Willard Hotel.

Colleagues in Agreement.

His companions at luncheon were Dr. John E. Anderson, director of the Institute of Child Welfare of the University of Minnesota; Ernest M. Roselle, superintendent of Mooseheart: "The City of Childhood;" and Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, professor emeritus of history and government at Harvard.

Americans all, they greeted his barbed comments with guffaws of approval.

"If there is one outstanding lack in American education," said Dr. Reymert, warming to his subject while spearing a French pastry, "it is the failure to teach the wonderful European art of creative laziness.

"How do I suggest working it into the day's schedule. Dammit, I don't.

"That's the point. Now you've expressed precisely the fatal American proclivity for doing everything on schedule. You can't schedule such a vital necessity as creative laziness. That's one of the things you've got to learn. It's just that attitude which prevents spontaneous growth. Spontaneity of life is lacking in this country.

"A reorganized system of graduate study in America," he veered off suddenly, "is another bug I've had for years. I did graduate study in Norway and here. Understand," he emphasized, "American science is making wonderful progress; it's as good here as anywhere, maybe better along several lines, but I don't like your formal method of dealing with the education of adults.

Lack of Student Initiative.

"There is need of freer individual instruction for the graduate student. Some of your candidates for a doctor's or a master's degree don't seem to know why they're there. They actually ask their professors for a problem to treat in working for a degree.

"European scholars hardly ever take a doctor's degree until they're 40. They may, if they're students of medicine, get an M. D. degree—the license to practice. They leave school and spend years in practice and special research. Then they may put out a work in two or three volumes which gets them their doctor's degree."

Dr. Reymert's most notable contribution to the progress of education in America was made when he called together in Springfield, Ohio, in 1927, the leading psychologists in their field in Europe and America, to take part in a symposium on feelings and emotions. Thirty-four papers, representing the latest scientific knowledge and theories in these fields, were read at the conference by 17 Americans and 17 Europeans.

In 1930, the board of governors of Mooseheart — the internationally known vocational and trade school founded for children of deceased members of the Loyal Order of Moose—made him head of the newly created laboratory for child research.

Disproves Dentation Theory.

"This laboratory has a double objective: Service to Mooseheart children and important contribution to all child development, care and training," said Dr. Reymert. "The laboratory has its own well-equipped building and its own staff of research workers. For quite a while now, it has been cooperating with universities and research centers everywhere.

"The outstanding advantage is the possibility of carrying on over a period from infancy to 18 years various studies in the field of child development. These studies, made on the same group of children, will be related to each other, thus giving a body of well-rounded information rather than isolated facts.

"While all these longitudinal studies are mainly concerned with the physical, mental and social development of the normal child, such deficiences and ailments as are found in normal child population everywhere are also being given attention over a period of years.

"For instance," he said, "one of the greatest social handicaps is speech defect. Ten out of every 100 children have some kind of speech defect, which constitutes a problem in home and school.

"It had been thought that dentation—the structure of the teeth and oral cavity—played a great part in speech defect. We have disproved this theory.

"We know now that children with a speech defect are a little less intelligent than the normal child not thus handicapped. Also, we know that children with speech defects are apt to have hearing defects. Naturally they can not properly enunciate that which they can not clearly hear either themselves or others pronounce."

Dr. C. P. Clark Elected Head Of S. A. R. Here

Dr. Clifton P. Clark was elected president of the District Society of the Sons of the American Revolution at the annual meeting yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries.

Maj. C. C. Griggs, Maj. Laurence Leonard and William E. Marshall were named to the three vice presidential posts. Other officers included Fred E. Kunkle, secretary; Charles Y. Latimer, treasurer; Clark P. Cole 2d, registrar; Robert B. Curtiss, assistant registrar; Robert M. Wilson, historian; Louis Charles Smith, librarian, and Rev. Luther H. Waring, chaplain.

Six were named to the board of management, Dr. J. Newton Baker, Henry W. Samson, Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel, Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, Maj. A. M. Holcombe and Lieut. Comdr. S. S. Williamson.

The new president named the following committee chairmen: Ways and means, Maj. Holcombe; building, Brig. Gen. William E. Horton; library, Maj. Leonard; meetings, Lieut. Comdr. Williamson; membership, J. F. Little; press, Charlton M. Clark; color guard, J. C. McGrew; aid to president, T. C. Washington, jr.; correspondence and safety, Maj. Gen. Fries; athletics, E. B. Quiggle; recruiting, Alonzo Gray; advancement, Harry W. Samson.

Henry Pu-Yi's Wife To Reign as Queen

Enthronement to Raise Her From Commoner's Status.

Hsinking (Changchun), Manchuria, Feb. 22 (AP).—When Henry Pu-Yi drops his civil title of "Mr. Chief Executive" March 1 and becomes Emperor of the new Manchurian Empire, his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Pu-Yi, will automatically be raised from the position of a commoner to full queenhood.

She is the daughter of a Manchu business man.

Ten years after his dethronement as Emperor of all China, Pu-Yi selected the present Mrs. Pu-Yi as his bride from a group of photographs of "marriageable young ladies" submitted to him by his advisers. She was then described as a "Manchu beauty."

Schotts Alley, Frame for Senate Office Building

A civil works artist, fascinated by the proximity of alley dwelling to the Senate Office Building, captured the spirit of this relationship and the black and white sketch of a sections of Schotts alley, shown above, resulted. There are 34 houses in this alley, accommodating 130 persons, of whom 40 per cent are children under 16. The shacks are between First and Second and B and C streets northeast. The alley has two entrances, each 15 feet wide. Senators in upper-floor offices on the east side can look down on the alley shanties. This drawing was done by Howard Armstrong.

Alienist Hits Highball Story

Victim on Death Bed Was Unreliable, Surprise Witness Holds.

Greenwood, Miss., Feb. 22 (AP). Testimony by an alienist that he did not believe Dr. John Preston Kennedy, Greenwood surgeon, was in a condition to make a reliable statement at the time he was alleged to have charged Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean with poisoning him, was put before the Dean trial jury late today.

Attorneys defending the 33-year-old woman physician against a murder charge put Dr. O. A. Smith, alienist of Meridian, Miss., on the stand as a surprise witness, propounding a lengthy hypothetical question which included a repetition of the State's description of the agonized 10-day illness which preceded Kennedy's death last August.

Smith testified on the heels of a clash between lawyers over the Kennedy love letters to Dr. Dean. The district attorney charged the defense with putting undated letters in dated envelopes "to strengthen her claim that Kennedy pursued her."

Sentence Suspended To Attend Funeral

Charges against a defendant in Police Court were dismissed yesterday so he might attend a funeral. Theodore Oliver, colored, 23, was arraigned before Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

"I took a drink because my grandfather died," Oliver told the court. Judge Schuldt took the charges under advisement, then told the defendant: "The court is sorry to hear of your grandfather's death. I will suspend sentence so you may attend the funeral."

Col. Paddock Named Garment Code Head

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Col. Richard B. Paddock, jr., former member of the Army general staff and a nephew of Gen. John J. Pershing, has been appointed executive director of the cotton garment code, it was announced today. He will begin his duties March 5.

Under his supervision will be 4,000 manufacturing plants, most of them in small towns and villages.

LaGuardia 'Shocked' By Cafe Conditions

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia today described conditions found among hotel kitchen help and waiters as "astounding, startling, shocking and revolting."

The health department's investigation, undertaken at his order, will be continued indefinitely, the mayor said, adding, "We'll make it the city without a stomachache."

House Passes Adjusted Pay Outside U. S.

Bill Compensates Those Abroad Who Suffered by Depreciation.

Over a one-man filibuster, the House yesterday authorized adjustments in salaries of all employes of the United States abroad to compensate them for depreciation of the dollar since July 15, 1933.

Despite parliametnary tactics by Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, to delay passage, the bill sponsored by Representative McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, was passed on a roll-call vote by 296 to 53 after Britten had raised the point of a quorum.

Previously, Britten had offered several amendments, each of which was voted down.

Foreign service employes of the Government stand to get approximately $7,000,000 in back pay if the bill passes the Senate and is signed by the President, but several more hurdles must be cleared before the money is actually paid.

Under terms of the bill, the budget director must recommend appropriations, the President must approve them, and then the House Appropriations Committee must pass upon the proposed expenditures before any adjustments are made.

Foreign representatives of the State and Commerce Departments and enlisted men and officers in the Navy and Marine Corps will be benefited by the adjustment.

One suicide, several cases of mental breakdown, and the payment of the salaries of minor employes by Ambassadors and Ministers from their own pockets, were related at hearings before the Foreign Affairs Committee.

The bill is both retroactive to July 15, 1933, and continuing in that it authorizes annual appropriations to meet losses sustained by foreign service employes due to fluctuations of the American dollar abroad. The retroactive feature does not apply to those countries to which the President sent gold last summer and fall to offset depreciation of United States currency.

500 Taxicab Strikers Return to Paris Jobs

Foe of Long Is Confirmed

(Associated Press.)

While Senator Long, of Louisiana, chanced to be in the Senate cloakroom late yesterday, the Senate went into a brief executive session and confirmed, among others, the nomination of D. D. Moore as collector of internal revenue for Louisiana.

Moore's was one of several Louisiana nominations which Long had declared were "personally objectionable" to him. Moore's nomination was recommended by leaders of the anti-Long faction in Louisiana.

Long was taken by surprise and caught off guard. He said last night that Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader, had said the Senate would hold no executive session yesterday.

Long said he would ask Robinson to have the confirmation set aside and brought up again at a later executive session. This indicated Long probably would ask Monday for reconsideration of the nomination.

No Cold Feet, Thief Obtains Overshoes

If spring is "just around the corner" a thief who yesterday broke into the parked automobile of Gustavus R. Gray Poolesville, Md., doesn't know anything about it.

Gray told police he parked his car near North Capitol and E streets northwest. He was gone only a few minutes and returned to find a window broken. His loss included several pairs of rubber arctics and other rubber footwear, for which he is a salesman.

Direct Jobless Relief Slated For Oklahoma

Murray Gives in, Ends State Body; Hopkins Scans New Set-ups.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration yesterday was considering taking over direct control of relief in Oklahoma, with the possibility that Federal checks might be issued to those eligible for direct relief.

A tie-up of the Oklahoma relief distribution system was precipitated Wednesday when Gov. William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray dissolved his State relief organization after weeks of dispute with Federal officials. Murray, whose methods were criticized by Federal administrators, gave notice that he was "all through."

In every other State where Federal relief funds are distributed State relief organizations working under Federal rules are in control. If the Emergency Relief Administration takes over direct control of relief in Oklahoma, it will be the first time that the Government has paid money directly and dictated local policies.

It appeared yesterday that Murray had lost the bitter controversy he has waged with the FERA since last fall. Deprived for six weeks of all Federal relief funds, he apparently capitulated to Harry L. Hopkins by stepping completely out of the picture.

It was indicated that Carl Giles, in charge of the Oklahoma Civil Works Administration, would be made relief administrator in addition to his CWA duties.

O'Connor Murder Suspect Quizzed

Former Clergyman Denies Slaying, N. Y. Girl.

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—One of Long Island's bizarre murder mysteries was revived today with the questioning of a former clergyman in connection with the slaying last January of Mary Ellen O'Connor, 15.

The subject of police interest was William Henry Du Bois, 32, a post-office clerk, of Jamaica, who was arrested in a Y. M. C. A. there last night on a charge of impairing the morals of a minor.

Du Bois denied any connection with the O'Connor case. The girl was last seen talking with a man in clerical garb on a Long Island railroad platform in East New York.

But why send 4,000 miles for tobacco?

. . . because spicy, aromatic Turkish is the best seasoning there is for a cigarette.

Then it blends and cross-blends them with various kinds of choice home-grown tobaccos in the right balance to give you a cigarette that's milder, a cigarette that tastes better.

A leaf of Turkish tobacco—smaller than the palm of your hand—800 or more to the pound. There are many thousands of these leaves in each of these bales below, ready for shipment to America.

Keech Urged For Public Utility Post

White House Receptive to Commissioners' Proposal.

Would Combine People's Counsel, Corporation Assistantship.

President Roosevelt was urged yesterday by the District Commissioners to appoint People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech to the Public Utilities Commission for three years to succeed Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, resigned.

Action on the Commissioners' recommendation is expected shortly, because Keech's term expires Saturday. He is now fighting a case against the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and unless he or his successor is appointed, the litigation may have to be halted.

If the President accepts the recommendation of the Commission it is expected that the job of People's Counsel and that of special assistant to the corporation counsel in charge of utility matters will be merged. Should the merger be accomplished, William A. Roberts, now representing the corporation counsel before the commission, is expected to be retained. The merger will effect a saving of $7,000.

On Non-Political Basis.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen made the recommendation to Marvin H. McIntyre, White House secretary. The indorsement, Commissioner Hazen said, was on a non-political basis. Keech has never actively engaged in politics, although his family is active in the Democratic party in Southern Maryland.

Keech was appointed assistant corporation counsel during the Coolidge Administration, and was recommended for the position of Peple's Counsel by President Hoover. Commissioner Hazen said the name of Keech was forwarded to the President strictly on a "merit basis."

The indorsement of the commissioners is understood to have been very favorably received at the White House.

Duplication Seen.

All of the commissioners are of the opinion that the People's Counsel post and the job of assistant corporation counsel in charge of utility affairs is a useless duplication, and consolidation would be beneficial to the taxpayers. The only difference in the positions is that the People's Counsel is a direct representative of all consumers, while the assistant corporation counsel directly represents the commission.

If Keech is appointed, it will not mean more salary. He now receives $7,500 a year and the Utilities Commission post pays the same stipend.

During his tenure as people's counsel, Keech has had an active part in many orders of the Public Utilities Commission of benefit to Washingtonians. Chief among these are modification of the consent decree formula for the determination of power rates, which resulted in an annual saving of $750,000 for power users; prevention of middleman's profit on submetering; an 8½ per cent reduction in gas rates; the street railway merger and the use of the universal transfer; 3-cent fares for school children, and a reduction in telephone rates, now being fought in the courts.

Husband Saves Trio From Gas

Ralph Edwards Escapes Fume Filled House to Summon Help.

He awakened in an upper-floor room at his home, 222 Fourteenth place northeast, shortly after 6 a. m. and was immediately conscious of a sickening sensation. Attempting to rise from bed he fell to the floor.

Edwards called to his wife, Agnes, 29. Receiving no response, he feebly attempted to arouse other members of the household.

Despite his dazed state, Edwards managed to crawl downstairs and went to the home of a neighbor, Mrs. Catherine Johnson, where he collapsed. Mrs. Johnson summoned two ambulances, police and the rescue squad.

Doctors, police and firemen entered the Edwards home and carried Mrs. Edwards, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Burnadette Harler, and her baby, Mary Harler, 2, to safety. All were soon revived.

Lottery for New York Revenue Is Proposed

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—A plan for the city to conduct a lottery to relieve its financial plight was laid before Mayor LaGuardia today by Alderman Elias Jacobs, who said the mayor appeared to favor it. LaGuardia did not comment.

The resolution was referred to committee. Jacobs said a bill already had been drafted and would be introduced in the Legislature soon.

Burglars Bag Variety of Loot From 4 Stores

Clothing valued at more than $1,500 was reported stolen from the specialty shop of Milton R. Ney, 801 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Intruders forced a rear window and took women's dresses, coats and lingerie, police were told.

When robbers smashed into the hardware store of John B. Nye, 1828 First street northwest, they took everything from roller skates to a blow torch, the proprietor reported. He estimated his loss at $40. Missing articles included air rifles, cans of paint, batteries and shaving brushes.

D. C. Lodger Dead From Gas Fumes

Frank Reed Leaves Note Indicating Despondency.

Frank Reed, 30, was found unconscious from illuminating gas fumes in the bathroom of a lodging house at 610 Sixth street northwest yesterday by fellow roomers. The man was pronounced dead by a Casualty Hospital physician.

Police said a note indicating suicide, addressed to a "Mrs. Reed" in New York City, declared, "I am nothing but grief to you and mother. I might as well go out of your lives."

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald is investigating.

Hog Butchering On Farms Blow To Federal Tax

Many Nebraskans Avoid Process Levy Because of Low Returns.

He estimates 400,000 to 500,000 hogs were killed locally in Nebraska, one of the big pig States of the Union, in 1933. This climaxed a steady increase since 1930, when about 300,000 animals were slaughtered "at home."

Reports to Jones by bankers in all parts of the State indicated, he says, that the increase was due to a slump in wholesale prices "without a corresponding drop in retail prices."

He regards the pork processing tax, which is designed to pay the bill for the Government hog-reducing program, as an important factor in farm butchering, especially in view of the ruling that has opened the way for city folks to eat pork without paying the tax.

This ruling, contained in a question-and-answer sheet prepared by the corn-hog section of the AAA, says:

"The Bureau of Internal Revenue regulations provide for exemption only for producers of the taxed commodity, but an exception is made where any person buys a hog for consumption only by himself or his immediate family."

Under such a rule, Jones says, city dwellers may drive to the country, buy a hog at wholesale prices and have it butchered for a fee. Some growers near here, he says, have offered to do such jobs for $1 a hog.

The processing tax took effect November 5 at 50 cents a hundredweight and increased to $1 December 1. Another rise, to $1.50, was scheduled January 1, but postponed a month. On March 1 the peak of $2 is to be reached.

Daughter of Rep. Doughton Escapes Death as Lift Falls

Credits New House Office Building Operator With Saving Life.

Miss Reba L. Doughton, pretty daughter of Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when an elevator in the New House Office Building dropped five floors.

The elevator failed to stop at the floor Miss Doughton had ordered, and the operator, fearing it was out of control, turned off the electric current, stopping the cab by an emergency device.

Miss Doughton, who is employed by her father, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, was treated for shock in her father's office and later was sent home.

An inspection of the ultramodern elevator system in the New House Office Building will be made today as a result of the accident.

Doughton last night declared that the "elevator service never has been satisfactory" despite the fact that the system is of the most modern type.

David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, said that the elevator had not actually dropped but that the operator, Early Gilkey, had become frightened when the cab did not stop when he thought it should.

Miss Doughton spoke highly of the presence of mind of the operator, however, and said that her life was probably saved by the alacrity with which he turned off the power.

Reports that the elevators had dropped on previous occasions, though without injuring any one, were "news" to Lynn.

Civil Service To Improve Rating Plan

Personnel Leaders in Private Business to Aid in Work.

Individual Study to Be Made of All U. S. Employes.

The Civil Service Commission reported yesterday that an individual study of all Government workers will be undertaken to improve the efficiency rating system.

This step was taken following a meeting Tuesday in New York of the industrial advisory committee of the President's Council of Personnel Administration. Leading personnel officials in private business are cooperating with Federal officials in the plan.

The committee approved a plan evolved by Dr. L. J. O'Rourke, director of the Personnel Administration Council and director of research in personnel administration of the Civil Service Commission.

The following resolution was passed:

"The action of the United States Civil Service Commission, with the approval of the Council of Personnel Administration, in deciding upon the plan developed by Dr. O'Rourke for making an analysis of the weak and the strong points of employes and assisting them to improve themselves, and thus increase the efficiency with which the work is performed, is approved by the committee as a forward step in good business management."

The second step in the plan, which also was approved, provides for a cooperative study by industry and the Government to make the work incident to an analysis of an employe's qualifications an integral part of personnel work.

Among those attending the meeting were R. I. Rees, vice president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co; J. W. Dietz, superintendent of industrial relations of the Western Electric Co., Kearny, N. J.; C. R. Dooley, personnel manager, Standard Oil Co. of New York; John Goetz, managing director of the American Management Association, and Dr. O'Rourke.

"THE LAST ROUND-UP." Paramount picturization of Zane Grey's story, "The Border Legion," featuring Randolph Scott, Monte Blue, Barbara Fritchie, Fred Kohler and Fuzzy Knight. Directed by Henry Hathaway. Reviewed Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Zane Grey here has written the swan song of the border legion, and Paramount, in "The Last Round-Up," has filmed the actual eradication of the last vestiges of the Old West, when men rode hard, shot straight, and law was something made to order for the specific occasion.

One by one, the outlaws are erased in the traditional manner, and the stalwart band of brigands, for many years a permanent disjunct to the cinema, becomes nothing but a memory. There was frequently but little variation in their offerings—but they were consistently fast, full of courageous action, and virile.

The Usual Formula.

To the foller of Westerns, "The Last Round-Up" will present the usual formula: the outlaw chief, rising in the world of brigandage from cattle rustling to the pilfering of gold; the lone cowboy, who gets mixed up with the legion; the girl, to be rescued at the last minute, and the usual complement of bandits, sheriffs, members of the posses and bar flies.

To the three or four others, who do not care to admit their addiction to "horse operas," the film version of "The Border Legion" is just "another of those things" which offers little variation on a well-known theme: law, or what passes for it, versus the bandits, with justice and young love conquering all. This elect group, too, will find their villains weakening, the villainy being tainted with cardiac softening.

Then, too, in a picture definitely dated 1869, it seems queer that the saloon barytone should suddenly burst into Billy Hill's well-worn (and frequently butchered) lament of the cow hand. It is a good number—in its place—but its use as an integral part of the picture seems out of place.

Competent Cast.

Notwithstanding these limitations, and regrets, Monte Blue makes a smooth villain, with the reliable Fred Kohler as his partner; Randolph Scott is a lone victim of circumstances, who finally succumbs to Barbara Fritchie, and Fuzzy Knight is ample justification for the lighter moments.

While possessing no particular attribute to link her with her illustrious ancestor, Miss Fritchie, who here makes her cinematic debut, makes one of the best of Western heroines. Usually these ladies are unbelievable, but here is one who seems to be a daughter of the depicted era, one who knows what it is all about and is prepared to match wits with a man on even terms.

In the supplementary show, Borrah Minnevitch and his Harmonica Rascals top the list with their comedy musical, "Where's That Tiger?" wherein the gang present a series of numbers closing with "Tiger Rag." Charles Judels and Lionel Stander are seen in "Pugs and Kisses," a fistic comedy that has a moment or two. A release of the Paramount News completes the list.

Legal Liquor Begins to Flow Into District

Asquith Letters To Woman Rap Noted Britons

Publication Causes Stir in England; Took Fling at Lloyd George.

London (U.P.).—A sensation has been caused in English literary and political circles by the publication of the letters of a late former prime minister.

In 1915 H. H. Asquith, later to become Lord Oxford and Asquith, was 63 and premier of Great Britain. At this time the statesman met Mrs. Hilda Harrisson, 27, and their friendship grew and lasted until Asquith's death.

During that period Asquith wrote many letters to his young friend. Some of them appear in a recently published volume, in which the recipient's name does not appear.

Indignation Aroused.

Uncomplimentary references to personages still living are made in some of the letters, and it is this that has aroused considerable indignation over their publication.

Perhaps the most flagrant example of this is where the writer, referring to David Lloyd George, who succeeded him in the wartime premiership, says: "L. G. says that he had nothing to do with it, and for once I believe that he is telling the truth."

Mrs. Harrisson is a talented portrait painter, and the widow of a major in the artillery who was killed while the letters were being written.

Son and Daughter Heirs.

Out of the statesman's comparatively meager estate of about $45,000, the sum of $12,500 was left to educate Mrs. Harrisson's son and daughter.

Asquith had some caustic commentaries to make in connection with life and politics. Of women voters, he said:

"They are, for the most part, hopelessly ignorant of politics, credulous to the last degree, and flickering with gusts of sentiment like a candle in the wind."

Of the Labor party he wrote:

"They know as much about parliamentary politics as a hen does about astrology;" and in describing a fashionable wedding, he wrote:

"As I followed once more the familiar service, I felt all the repulsion, and more, that you described a couple of weeks ago . . . the servile, insincere formulae except in the mouths of people not yet grown up; with a dreary, platitudinous elocution by a minor bishop; it filled me with something like nausea."

New Breed of Cattle Planned for Rodeos

Shawmut, Mont. (U.P.).—Those cowboys who make bone-breaking a profession by participating in rodeos may find occasion to berate Leo Creme roundly in a few seasons.

Not satisfied with the disposition and cowboy-shedding ability of present outlaws, Cremer is planning to develop a new breed of bucking brutes on his ranch here.

Cremer has secured a small herd of bison from the Yellowstone Park range and intends to cross them with Braham cattle, already considered the cowboy's worst "friends."

15 Mt. Vernon Deer Will Go To Shenandoah

Animals to Pioneer Game Preserve Planned for National Park.

Shenandoah National Park is in need of more wild life, so 15 aristocratic deer on George Washington's estate at Mount Vernon are going to get a new home soon.

Plans were announced yesterday by Arno B. Cammerer, director of National parks, for transfer of the animals as the first step of a game-stocking program for a region once noted for its abundant wild life. The deer will make the 80-mile trip to the Blue Ridge Mountains in trucks.

Youths enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps camp at Fort Hunt, a few miles up the Memorial highway from Mount Vernon, are now building a corral where the deer will be gathered for crating and loading. Moving of the 15 Shenandoah pioneers, which are said to be in excellent condition, will take place in about two weeks.

The Mount Vernon herd was started a number of years ago in keeping with the policy to develop the estate as it was in Washington's day. The first President, in one of his diaries, recorded his efforts to establish a deer park.

Cammerer said there have been no deer in the Shenandoah area for about half a century. Protection of game in Great Smoky National Park, which became effective four years ago, has resulted in a marked increase in wild life there, according to the director.

Bride Would Prevent Racketeering in Jobs

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride has assigned an assistant to study the legal possibilities of prohibiting employment agencies which charge fees for registration of job seekers.

Commissioner George E. Allen is determined to stamp out "racketeering" of this tpye. If posible, he says, he is willing to place such an exorbitant tax on them as to make it impossible for them to continue.

Murch School Wall Repairs Start Monday

Work will begin Monday on completion of six unfinished rooms at the Murch Elementary School where 200 overflow pupils from the Alice Deal Junior High School have been housed since the beginning of the present school year, it was learned yesterday.

Contract for the work was expedited after the children were forced to vacate the rooms during recent cold weather.

The 200 children will be shifted to five other rooms in the Murch Building. Although there are 437 elementary pupils besides the 200 junior high, no undue congestion is expected.

The rooms to be completed are on the second floor, north wing of the Murch Building. Plastering is the principal work planned.

The five rooms to be used temporarily consist of a domestic science room, a room in which lunches have been served needy pupils and three regular classrooms. A corridor on the second floor will be used for lunch space.

Alice Deal pupils will continue to be accommodated at Murch until an addition is built. Efforts will be made by citizens to have Congress include an item for the Deal addition in the present District budget.

Virginia Racing Bills Fail to Pass by One Vote Despite 50-46 Majority

Measures Up Today for New Test

Reconsideration Is Made Sure by 60-34 Vote, House Delegates.

Precedents Are Toppled; Lobbyists Ordered Off Floor of Chamber.

By Doug Warrenfels
(Post Staff Correspondent).

RICHMOND, Feb. 22.—Bills to legalize racing in Virginia were all but left at the post today in the House of Delegates.

The measures failed of passage—perhaps only temporarily—by a one-vote margin. With a constitutional majority of 51 required, 50 ballots were case in the affirmative and 46 in the negative. A showdown will come tomorrow on a motion to reconsider.

"It was a dead heat today, but we'll win the run-off," commented Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, champion of the move to permit racing and pari-mutuel wagering in Alexandria, Charlottesville and Virginia Beach.

Reform leaders, including a galaxy of militant clergymen, were equally confident racing hopes would be definitely spiked tomorrow.

Just as the speaker stated that the bills were defeated, Delegate Frank Moore, of Rockbridge, rose to announce a pair.

"Mr. Speaker," said Moore, "I want to announce a pair. Had E. Blackburn Moore, of Clarke, been present he would have voted for the bills. I would have voted against the bills."

Vote Does Not Count.

Under the rules, however, Moore's vote could not count, although the pair goes into the record. The Clarke delegate had been called away because of a death in his family.

Hill Fleet, of Lancaster, sought to apply the parliamentary clincher and final defeat to the bills by moving to reconsider. John Q. Rhodes, of Louisa, moved to pass by Fleet's motion and the House voted, 60-34, to pass by until tomorrow, thus holding the bills on the calendar.

Precedents toppled right and left as the legislative turmoil sizzled. The spectacle of a measure gaining a majority without passage was a parliamentary freak.

Unparalleled also was the sharp rebuke to lobbyists administered by ordinarily meek Speaker J. Sinclair Brown. He ruled the so-called "locusts" were infesting the floor in violation of rules and should be ejected.

White-haired "Col." William Bullitt Fitzhugh, the sergeant at arms, resplendent in tails with a fresh boutonniere in his coat lapel, flourished his gold-headed stick and threatened to "throw you lobbyists head foremost" from the chamber.

Lobbyists on the Run.

Delegate Bruce Jones, Bristol, charged legalization of the sport was sought merely to please residents of the District of Columbia.

"Why not be consistent," he demanded, "and build a gambling casino just south of the Potomac for the entertainment of the people of Washington? Don't they want dog racing and crap shooting, too? Certainly they're not pikers."

Another opponent, Delegate W. N. Neff, Abingdon, conceded arguments that the bill violated the constitution were unfounded.

"But don't let us wink at the moral issue," he beseeched. "Any form of gambling is demoralizing to the moral fabric of the people. This bill would permit gambling in its most glamorous form."

Reports that racing would increase State revenues were discredited by Delegate Isham T. Wilkinson, Lunenberg. He predicted gambling losses would be deducted from income tax returns and deplete the treasury. He added: "I love horses, but you know and I know the people of Virginia don't want race-track gambling. You'd better follow the wishes of your constituents."

Hall Answers Attacks.

Hall, who spoke at length yesterday, replied to the attacks, speaking with fervor.

"While I may be listed as a liberal conservative I want you to know that I would not offer a bill which would bring disgrace upon my State," he said. "I am as much interested in morals as any one, but I know that the pendulum has swung and that you can't legislate morals.

"I want to appeal to you as I have never appealed to you before to give me your vote. This bill will not increase gambling, but it will drive out every crooked bookmaker now plying his trade illegally and preying upon the youth of the State."

Hall read a letter from a former State's attorney in Maryland stating that racing and betting had not increased crime and that the attorney had found it necessary to prosecute only three cases as a result of the tracks.

Herring said streams of Richmond and Norfolk cars passed his home in Prince William going to Maryland races.

"I do not see any more harm in having racing in Virginia than in Maryland," he said. "I don't bet, but I would like to see it legalized under this bill."

Proponents were making every possible effort to have the 50 votes received today as well as that of E. Blackburn Moore on the floor tomorrow. Opponents were busy in person and by wire, seeking to defeat the measures.

The vote: For: W. H. Adams, Bandy, Beard, Birrell, Boschen, Campbell, D. Coleman, I. N. Coleman, Collings, Daughton, H. B. Davis, Dejarnette, Dovell, Eacho, Early, Edwards, Embrey, English, George, Hall, Harman, Herring, Hobson, Irvine, Littleton, Lyon, MacKall, Massenburg, McCue, McMurran, Medley, Miller, Moffatt, Morrison, Moss, Oast, Oliver, Page, Rhodes, Richards, Ruffin, Scott, Shrader, Smith, Stephens, Sterrett, Stuart, Sutherland, L. G. White and Witten; total, 50.

Against: B. D. Adams, H. H. Adams, Ashworth, Barrow, Bennett, Bustard, Buxton, Chitwood, J. T. Coleman, Crowder, Daniel, Daughtrey, R. B. Davil, Duval, Finney, Fishburn, Fleet, Frazier, Grabeel, Harris, Hodges, Holleman, Humphries, Hutchison, Jackson, Jones, King, Louderback, Moffett, Morgan, Neff, Perry, Quesenbery, Rodgers, Sanford, Segar, Shelton, Spiers, Stanley, Terrell, Waldrop, Walker, Wilkinson, Williams, Wilson, Brown; total, 46.

E. Blackburn Moore, affirmative, was paired with Frank Moore, negative. Had the former been present and voted the bill would have passed.

East-West Polo Will Be Resumed

British, Argentine Teams Not to Invade U. S.

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Providing America's high-goal polo players suffer no further serious mishap from combat among themselves, all-star teams representing the East and West will provide the feature of the 1934 season with a series of matches, best two out of three, to be played this summer, probably on the historic turf of the Meadow Brook Club, Long Island.

This decision followed definite word that England will not be able to finance a challenge this year for the international cup, last played for in 1930, and that the Argentine has also decided not to send a team here to play for the cup of the Americas.

Taberski, Cue Star, Plays Here Tonight

Frank Taberski, six-time world champion pocket billiardist and one of the first flight players in the present group, comes to Washington for a brace of exhibition games tonight. Following each match he will entertain with trick and fancy shots.

At 7:45 Taberski takes on Al Haga, District amateur who upset the dope by beating Erwin Rudolph, present world champion, when the latter showed here some time ago. The visiting star then moves downtown to the Lewis & Krauss parlors, where he will take on Everett Crouch, who also gave Rudolph a few anxious moments. No admission will be charged to either match.

C. U. Trackmen Determined To Score

THE pitter patter not of baby feet, but some man-sized 10's and 12 double E's resounded in the Catholic U. gym yesterday afternoon as the Cardinal trackmen ambled through their paces in preparation for tomorrow night's indoor carnival. C. U. is the host school, but its wheezing and puffing athletes have no intention of being perfect hosts—they want to win.

Only 14 men will run for Catholic U. It is the greenest squad to represent the school in recent years. The boys realize they have a herculean task on their hands, but, nevertheless, are determined to keep a lion's share of honors on the Brookland campus.

Slim, Determined Squad.

Track fans await with interest the appearance of Grover Everett, former Eastern High School star, now performing in Virginia silks. Only last week Everett equaled the world record of 5.8 seconds for 50-yard low hurdles, and also placed second in the 50-yard dash. Everett is but one of a formidable squad that Coach Archie Hahn is bringing to Washington for the meet and the Cavaliers will be strong contenders for the team trophy.

Bradley Entered.

The meet will have a strong local flavor with Georgetown and Maryland, agumented by the not far distant forces of Navy, running. Georgetown has eleven entries, including Wilmer Bradley, its ace sprinter who will race a crack field in the 50-yard open, and also run in the 440- and 50-yard low hurdles.

Earle Widmyer and Ed Quinn top Maryland's entry list of 20 men who are to compete in thirteen events. The pair will run in the Abbey Club 50-yard dash, cofeature with the Ryan 1,000 of the games. Bob Slye, a former Eastern High School luminary, will oppose Everett in the 50-yard low hurdles. A small regiment of 26 men will uphold Navy's honor.

Thirty events, the first scheduled at 8 o'clock, are to be contested. The meet will last until near midnight.

Harpers Ferry Bows To Martinsburg Five

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Harpers Ferry High School was practicaly eliminated as a contender for Eastern Panhandle basket ball honors here when the Ferry five was defeated for the second time this year by Martinsburg, 28-16.

10-Day Race Meet Hagerstown Plan

Fair Association Is Told to Submit Dates.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—A ten-day racing meet instead of two five-day meets here is being considered by the Hagerstown Fair Association, following a conference held in Baltimore by fair officials and the State Racing Commission.

The commission has indicated that it might approve such a meet in the spring, and has asked the local association to submit proposed dates.

The spring meeting would open May 15, under tentative plans. The action would be subject to approval of the State Racing Commission and on Charles Town moving back the opening date of its spring meet.

D. C. Pair Advances In Handball Tourney

First-round doubles matches in the National Y. M. C. A. handball tournament were played at the Central Y yesterday morning and afternoon, with Lloyd Walker and Otto Berg, of Ohio, defending champions, not participating.

Doubles.

J. Endzevich and C. Mentz, Cleveland, over P. Pearlman and J. Schwartz, Washington, 21-7, 21-18; C. S. Walker and J. Cowley, Washington, over Ted Beeman and Fred Schmidt, New York, 21-6, 21-13; T. R. Charshee and T. Mangan, Washington, over Leo Manka and Henry Herz, Brooklyn (by forfeit); Walter Streuli and J. Elmore, Memphis, Tenn., over M. M. Brandi and B. C. Walz, Camden, N. J. (by forfeit).

M. A. Bates and Sam Johnston, Columbus, Ohio, over W. C. Woodward and L. Vineberg, Washington, 21-8, 21-17; Dr. Eckstrom and R. Fielder, Houston, Tex., over W. Winkler and M. Buck, Washington, 21-7, 21-17; O. Prescott and B. Deutsch, New York, over William Neville and Ray Nash, Washington, 21-11, 21-11; George Nelson and Perrie McLean, Washington, over A. Schotz and R. Kunow, Rochester, 21-7, 21-1.

District Team Beaten By Handley Wrestlers

Winchester, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Handley High School wrestlers defeated the Pony Express squad, of Washington, D. C., in the local gym, 28 to 8. Opening the card was a boxing bout between Lefty Lake and John Ramay, which was immediately followed by the 105-pound class wrestling, in which Eli Ellis, of Handley, won over Goetze, Pony Express, by a time advantage.

Results of other events were:

125-pound class—Schmelman (Pony Express) defeated C. Lillies (Handley), fall. Time advantage.

Buddy Myer 14th Nat To Sign 1934 Contract

Buddy Myer, flashy little second-sacker of the Nationals, has finally listened to President Clark Griffith's arguments and accepted terms for the coming season, according to advices received yesterday from the Washington club's spring headquarters at Biloxi, Miss.

While the New York Giants, National League flag winers and victors over the Nats in the world series, have all of their players in the 1934 fold, Myer is only the fourteenth Nat to be swung into line.

Pitt to Battle Georgetown Tomorrow

Hargaden Makes Bid for All-American Berth in Clash Here.

ED HARGADEN'S chances of making the Eastern Conference and the All-American quintets and a record near and dear to the hearts of all Georgetown supporters will be in the balance tomorrow night when the Hoyas encounter Pittsburgh at Tech High School. It will be their second game this season. Pitt won the first, 34-31.

Hargaden, who was named on the mythical Conference five last season, needs only to play his usual game to retain that honor, but he must play a trifle better to attract the All-American selectors' attention. The lanky Syracuse Irishman starred in the first Pitt game—kept Georgetown in the running with a steady flow of leather through the buckets. Another such performance and he virtually is assured of All-American recognition, and absolutely certain of making the Conference honor roll.

Pitt Heavy Favorite.

Pittsburgh has yet to beat Georgetown in Washington. The Hoyas won the 1932 game, 33-30, and repeated last season, 28-27, winning out in the last 8 seconds of play. This year, however, "Red" Carlson's men hope for better results, and unless Georgetown springs the grand-daddy of all surprises, they'll get them.

Pitt's Team is identical with that of last year with but one exception—Bill Hughes for Don Smith, the latter an All-American forward last season. Hughes pocketed three long shots near the end of the first game with Notre Dame that defeated the Irish. His running mate will be Don McCamant. Claire Cribbs, center, is the team's leading scorer and an outstanding choice for conference honors. He was declared ineligible on the eve of the last Georgetown game in '33, and did not play here. Russ Ochsenhirt and Skippy Hughes, both veterans, hold down the guard positions.

Woodberry Defeats Fredericksburg Five

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Avenging a previous reverse suffered at the hands of Fredericksburg High School this season, the Woodberry Forest quintet last night vanquished the Yellow Jackets, 27 to 15.

Barrow and Patterson, with 8 and 9 points, respectively, led the attack of the victors, while the Yellow Jackets' leader was Calamos, who tallied 6 markers and starred for his team with brilliant floor work.

Boxers Open Conference Tourney

56 of South's Best Are Entered for Battles Starting Today.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.).—Fifty-six of the South's finest, in whose 112 gloved fists repose the hopes of 10 schools from below the Mason-Dixon line, will start a mad scramble for Southern Conference boxing honors tomorrow afternoon at the University of Virginia. All of the Southern Conference colleges will be well represented in the battle for championship honors, with Virginia, the defending champion, generally conceded, and odds-on chance of repeating. But any of the other nine institutions are capable of capturing the highest laurels.

Virginia is believed by close followers of collegiate cuffing to have a decided edge in the bantamweight class, in which they are represented by Archie Hahn, jr., the defending champion. Either Willie Cavedo, of V. M. I., or Vincent Onisko, of Duke, is expected to oppose Hahn in the finals, with the latter granted a good chance of emerging with the title if he has continued the rapid progress recently made in his boxing.

Featherweight Toss-up.

Featherweight honors are considered a toss-up by close followers of Southern Conference boxing. Gordon Rainey, the Cavaliers' 125-pounder, is a good boxer, but Virginia Tech's Fred Hall and Jimmy Williams, of North Carolina, are both good punchers and exceptionally rugged for amateur boxers.

Norment Quarles, Tarheel lightweight, last year's Conference featherweight diadem-wearer, is generally conceded the 135-pound title without difficulty. Walter Webb, Maryland's entrant in the Barney Ross class, is a very capable glove heaver who may surprise the many by upsetting confident prefight predictions. Capt. Julius Rivers of the South Carolina squad is a good boxer and might work out a decision over either Quarles or Webb.

A neat fight is looked for in the welterweight class, in which Charlie Garner, of North Carolina State and Leroy Sides, of Duke, are generally favored to battle to the finals. Both are rugged, hard-punching "club fighter" types, who propel leather with too much venom for any but each other. Stuart Womer, Virginia's delegate in this class, is a smart boxer who may work his way to the finals.

Junior Middleweights.

Hal Stuart, of Virginia, and Lyman McAboy, of Maryland, are generally rated the outstanding contestants in the junior middleweight class. Both the Cavalier and Terrapin representatives have displayed remarkable punching power and great willingness to fight till the final bell in bouts this season.

Henry Willard's southpaw style may carry him through to a second year's tenure on the middleweight crown. The South Carolina portsider probably will encounter stiff opposition from Lyndon Lee, of Virginia, who, while not a great puncher, is possessed of a great fighting sense and natural boxing ability.

Martin Looks Best.

Lewis Martin, possibly Washington and Lee's best, has been conceded clear sailing in the light-heavyweight division by most observers. Stewart McCaw, Maryland 175-pounder, may bring his unorthodox ringmanship to bear on the opposition to annex top honors in this class.

Red Negri, of V. P. I., considered one of the best heavyweight prospects in college ranks since Steve Hamas, may encounter a real stumbling block in the person of Al Ferrall, of Maryland. Negri was extended to an extra round in decisioning the Old Liner in the quarter-finals of last year's championships, and many believe the balance will be thrown in favor of the Terrapin Thumper this year. Kenneth Stephens, of North Carolina State, may surprise.

The Entries.

Welterweights—Maynard Womer, Virginia, vs. Edward Wincher, Washington and Lee; Charlie Garner, North Carolina State, vs. Curtis Burton, Virginia Military Institute.

Featherweight—Jimmy Williams, North Carolina, vs. J. E. Altman, Clemson; Andrew Hill, South Carolina, vs. Fred Hall, Virginia Tech.

Schmeling Given Offer of $10,000

Daytona Beach, Feb. 22 (AP).—Max Schmeling was offered $10,000 today to box here March 20 against the winner of the Johnny Risko-Bob Godwin bout next Monday night. The offer was made by wire to the former heavyweight chatmpion's manager, Joe Jacobs, in New York City by Lew Diamond, promoter of the Risko-Godwin fight.

Diamond promoted the show here two years ago in which Joe Knight beat Maxie Rosenbloom, and this winter made an offer of $10,000 to Rosenbloom to defend his title here against Knight, but relinquished the match when Madison Square Garden and Knight's manager raised the ante for the champion to $15,000 for the bout in which they boxed to a draw recently.

Virginia to Act On Coaching Situation

Athletic Council Believed Likely to Give Tebell Long-Term Pact.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—A special meeting of the athletic council of the University of Virginia has been called for tomorrow afternoon to consider the crisis that has arisen in the coaching situation.

William H. White, jr., of Washington, chairman of the council, has called for a full meeting of the three alumni, three students and three faculty members to be held at 5 o'clock at the Colonnade Club, after the first preliminary matches of the Southern Conference boxing tournament.

The contract of Gus Tebell, head coach of basket ball and baseball and assistant coach of football, is understood to be the chief matter to be considered.

Long-Term Contract.

From a telegram sent by Mr. White yesterday to Steele Hooper, of Selma, Ala., president of the student senate, it is believed that the athletic council may offer Coach Tebell a contract covering a term of several years.

The University of Richmond has been negotiating with Coach Tebell over a period of several weeks and yesterday he made a special trip to confer with officials of that institution. Meanwhile, undergraduates here were not idle in Coach Tebell's behalf. The student senate met and unanimously adopted a resolution asking that a three-year contract be tendered Coach Tebell.

Interest Runs High.

Not since the spring of 1929, when the resignation of Earle "Greasy" Neale as head coach of football was followed in a few weeks by that of D. Ellis Brown, graduate manager, has interest in the coaches and the athletic organization run so high. It now appears that the situation may come to a head within the next two or three days.

Members of the student senate, with representatives of the honor committee, today called on President John Lloyd Newcomb to present their request that a three-year contract be given Coach Tebell. President Newcomb declined to comment.

Eastern, Mounts Score in Tourney

Trim Washington-Lee and Bethesda Quintets.

In free-scoring battles at Tech High School's gym yesterday, Eastern and Mount Rainier eliminated the two other contenders for the Evening Star metropolitan scholastic basket ball championship. A throng of 2,000 fans saw the Washington public high school title holders storm over Washington-Lee's gallant little band, 75-33, and Mount Rainier turn back a dogged Bethesda-Chevy Chase quintet, 46-26.

Rube Benton Dropped By Minneapolis Club

Minneapolis, Feb. 22 (AP).—Unconditionally released today by the Minneapolis American Association Club, John C. ("Rube") Benton was without a job after 24 years of service in organized baseball. He is 44 years old.

Benton, one of the game's better southpaws for almost a quarter of a century, pitched 15 years in the big show, serving 9 years with the Cincinnati Reds and 6 years with the New York Giants.

Sarron, Hurt, Foregoes Battle at Portner's

Pete Sarron, scheduled to box Frankie Covelli at Portner's Tuesday, has been forced to withdraw because of a cut suffered in a recent bout against Bucky Burton in Miami.

Sarron's place on the card will be taken by either Benny Britt, of Philadelphia, or Charley Von Reedon, local featherweight.

3-Round K.O. Is Predicted By Primo

Champ, However, Fails to Impress Experts in Workouts.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—Ditching the problem of choosing a referee for a day, Primo Carnera and Tommy Loughran hammered into the final stages of training today for their 15-round heavyweight title match in Madison Square Garden's Stadium next Wednesday night.

The huge Italian, close to his fighting peak, but still displeasing to the eyes of the experts, galloped about under a broiling sun out on the end of an amusement pier with bronzed bathers and family groups, munching popcorn and ice cream cones, wondering what manner of man was this 260 odd pounds of human dreadnaught.

Loughran Declared Ready.

Carnera, already down to 263 pounds, boxed three rounds with Popper Stopper, a Negro Maxie Rosenbloom, and had a great deal of trouble landing punches, although the Negro slipped to the floor twice. Johnny Miler, of Detroit, another light-heayweight, escaped damage through three more rounds, and Lou Carpenter, a big fellow from Charlotte, N. C., sat down twice for no apparent reason in two rounds.

"I will knock Loughran out in three rounds," said Carnera, while the experts shook their heads. "If I do not win the first three, I win in the next three. Every round I fight like it was the fifteenth. I am very strong."

Carnera Unimpressive.

Just the same, Carnera seemed slow, careless, as though he were taking things too much for granted, a condition other great big fellows, such as Max Baer, Victorio Campolo and Jack Sharkey, could tell him is a dangerous state of mind indeed against a man with the skill and inteligence of the former light-heavyweight king. The story will not down, either, that there is a great deal of dissension in the champion's camp because of the failure of his manager in chief, Louis Soresi, to came down here from New York.

The odds, however, remain at 3 to 1 on Carnera as the fighters mapped out the final stages of training and the managers sought to decide upon a referee before meeting with the Miami Boxing Commission tomorrow afternoon. Only three are available and, unless the fighters agree on a choice tomorrow, Chairman Louis K. McReynolds will name the third man in there and there will be no appeal, Lee Shea, of Miami, is considered the outstanding choice.

To Drill in Stadium.

Loughran is coming down Sunday to stage his final stiff workout in the stadium ring where the match will take place, returning then to West Palm Beach to work lightly until time for the fight. Carnera will work out heavily over the week-end and finish up with two rounds of boxing Monday.

Ticket sales are improving slightly under the impetus of splendid weather and the promoters said today $30,000 worth of tickets had been sold. A gate of $100,000 is in prospect. There will be no broadcast.

Charlotte Hall Bows To Lee-Jackson High

The Lee-Jackson High School tossers won their second game in as many days yesterday, trouncing Charlotte Hall, 33-17, in a loosely played game. Wednesday the Generals defeated St. Mary's, 23-7.

Merrily On Wins Second Purse in Row in Feature on Holiday Card at Hialeah

Rousing Ride Benefit to Winner

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 22 (AP).—The George Washington Purse headed the holiday program offered a big crowd here today and, appropriately enough, the winning owner was George W. Ogle, whose consistent 5-year-old, Merrily On, won his second purse in a row to add further to the success of the stable at the Miami Jockey Club track.

Allen Tipton, who is scheduled to lose his apprentice allowance next week, gave the son of John P. Grier a rousing ride to get his mount home by a length. Mrs. S. H. Fairbanks' Gold Step, returning to better form, saved the place by a half length from J. E. Smallman's Feudal Lord.

Merrily On, returning $11.80, ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5.

Off to Good Start.

Merrily On was merrily on his way before the other five sprinters got fully into their strides. Tipton had the ultimate winner under restraint, saving plenty for the finish, and the chestnut flyer always held Gold Step, the favorite, at bay. Porter rode the latter hard and the veteran showed improvement under lighter weight than usual. Feudal Lord was rapidly wearing down Gold Step in the closing strides and was an easy third over Character.

Claremont went postward an odds-on choice in the curtain raiser and was good enough to win by a length, despite being hemmed in on the rail before turning into the stretch. Periodical, taking the overland route and finishing gamely under a hard whip lashing, headed the tiring Lynnewood for the place. The latter broke on top from outside the stalls and held the lead until the final drive when Claremont drew away to return $3.50.

Dasher Wins at $36.90.

Another Greentree Stable favorite was badly beaten when Basquine finished sixth in the juvenile event. In close quarters after the break, Jockey Robertson took back with the filly and the combination never was prominent. Dasher, with one educational effort under his belt, displayed big improvement to win by a half length, paying $36.90. The Epinard colt caught No Saint about 30 yards from the finish. Gay Music was a fast-closing third, three lengths away.

Energetic Boy, Happy Scot and Blackmock came down to the pay-off station heads apart as named in the third race. The winner, well ridden by J. Cassard, returned $9. Happy Scot ran Fair Joan into defeat and drew into a long lead turning for home, but he wilted just enough in the late stages to be beaten on the wire. Energetic Boy was admirably rated and ran over the leaders when let down. Blackmock made a game stretch bid.

Plight Upsets in Fourth.

Plight, a $1,500 plater which was a hot tip when he finished second in the mud a few days ago, turned in a surprisingly fine effort in the fourth event, the gelding running a mile in 1:36 3-5 to score by a half-dozen lengths. Davoc, the choice, was an easy second, chasing the winner all the way and beating Squeeze out by two lengths. Plight paid $10.10.

Eddie Litzenberger, the Calgary, Canada, kid, rounded out a double by virtue of Haggerson's nose victory over Waterway in the mile and a furlong sixth event. Sandwrack was third, five spans back. Haggerson set a terrific pace and was a tired animal at the end. Waterway, always closest in pursuit, closed in fast on the winner in the last furlong, failing by an inch to get up. Haggerson paid $4.40.

Prince Tokalon, $3.60 choice, won the finale by a nose from Fort Dearborn. Boy Crazy was headed for the place.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, the epic poem that was so bitterly criticized that it contributed to the author's insanity, was also the one that was so popular that for 200 years in Venice the gondoliers sang nothing else. The poem was Torquato Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered"—a story of the delivery of Jerusalem from the Saracens. The hero was Godfrey de Bouillon, first Christian King of the Holy City.

The author sent it to scholars for comment after he wrote it, and their criticism was so bitter that it was partly responsible for Tasso's insanity, a condition from which he subsequently recovered. Fame came too late for him, however, and the day he was to have appeared before the Pope in Rome to receive honors, he was buried.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 22.

We started off with a winner, finished up with a winner and between the two we had some thrills and headaches. For instances, No Saint was beaten a neck in the second, Dornoch finished last in the third; Davoc and Gold Step each ran second and Sandwrack appeared much the best in the sixth, but Porter didn't let him run until the last sixteenth of a mile. However, two a day keeps the boss away, even if they were red-hot favorites. For tomorrow we shall shoot for something of a more lucrative nature. Providing you acquire the wagering urge, you might do worse than try these.

BILL.

First race—Wedding Ring gets in here with a steadying 108 pounds and I have been informed that we can expect some fast hoof work. Singing Heart comes down a peg and may save the place from Ali Rowes. Zombro, of $500 mutuel fame, did a lot of early running the other day and is a possible upsetter in his field.

Second race—Your guess is as good as mine in this hop, skip and jump for juvenile maidens. I'm taking Earle Maxwell, Truebuck and Specs.

Third race—Lady Reigh turned in a neat mile workout the other morning and comes to me with Clocker Mike's backing. High Proof appears to be the one to cause the most trouble. Just Remember to take care of the others.

Fourth race — Cash Surrender should take this one or I surrender. Packs a lot of speed when the word is given. Herowin and Bartering Kate are both ready to step into the main part of the battle if the top one makes mistakes.

Fifth race—I'll take Don Manuel in this sprint. He has Happy Go, the probable favorite, to beat We have a sound sleeper in this group, however. None other than Jens Son.

Flash Roller Hockey Team Plays Holbrooks

Sunday night's roller skating hockey match at the Silver Spring Armory rink will bring together the Silver Flashes and Holbrook A. C., of Baltimore, and one of the warmest games of the season is expected. Holbrook has one of the best teams in the Tristate Hockey League. Play will start at 9 o'clock.

A pursuit skating race and a graceful-couple contest for women is listed at the rink tomorrow night. In the pursuit race, the contestants are started from different stations on the floor and each entrant is automatically eliminated when passed by another skater. The prize will go to the last remaining skater.

Tunney Refuses Fight Prediction

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22 (U.P.).—Gene Tunney, the only retired heavyweight champion, refused to predict the outcome of the coming Carnera-Loughran title fight today.

Stopping at Palm Beach, Tunney said he would be glad to give his opinions of both fighters after he sees them in workouts, but insisted that was as far as he would go.

"I am greatly interested in this fight," he said, "and plan on watching both fighters closely in practice. I'd be more than glad to tell you what I think of them individually after I see them work, but I'll make no predictions."

He said he intended to watch Tommy Loughran at his training camp here tomorrow and plans on visiting the Carnera camp at Miami Beach Saturday.

Virginia Frosh Score Over V. M. I. Cagemen

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 22 (Spl.). Virginia's freshman quintet in the final home game of the season, vanquished the first-year team from Virginia Military Institute here tonight, 59 to 35, to register its second victory of the season over the Cadets.

The Baby Cavaliers took the lead early in the opening half, and at half time enjoyed a 9-point lead. In the second, the entire team went on a scoring rampage, registering 40 points.

Detroit Told to Pay $4,839 To Galloway, Injured in '28

DETROIT, Feb. 22 (U.P.).—The Detroit Baseball Club was ordered today to pay Clarence E. (Chick) Galloway, a former infielder, $4,839 as compensation for injuries received when he was struck by a pitched ball while warming up for a game here July 26, 1928.

Galloway's deposition, forwarded from his home in Clinton, S. C., stated that the injury ended his baseball career. Dr. S. C. Hayes, Laurens, S. C., testifying at a hearing before the Michigan Department of Labor and Industry that Galloway has improved after an operation, but is not able to play ball.

The baseball club claimed that it had compensated Galloway by paying his hospital expenses and paying his salary during the last half of the 1928 season and first half of the 1929 season, although Galloway was not playing.

Galloway came to Detroit at a salary of $8,000 a year, after playing with the Philadelphia Athletics for nine seasons.

Rubio Triumphs At New Orleans

Open Hearth's Challenge Fails; Blue Day Third.

New Orleans, Feb. 22 (AP).—T. C. Worden's 6-year-old chestnut, Rubio, romped off with the Washington's Birthday Handicap, feature of the Fair Grounds program today.

After following the pace set by his stablemate, Trinchera, for 3 furlongs, Rubio, a son of Runnymede-Gwendola, ran to the front and won by a length from the fast-finishing Open Hearth, owned by H. G. Shoemaker. A. G. Tarn's Blue Day was third.

Rubio ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5 and paid $2.80 for $2 straight. Trinchera, after running either first or second to the stretch, faltered badly and wound up in fourth place.

Two Race Horses Die In Flames at Latonia

Latonia, Ky., Feb. 22 (AP).—Two horses, Agatha, a 4-year-old filly, and Zeus Prince, were burned to death today as fire destroyed barn No. 5 of the Latonia Jockey Club, one of the leading race-tracks of the Middle West. Twenty-four other race horses were led to safety.

Agatha was owned by Frank Gering, of Covington, and valued, officials said, at approximately $2,000. Zeus Prince, owned by Jim Lally, also of Covington, was worth, it was said, about $1,000.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLAREMONT, $3.50, $2.80, $2.30; PERIODICAL, $5.20, $3.10; LYNNEWOOD, $2.80.

CLAREMONT was slow to get into his stride, attempted to move up on inside, but was blocked, finally got through and won going away. PERIODICAL, on the outside all the way, finished very fast. LYNNEWOOD broke from outside the stalls, showed good speed and held on well. CHAIN was knocked about considerably during the running. BRAMBLE BROOM was pinched out of it middle of the turn.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway), nursery course. Purse, $700. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:58. Winner, Wheatley Stable's ch. c. (2), by Epinard—Rothermel. Trained by George Tappen. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DASHER, $36.90, $15.40, $8.60; NO SAINT, $4.00, $3.40; GAY MUSIC, $15.30.

DASHER got away flying and, showing excellent speed, won going away. NO SAINT, very mean at the gate, finally away fast, showed good speed and held on well. GAY MUSIC closed with a rush on the inside and is sure to improve. RED SUNSET was placed outside of the stalls at the start and broke good and ran a fair race. ALANOVA ran an improved race. BASQUINE timidly ridden. She broke well, but was crowded some and boy took her back. The filly never made up any ground after the interference. She ran a very poor race.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:25½. Off at 3:27½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENERGETIC BOY, $9.00, $4.70, $3.20; HAPPY SCOT, $8.00, $4.50; BLACKMOCK, $3.20.

ENERGETIC BOY broke fast, was eased off the fast early pace, came around field entering stretch, closed gamely, and just got up to win. HAPPY SCOT ran into a long lead around turn, but weakened fast in stretch and was lucky to be second. BLACKMOCK was sent up on inside, saved ground all the way, and stood long drive gamely. ALLIE'S ORPHAN went well up from the start. FAIR JOAN had speed for three furlongs, then quit.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start fair. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:54. Off at 3:59. Winner, F. Ratti's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERRILY ON, $11.80, $5.40, $2.80; GOLD STEP, $4.30, $2.50; FEUDAL LORD, $2.40.

MERRILY ON broke well in his stride, was sent to the front with a rush, and rated along easily held race safe. GOLD STEP moved up gamely and made a bold bid in stretch. FEUDAL LORD broke well, but was pinched back in first quarter mile and finished fast. CHARACTER had speed for five furlongs. ISLAM was pulled up in final eighth of mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $2,500 to $2,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:59½. Off at 5:00

Gold Stocks' Lure Fades as Dollar Steadies

Speculation Is Removed by Fixing Value; Metal Output Rises.

By Claude A. Jagger.

Gold mining issues, with brewery and distillery stocks, shared some of the most feverish speculation of 1933. Since the gold value of the dollar was fixed three weeks ago, however, trading in gold stocks has subsided.

While industry generally was timid about arranging financing under the new Federal securities act in 1933, promoters of gold mining ventures along with backers of "repeal" enterprises were not bashful about new stock flotations. Issues priced around a couple of dollars a share, to appeal to the man of small means, were numerous.

No Rise Limit.

When the dollar was off the gold standard there seened little limit to how high the value of gold might go, and speculation in mining issues was whipped up to gold rush fever.

But now the price of gold has been fixed at $35 an ounce. Security analysts point out that the gold reserve act authorizes the President to devaluc the dollar to an extent lifting the gold price to a maximum of $41.34 per ounce.

But if business recovery proceeds satisfactorily, it is regarded as likely that the present gold price may be retained for a long time. No change is anticipated, in any case, until the present level of the dollar has been given a thorough trial.

Production Expanded.

So far as the leading gold producing companies in the United States and Canada are concerned, productive capacity is understood, in general, to have been expanded about as much as possible. Further increases in earning power, security analysts explain, seem to be largely dependent upon better prices.

Annual earnings of North American producers may in the aggregate reach a peak in 1934, with the top gold price of $35 established in the United States only three weeks ago, but with general price level of goods and services in terms of gold continuing to rise, mines may soon begin to experience substantially higher production costs.

The 1926 commodity price level is still regarded as Washington's objective, and the Bureau of Labor index is currently only about 73 per cent of that.

Belgium, Argentina Sign Trade Treaty

A commercial agreement involving "most-favored-nation" treatment has just been signed between Belgium and Argentina, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Commercial Attache Alexander V. Dye, Buenos Aires.

The agreement, it is pointed out, stipulates the amount of exchange necessary for Belgium and Luxembourg investments in Argentina. It also provides that the amount of exchange derived from Argentine exports to Belgium and Luxembourg will be given to those countries, with the exception of a certain amount to be retained by Argentina for the service on the foreign debt.

According to the agreement the sum of 4,000,000 pesos is placed at the disposal of the Government of Belgium and Luxembourg at the rate of exchange in force on May 1, 1933, to be applied to the liquidation of commercial credits which are still awaiting exchange.

The agreement is to become effective 20 days after the date of exchange of ratification and is for the period of ten months, subject to extension by tacit agreement until one of the contracting parties indicates its desire to terminate it.

Production of Soft Coal Rises to 8,100,000 Tons

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended February 17 as approximately 8,100,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1933, 7,520,000 tons; 1932, 6,718,000 tons.

The report of the Bureau of Mines shows production of 7,495,000 tons for the week ended February 3, and 7,720,000 for the week ended February 10, 1934.

Production, calendar year to February 17: 1934, 52,080,000 tons; 1933, 48,091,000 tons.

Chicago Cuts Costs Within Its Income

Chicago, Feb. 22 (AP).—Chicago lived within its income last year and reduced major debts by $39,338,882, a survey showed tonight. Civic leaders hailed the news as the turning point toward economic stability and added that it was the first time in several years that Chicago and its various subdivisions had all made both ends meet.

John O. Rees, director of the committee on public expenditures, the Civic Federation and the Bureau of Public Efficiency, announced research showed that on January 1, 1933, total liabilities of all Chicago governments, less cash balances, were $792,459,494. On last January 1, they were $753,069,612.

"This is the first time in generations," Rees said, "that the local government officials have wound up a year owing less than when they started. The gain was only accomplished by holding down expenditures in relation to revenue. Most of this will revive our crippled credit."

Sharp Curtailment of Expenditures This Month by Government Raises Question of Whether Its Idea on Spending Has Been Modified.

By Ralph West Robey.

Of major significance in attempting to appraise the trend of the immediate future is the sharply curtailed expenditures of the Federal Government this month. It is comparatively easy to pick out the items in which the reduction has taken place, but this is quite different from offering an explanation for the decrease. Rather, all that it does is to raise the question of whether there has been a change of opinion on the part of the Administration as to whether it is wise or possible to continue to spend money at the rate which was forecast in the President's annual budget message of six weeks ago.

In order to make clear exactly what has been taking place this month it is desirable once again to recall the record of the first seven months of this fiscal year—July to January, inclusive. Perhaps the simplest way to do this for the present purpose is to give our expenditures month by month on an average daily basis. This gives no indication of the particular use to which the funds were being put but it throws in bold relief the rapidity with which total expenditures were being increased.

Rapid Increase Started In October Last Year.

In July, the average daily expenditures of the Federal Government were $9,000,000. In August, they increased to $10,000,000 and in September to $11,000,000. In October, there was a large quarterly interest payment on Government obligations, with the result that the average daily expenditures increased sharply to $16,000,000. In November, through increased outlays by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the daily average was $18,000,000. In December, the Civil Works Administration got well started and the figure rose to $24,000,000. In January, the RFC speeded up its activities to a higher degree and the daily average was $32,000,000. To summarize then, during the first seven months the average daily expenditure in millions ran 9-10-11-16-18-24-32.

During the first 16 days of this month the total expenditures were only $394,000,000. This is an average of a little under $25,000,000 a day—a drop of approximately 25 per cent from the daily average of last month.

Among ordinary expenditures the decline has been relatively insignificant, falling from $137,000,000 during the first 16 days of January to $128,000,000 this month. In emergency expenditures the drop has been from $466,000,000 to $266,000,000. It is almost entirely in the emergency expenditures, accordingly, that one finds the marked curtailment.

CWA and RFC Provide Total Reduction to Date.

Examining the figures in more detail one finds that this month we spent during the first 16 days only $79,000,000 for the CWA against $121,000,000 in the same period last month. Even more drastic has been the reduction in advances by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. During the first 16 days of January this organization had a net outlay of $268,000,000. In the same period this month is has been only $95,000,000. On these two item alone, accordingly, the reduction has been $215,000,000 in the first half of the month, or a little larger than the total reduction in the whole budget.

To some extent this apparent curtailment is the result of the RFC having had some unusually large repayments. This, however, by no means accounts for the total reduction. There still remains the question, therefore, of whether the Administration has modified its ideas on the desirability of trying to spend our way out of the depression.

Commodities 58.8 Per Cent Above 1933

New York, Feb. 22.—The steady upward trend in wholesale commodity prices, since the beginning of this year, is reflected in the Daily Weighted Price Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., which again rose to a new high for the recovery movement. On February 15, the index stood at 109, an increase of almost a full point over the same day of the previous week and only 4.50 points below the 1933 high point of July 18, last. The latest index compares with 68.65 on the corresponding day of 1933, a gain of 58.8 per cent.

The more important commodities showing advances during the past week included corn, rye, coffee, sugar, lambs, silk, rubber, tin, silver, yellow pine, Douglas fir and gasoline. Among the declining commodities were listed wheat, oats, lard, hogs and hides.

The following table presents the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Weighted Price Index of 30 basic commodities, compiled from quotations furnished by the United States, since January 1, 1934, and the corresponding periods of the preceding year. (1930-1932 equal to 100):

London—In an active session on the stock exchange today, Kaffirs weakened on lack of support and the lower price of bar gold. Rubber shares also declined following unfavorable restriction reports, while gilt-edged securities and home industrials were firm. Transatlantic issues held steady, but German bonds declined. The market closed steady.

Berlin—Trading on the boerse was quiet and inactive. The market closed with few price changes.

Paris—Closed (King Albert's funeral).

Republic Steel Plan On Capital Denied

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 22 (AP).—A report that rearrangement of Republic Steel Corporation's capital structure is in preparation was met today by a flat denial from Myron C. Wick, of Cleveland, director of the company.

"There is no truth in it," said Mr. Wick, regarding a report that back dividends on preferred stock might be paid in new common stock.

The report was started after recent increases in the market prices of Republic stocks. The preferred, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends approaching $21 a share, rose three points yesterday.

Raw Iron Exports Rise In Germany

German export trade in raw iron registered marked improvement in 1933 compared with the preceding year, according to a report from the American consulate general, Berlin, made public by the Commerce Department.

During the ten months ended October 30, 1933, total shipments abroad amounted to 89,180 metric tons, valued at 4,000,000 reichsmarks, a volume increase of 60 per cent and a value increase of 43 per cent over the 1932 figures.

The principal export markets for German iron during the last two years were Belgium, Sweden, Saar Valley and Switzerland, all of which increased their purchases during 1933.

German imports of raw iron also showed an increase in 1933, the report points out. Imports during the January-October period amounted to 5,949 tons valued at 2,950,000 reichsmarks against 4,810 tons valued at 2,730,000 reichsmarks in the corresponding period of 1932.

Chemicals—Platers are taking fair quantities of chromic acid and nickel salts, with reports indicating heaviest output for February since 1931. Shipments of soda ash continue in good volume.

Cotton goods—Reports from mill centers say that carded yarns are advancing faster than coarser members, with combed and mercerized qualities holding about unchanged in the face of a higher raw-material market.

Fine textiles—It is reported that leading broadcloth and fine cotton goods mills are experimenting with novelty yarns for fall fabrics. The double cover millinery yarns, which have been used on a limited scale for dress goods for the current season, are expected to play a more important part in offerings for the fall.

Rising Demand In Autos Called Recovery Sign

(Associated Press.)

A marked increase in the demand for trucks as well as passenger cars is viewed by automobile manufacturers as a definite indication of general business improvement.

One reports that the sale of trucks at retail during the last month set a new high mark in the history of the country. The big midwinter sales of commercial cars are regarded as particularly significant in supplying an index of the business trend.

Better economic conditions abroad also are indicated by the strengthened demand for trucks in the automotive export trade during the last year.

Exports of Trucks.

Exports of American trucks in 1933 amounted to 43,277 units, valued at $20,000,000, as compared with 24,835 units, valued at $11,640,000, in 1932, representing gains of 74 per cent in number and 71 per cent in value.

Shipments of all automotive products from the United States during 1933 registered an increase in value of 14 per cent over 1932. Passenger car exports totaled 63,754 in number and $31,805,000 in value, as compared with 40,657 units, worth $23,304,000 during the preceding 12 months, an increase of 56 per cent in number and 36 per cent in value.

The Union of South Africa, Belgium, Argentina, Japan and the Netherlands were the leading markets for American passenger cars while Spain, Japan, British India and Belgium were the chief purchasers of American trucks.

Foreign Auto Demands.

Foreign demand for American automotive products during the first half of 1933 was rather discouraging, the marked improvement for the full year resulting from the steady pick-up which occurred during the last six months. It was the first time since 1928 that such a development has been recorded.

Automobile sales in Mexico during 1933 approximately double those for the preceding year, dealers reporting very little or no stocks on hand at the beginning of 1934. The impromevent is said to be the result of the general economic advance in that country.

The Mexican market is described as practically 100 per cent American in both passenger cars and trucks. Not a single European manufacturer entered the market during 1933. The only non-American company represented in Mexico City closed out its agency early in that year.

John Legg Joins Capital Exchange

Mr. Legg was born in Baltimore, of Virginia parents, and received his education in that city. He entered the banking business with the firm of Mackubin, Goodrich & Co. in 1900 and became a partner in 1905. The firm made continued progress and in 1916 became members of the New York Stock Exchange, with Mr. Legg holding the membership.

Mr. Legg is one of the best known and most popular men in the financial district and widely known over the country among bankers for his ability and keen judgment.

He is a director in many companies, including First National Bank, Baltimore; Terminal Warehouse Co., Baltimore; Industrial Corporation; Baltimore Association of Commerce, and the Vulcanite Portland Cement Co., Philadelphia. He is also a governor of the Investment Bankers Association of America and the Baltimore Stock Exchange.

United States Markets Honor National Holiday

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—All leading security and commodity markets in the United States, with the exception of the various cattle reports, were closed today in observance of Washington's Birthday.

Foreign markets, including the Liverpool corn, produce and cotton exchanges, the London, Berlin, Toronto and Montreal stock exchanges, and the Winnipeg Grain Exchange were open as usual. The Paris Bourse suspended operations on account of King Albert's funeral.

Britain Turns To Empire for Fruit Supply

British imports of fresh fruit from Canada, Australia, South Africa and other parts of the empire reached a new high record in 1933, according to Trade Commissioner James Somerville, jr., London, in a report to the Commerce Department.

The total receipts of 12,123,000 hundredweights exceeded the record figure of the preceding year by nearly 15 per cent, and included record totals for no less than ten separate kinds of fruit.

The outstanding increase in point of volume, the report shows, was in the case of apples, 78 per cent of total British supplies being of empire output, compared with 48 per cent in 1932 and the previous record of 62 per cent in 1930.

Equally striking advances, relatively, were recorded in the case of grapefruit, of which 42.6 per cent were of empire origin; and pears, of which 43.6 per cent were from empire countries. On the other hand, there was a sharp set-back in the case of bananas, only 42 per cent being of empire origin, as against 62 per cent in 1932.

British imports of empire fruits, other than those above mentioned in 1933 exceeded those for the preceding year by 2,700,000 hundredweights, or approximatly 36 per cent.

Farm Credit Head Charters 40 New Groups

Forty production credit associations were chartered by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, William I. Myers, last week, bringing the total throughout the United States to 606, these associations having an authorized capital of $63,649,285. About four-fifths of the initial capital is supplied by the 12 production credit corporations, one of which is located at the headquarters of each regional organization of the Farm Credit Administration.

The production credit associations are given a specific area in which to make loans and those chartered now cover three-fourths of the United States, being organized in the 48 States and covering 34 States completely. The remaining areas are being organized rapidly. Loans are made by these associations for general agricultural purposes, such as producing and harvesting of crops, breeding, raising and fattening of live stock and the production of poultry and live-stock products.

The Farm Credit Administration plans to have associates available throughout the entire United States by the time production credit needs are developed this spring.

Polish Textile Industry Sees Better Outlook

Optimism prevails in the Polish textile industry, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Acting Commercial Attache Basil D. Dahl, Warsaw, made public by the Commerce Department. It is believed in local textile circles, Dahl states, that the low point of the depression in that branch has been definitely passed.

Although the manufacture of cotton products has increased only slightly since the beginning of the current year, it is expected locally that sales on the domestic market will be greater than during 1933. Stocks have declined and the demand has become more active. Expectations for increased sales are also attributed to the fact that a certain consolidation has taken place in both the textile industry and the trade due to the failure of weaker and less reliable firms which have fallen victims of the depression.

Still greater hopes are being placed on exports during 1934, the report points out. Great Britain is the best foreign market for the products of the Polish Syndicate for the Export of Clothing, but progress also has been made in the Balkans, Africa and South America. The Union of Polish Cotton Goods Producers made efforts to secure outlets in foreign countries in 1933, and it is anticipated that their efforts will bear fruit during the current year.

Prospects for business in textile items with Soviet Russia, according to the report, are not encouraging, as the better quality Polish products can not compete in price with Soviet textile products.

Persia Opens First Plant to Make Cement

The industrial program of Persia has advanced a step with the recent opening of the first cement factory in that country, according to a report from Consul Robert B. Streeper, Teheran, made public by the Commerce Department. The plant, which is located about five miles from Teheran, cost approximately $900,000.

The new plant was built by a Danish construction company and took 18 months to complete. After being operated for ten days at 80 per cent capacity it was turned over to the Persian government.

Raw materials for the operation of the plant, the report points out, are obtained from the immediate vicinity. It is estimated that the factory will be able to obtain required limestone and clay within a distance of one mile. The total capacity of the plant is 100 metric tons of cement per day.

The cement produced by the new factory is said to answer the specifications of a medium quality Portland cement. It is understood that the proper part of the output will be used in railway construction work, and should there be a surplus the government plans to utilize it for paving the streets of Teheran and other large cities throughout the country.

C., B. & Q. Road Elects F. B. Kellogg to Board

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Frank B. Kellogg, of St. Paul, former Secretary of State, and R. Douglas Stuart, vice president of Quaker Oats Co., have been elected directors of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Co.

They replace the late Walker D. Hines, former Director General of Railroads, and the late Alexander Legge, once head of International Harvester Co.

Raw Cotton Is Largest of U.S. Exports

Unmanufactured cotton made the largest individual contribution to the $1,675,020,000 export trade of the United States for the calendar year 1933, totaling $398,212,263, against $345,164,559 for the preceding year, according to preliminary statistics compiled by the Statistics Division, Department of Commerce.

Gasoline, naphtha and other finished light petroleum products shipped to foreign markets during the 12 months of 1933 had a value of $57,519,861, compared with $79,080,782 for the corresponding period of the preceding year,

Shipments of crude petroleum from the United States during the year recorded an increase in value and totaled $31,978,650, against $27,106,301 for 1932, according to the statistics.

American passenger cars and chassis were in greater demand in foreign countries in the year just ended than in the preceding year, exports being valued at $32,100,012 and $23,591,108, respectively, while motor trucks, buses and trucks were valued at $20,112,818 and $11,712,533 for the two periods.

Other individual items contributing large amounts to the year's value of export trade included kerosene valued at $19,209,328, compared with $23,731,541 for the preceding year; refined copper in ingots, bars and other forms, $16,934,062, against $13,537,632; wheat, $4,768,824, against $32,684,313.

Crude sulphur, $9,877,879, against $7,178,566; prunes, $9,352,494, against $7,782,965; radio receiving sets, $9,323,535, against $7,321,849; hams and shoulders, $8,662,586, against $6,737,085; apples, in boxes, $8,319,602, against $13,101,894; rough Southern pine, $6,804,678, against $5,985,207, and oak, $6,562,672, against $5,009,447.

Canada Wheat Closes Higher; Liverpool Up

Winnipeg, Feb. 22 (AP).—Strength at Liverpool combined with lack of selling pressure turned wheat prices upward today. Final figures showed futures quotations at levels ¾@½ cent over the previous close.

Trading was quiet and the usual closing flurry did not materialize. May wheat finished at 67⅝ with July 68½ cents.

Values held close to the high points with only a minimum of interest displayed. Offerings were extremely light, and occasional buying orders were sufficient to hold the market firm.

With the Chicago market on holiday, outside news was very restricted. Liverpool wheat was strong and closed ⅝@¾d higher.

Tobacco Monopoly Studied by Greece

The establishment of a tobacco monopoly in Greece, under discussion for many years, may soon be effected, according to Commercial Attache K. L. Rankin, Athens, in a report to the Commerce Department.

The increasingly important part played by the Government in adjusting tobacco taxes and promoting tobacco exports through barter agreements, appears now to have made both manufacturers and producers less hostile to such a monopoly, the report states.

The present Government, it is pointed out, has made considerable effort to eliminate the divergence between its fiscal interests and those of the tobacco trade. The monopoly, if established, would extend to all tobacco consumed in Greece and would be controlled jointly by the State and existing tobacco industries. Its purposes would be to improve tobacco manufacturing methods, to increase local consumption by bettering the quality of cigarettes and by reducing manufacturing costs.

An increase in Government revenues from tobacco would make possible further support for the producers, while larger exports to foreign markets might be secured with Government aid, the report states. No plans have been announced, however, for extending the monopoly to the actual handling of exports.

N. Y. C. Ry. Votes $59,911,000 Bonds

Issue Will Be Convertible Into Common Stock at $40.

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Directors of the New York Central Railroad today authorized the issuance of $59,911,000 ten-year 6 per cent collateral bonds convertible into common stock at $40 a share for three years and at $50 a share thereafter.

New York Central stock has been selling recently at a little above $40 a share. The stock sagged about $1 to just under $41, after announcement of the terms of the new financing. The new bonds will be issued as of May 10. They will be offered to stockholders of record May 5, who are premitted to subscribe to $1,200 principal amount of bonds, at par, for every 100 shares of stock held.

The bonds are callable in whole or in part at 105 during the first three years, 102 during the next three, 101 during the third 3-year period, and at par during the final year before maturity.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Watching — By Harry J. Tuthill

MY WORD, I'M TIRED! TALKING ABOUT THAT MYSTERY SKETCH NEXTDOOR PRACTICALLY ALL NIGHT KEPT ME FLATTENED OUT ALL DAY.
I'VE BEEN ALL ON EDGE TOO, AND GOT VERY LITTLE PACKING DONE.
I TRIED TO KEEP BOTH EYES OPEN COMING IN NOW, THINKING I MIGHT SEE ANOTHER TOUGH BABY PARKED ON THOSE DARK STAIRS.
SUCH PEOPLE! A WOMAN I HAVEN'T EVEN SEEN BUT WHO I KNOW WATCHES ME LIKE A HAWK.
WELL IT'S EASY ENOUGH TO WATCH THEM RIGHT BACK AGAIN. WE'VE COMPETED WITH OTHER NEIGHBORS, LOTS OF THEM, ON THAT STUFF.
GEORGE, PLEASE DON'T STAND RIGHT IN FRONT OF THAT WINDOW. IMAGINE LIVING NEXTDOOR TO A MAN WHO MIGHT DO ANYTHING.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 2-23
THERE GOES A SHADOW PAST THE WINDOW. BIG AND ROUND.
THAT'S HIM! UGH, HE'S SO UGLY-LOOKING. JUST THE SORT WHO YOU KNOW IS HANDY WITH ONE OF THOSE WIGGLY DAGGERS. OH! I'M SO GLAD WE'LL BE OUT OF HERE NEXT WEEK.
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N.Y.

JOE JINKS, Featuring Dynamite Dunn — That's Tellin' 'Em! — By Llanuza

WHEN JOE TOLD THE SPORTS WRITERS ABOUT HIS MAN-A-MINUTE FIGHT, HE EXPECTED CHEERS FROM THEM .... BUT INSTEAD THEY GAVE HIM THE BIRD.....
IT SOUNDS GREAT, JOE... BUT IT DON'T MEAN A THING!... ALL YOU GOTTA DO IS FIND FIVE PUSHOVERS, AN'..
SO THAT'S IT!... YOU THINK I'M FIGURIN' TO PUT DYNAMITE UP AGAINST A FLOCK O' HAND-PICKED SET-UPS!
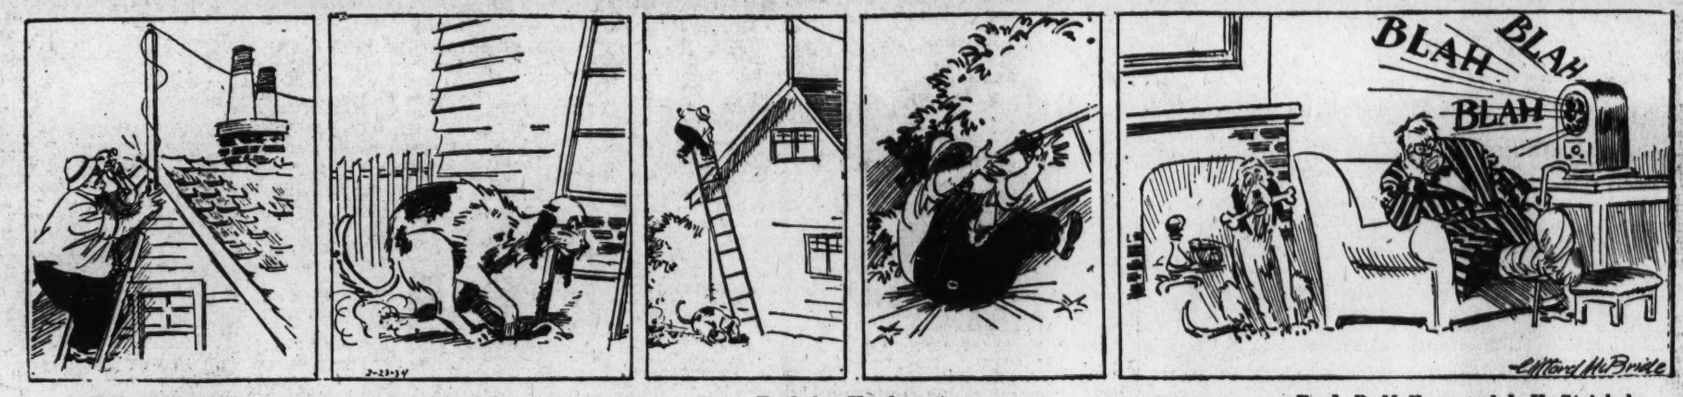
ALL RIGHT... IF THAT'S WHAT YOU THINK... I GOT SOME-THIN' ELSE TO TELL YOU..
AW, COME ON, BOYS... LET'S GO... I AIN'T GOT TIME TO LISTEN TO ANY MORE O' JOE'S GAGS NOW...
GAG! 'EM?.... WELL ... IF YOU GUYS THINK WHAT I'M GONNA TELL YOU NOW IS JUST A GAG...
...THEN SO WAS THE WORLD WAR!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride



DIXIE DUGAN — Bachelor Headquarters — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

WHILE DIXIE HAS BEEN WONDERING WHY SHE HADN'T HEARD FROM EDGERTON JEPPWORTH LET'S SEE IF WE CAN FIND OUT BY TAKING A PEEK INTO HIS BACHELOR QUARTERS
'—BEAUTIFUL WITH ALL THE EXOTIC MYSTERY OF A BLACK ORCHID — LITHE AS A BLACK PANTHER — HER EYES GLEAMING LIKE BLACK DIAMONDS IN THE MOONLIGHT — SEÑORITA JUANITA CROUCHED THERE WITH THE DAGGER IN HER HAND — WHEN — SUDDENLY — THE DOOR OPENED ——'
BEGGIN' YOUR PARDON, SIR—BUT WOULDN'T YOU LIKE A BIT O' DINNER?
WHAT'S THAT?—UH—WHY, WILKINS!—I'VE BEEN SO ABSORBED IN THIS NOVEL I'M WRITING I'D FORGOT ALL ABOUT EATING—
YES, SIR—AN' IF I MAY BE SO BOLD, SIR— YOU'VE BEEN WORKIN' TOO 'ARD, SIR — YOU 'AVEN'T STIRRED OUT FOR DAYS, NOR EVEN H'ANSWERED THE TELEPHONE
—AN' YOU 'AVEN'T EVEN MADE ANY TELEPHONE CALLS TO ANY YOUNG LADIES — T'AIN'T A BIT LIKE YOU—SIR—
SO HE'S BEEN WORKING— THAT'S ALL! AH—T'WAS EVER THUS— MEN MUST WORK WHILE WOMEN MUST WEEP —— AND IF MEN DIDN'T THINK OF THEIR WORK SO MUCH— WOMEN MIGHT WEEP LESS—

THE GUMPS — The Peacemaker

THE BILLS ARE STILL POURING IN— MAMA IS GOING TO SWALLOW HER PRIDE AT LAST AND CALL BIM GUMP—
OH, MR GUMP— I HOPE YOU'RE FEELING YOURSELF AGAIN— AFTER THE DREADFUL ORDEAL WE'VE ALL BEEN THROUGH—
MILLIE HAS BEEN SO UPSET SHE HASN'T BEEN ABLE TO LEAVE HER BED— THE SHOCK HAS SIMPLY MADE THE POOR CHILD A NERVOUS WRECK— ALL SHE DOES IS STARE AT YOUR PICTURE AND SOB— AND I KNOW YOU MUST HAVE BEEN JUST AS UN-NERVED BY THE DREADFUL SCENE THAT TERRIBLE MAN MADE, WITH HIS LIES AND FORGERIES— NONE OF US KNEW WHAT WE WERE DOING AT THE TIME, BUT NOW THAT YOU KNOW IT WAS ALL A MISTAKE— YOU AND MILLIE MUST GET TOGETHER AND MAKE NEW PLANS FOR THE WEDDING—
MAYBE THIS AFFAIR CAN BE PATCHED UP YET— THINKS MAMA—OH YEAH!

Walt Mason, Himself

The Blemish.

A statesman, known throughout the globe, a man of great forensic skill, once bought a dressing gown, or robe, and then refused to pay the bill. He is admired, he is revered, wherever people congregate; the picture of his noble beard is known to every living skate. In schoolbooks you may see his name, to youth a beacon and a guide; he's anchored in the Hall of Fame, his greatness can not be denied. But if you seek his native town, where long he lived and played his game, men say, admitting his renown, "He was a deadbeat just the same." One time he dodged an honest bill, for no good reason we can find, and passing years can never kill the memory he left behind. A British painter was so great his fame throughout the world still rings, and he was honored by the state, and decorated by two kings. A girl went weeping from his door, denied the pay she well had earned; his model, for three weeks or four, and her appeal for pay was spurned. His name is honored here and there, his fame has traveled far abroad, but in his home town people swear he was a deadbeat and a fraud. A man may be a public pet, and earn the wreath and accolade, but people never will forget the little tawdry tricks he's played. While he pursues the victor's way, applauded by the poet's pens, some fellow will uprise and say, "He swiped a widow's Leghorn hens."

Dime-a-Person Pension "Club" Called Racket

Charges the "dime-per-member" National Old Age Pension Association, organized by J. E. Pope, is a "racket," were made before a House Labor sub-committee yesterday by Representative Reuben T. Wood (Democrat), Missouri, a member of the committee.

The assertion brought a denial from Pope, sole officer of the association, who appeared before the commitee. Pope submitted financial statements showing his group had received $62,528 from individuals who contributed 10 cents each up to February 15. Dues, he added, have been coming in at the rate of $500 a day since that date.

Wood declared that Representative McKeown (Democrat), Oklahoma, one of several Congressmen who made radio speeches for the group, felt he had been "inveigled into it." Previously, Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, had charged in the House that Pope had been five times indicted and twice convicted of using the mails to defraud.

Pope said he organized the association in Tulsa, Okla., for the purpose of "stimulating public interest in old age pension laws." The offices were moved here and Pope said the bulk of his expenditures had been for advertising, and that he had received no other compensation than rent for an apartment. All but $1,933 of the $62,528 received had been spent, Pope told the committee.

"Jewish King Lear" To Be Given Sunday

The Jewish "King Lear" will be presented by the Jewish Dramatic Society for the benefit of the Georgetown Hebrew School, in the Masonic Temple, Thirteenth street and New York avenue northwest, Sunday.

In the title role will be Dr. Charles Gordon. Others in the cast will include Mrs. Freda Barsky, Luba Dubrow, Helen Gardenhouse, Mrs. Ida Brownstein, Julius Gillman, Max L. Shulman, Solomon Goldenburg and Ben Manchester. The production is directed by Morris Segal.

Elmer Rice to Speak On Theater at Forum

Elmer Rice, playwright and author, will be the speaker in the National Jewish Forum at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, next Wednesday at 8:15 p. m., officials announced yesterday.

Author of "Street Scene," Pulitzer prize drama in 1929, Mr. Rice is touring the United States, lecturing on "The Future of the Theater." The forum will be presided over by Mrs. Adolph Kahn, co-chairman of the center.

"Alphabet Soup" Wins Freedom From Jail

"Where do you work?" asked Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court yesterday when George Haskin, colored, was arraigned on intoxication charges. "I work for the WCA—or whatever it is," the defendand replied.

"You're sure it's not the ABC or PDQ?" asked his honor. "Well-er-er——"stammered the defendant. The judge grinned. "I'll suspend sentence," he said. "Now try and find out where you work and go back to the job."

Dr. Wynekoop 'Weary,' Spends Day Resting

Chicago, Feb. 22 (AP).—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, who said the first three days of her second trial for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, had made her "terribly weary," observed Washington's Birthday today regaining her strength in the infirmary of the county jail.

In the jurors' room of the same building the 12 men chosen to sit in judgment upon the 63-year-old physician whiled away the day with cards and books.

Senator Dickinson To Address Iowans

Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, will be the principal speaker at the Washington, State University of Iowa Club banquet March 7.

The affair will be held at the Dodge Hotel to commemorate the anniversary of the university's founding. Among prominent alumni expected to attend is Dr. George E. MacLean, former president of the university.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WE were hanging our hat and coat in the hall when, like a bolt from the blue, there came the sound of a policeman broadcasting. We knew it was a policeman broadcasting from long and compulsory association with Aunt Sadie's short-wave radio. Startled, we tiptoed to the entrance of the living room.

Sure enough, there sat Aunt Sadie, bucking herself up with the Toledo Police Department. Occasionally a sob convulsively jerked her youngish frame. In the center of the room stood Cousin Archibald, staring, one hand clutching a cookie poised en route to his half-open mouth.

Mother gave us the story. Uncle Lemuel had discovered them—Aunt Sadie and the butcher, Mr. Herringhoffer—trying to sneak out the side door just as he was coming down the back stairs on his way to the ice box. Mr. Herringhoffer ran. Aunt Sadie couldn't. Her arms were too full of short-wave radio.

Ackerman, dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism, 4 p. m.; Jessica Dragonette singing "The Land of My Own Romance," "One Fine Day" and "By the Waters of Minnetonka," 8 p. m.

WMAL—Peasants of the village of Petrovina, Yugoslavia, broadcasting folk songs, 2:30 p. m.; former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, broadcasting on the National Committee for the Protection of the Child program, 7:45 p. m.; Cellist Felix Salmond presenting a Rachmaninoff and Beethoven program.

WJSV—King Albert's death, coronation of Leopold, March of Time, 8:30 p. m.; "All Alone Monday," "Till Then," "I Raised My Hat," Jack Whiting, 9:30 p. m.; Mary Eastman and Howard Barlow, "Rose in the Bud," "Comin' Through the Rye," "Qui la voce," "Song of the Open," 10:45 p. m.

* * * *

THERE'S a piece in the March Mercury written by one Mitchell Dawson, a gentleman we have not had the pleasure of knowing, that probably will make some ears around the Federal Radio Commission pretty red. For instance, paragraphs like this:

"The fruits of the FRC are gnarled and fantastic. Its record has been consistently arbitrary and illogical. The commissioners' conception of 'the public interest, convenience and necessity' derives principally from a narrow expediency, which has betrayed them into extraordinary contradictions. While ruling Henderson, Duncan and Shuler off the air for personal attacks and controversy, they permit Father Coughlin, who invites as much controversy per sentence as the most bumptious lawyer.

"While banning Brinkley and Baker for quackery, they continually permit products to be advertised for medicinal use that are positively harmful and poisonous (see the reports of Consumers Research). While outlawing fortune-tellers and ostrologers, they permitted that arch-fortune-teller of Halsey-Stuart—the Old Counselor—to advise people to invest in Insull stocks, with more disastrous consequences than ever followed the suggestions of any star-gazer.

"* * * Government operation leads to greater political censorship by the party in power. In England David Lloyd George, Sir Austen Chamberlain and Winston Churchill have all been barred from the air.

"We had a hint of the same sort of thing in this country last August when one of the commissioners stubbed his toe trying to do his bit for the New Deal by sending out a letter to all stations, urging them 'as their patriotic, if not bounden and legal duty' to refuse their facilities to advertisers who are 'disposed to defy, ignore or modify the codes established by the NRA.' Reminding them that their continued existence depended upon the good will of the FRC, the encyclical said:

"'It is to be hoped that radio stations, using valuable facilities loaned to them temporarily by the Government, will not unwittingly be placed in an embarrassing position because of the greed or lack of patriotism on the part of a few unscrupulous advertisers.'"

Weekly this department gratuitously received from Gus and Hercules, WOL comedy team, a bon mot which they consider quite choice and which they practically dare us to print. This being another holiday on which we are made to work, we don't care much what happens, so here goes:

Are we killing you?

The Federal Radio Commission has renewed the license of WIND, Gary, Ind., the Columbia station that got itself in a jam last fall for faking a battle between sheriff deputies and escaped convicts. Apparently all is forgiven.

Scout Troops of Capital Busy Collecting Clothes to Aid Needy

Coming Events.

Saturday, February 24—7:30 p. m.—Court of Review and Court of Honor, Powell Junior High School; Court of Review and Court of Honor, Takoma Park Presbyterian Church; map-making class, 1018 Vermont avenue; Court of Honor and Review at Hyattsville, County Building.

Monday, February 26—7:30 p. m., Cub Leaders' round table, 1018 Vermont avenue; open house at new Boy Scout headquarters.

Wednesday, February 28—7:15 p. m., principles of scoutmastership, 1018 Vermont avenue.

Saturday, March 3—10 p. m., meeting of Boy Scout Press Association.

R. A. Van Orsdel, chairman of the civic service committee of the District of Columbia Boy Scout Council, in a communication sent yesterday to all scoutmasters, said:

"At the request of the President of the United States, every Boy Scout troop in the country is concentrating on the collection of "used but usable" clothing, bedding and furniture for a huge 'home-building' project. The job is challenging enough, satisfying enough, and stimulating enough to occupy the fullest attention of every troop, every Scout and every Scouter in the Nation."

Scout Troops, Cub Packs and Sea Scout groups have been asked to:

1. Canvass the city, starting with the section where the troops are located and ask for:
   - Household furnishings—Chairs tables, bedroom furniture, cooking utensils, dishes, buckets and brooms.
   - Bedding—Mattresses, pillows, sheets, pillow cases, blankets and quilts.
   - Clothing for men—Suits, coats, hats, underwear, shoes, overcoats, sweaters, socks.
   - Clothing for women—Coats, dresses, underwear, shoes, hats, sweaters, stockings.
   - Clothing for children—Coats, dresses, suits, underwear, shoes, hats, sweaters, stockings.
2. Take such material as they can carry to the troop room or other designated accumulation depot.
3. Report to Scout headquarters material too heavy to carry, giving name and address of giver, material and time it may be collected; also Scout's name and troop number.
4. Notify headquarters when accumulation depots are full, giving the time when truck may collect.

Many Scouts Promoted.

Troop Starts Paper.

Troop 235, conducted by the Decatur Heights Citizens Association, has recently started a troop paper called The Cabin. It is published monthly, and every boy in the troop is trying to make it a worth-while publication. Arthur E. Robinson is Scoutmaster.

New Training Course.

A Scout Troop for men is the term being applied to the new training course in the elements of Scoutmastership, to begin March 5 at Boy Scout Headquarters. The course will be organized as nearly as possible like a Scout troop, with the men organized into patrols and with an outdoor emphasis on the program. At least one patrol and one troop hike will be held.

Materials to be covered in the course will be the work of the tenderfoot, second class and first class Scouts, Scouting objectives and program, the patrol unit in Scouting, running the troop, the troop committee at work, the "out" in Scouting, good turn and good citizenship, dangers and difficulties that boys face, why boys drop out of Scouting, and men of character trained for citizenship.

Open House Monday.

Scout leaders and their wives have been invited to attend an open house reception and housewarming at the new Scout headquarters, 1018 Vermont avenue, Monday evening. The program will include music, a treasure hunt and refreshments.

Mass for Dead Sunday.

Mass for deceased members of the Notre Dame de Namur Alumnae will be celebrated Sunday at 8 a. m., in the convent chapel of the institution. Special music will be furnished by Mary O'Donogue and Katherine Ruppert.

Thermometers and Common Sense . . . .

How did you know?

Did you look at the thermometer or did your tingling fingers shout the news? Perhaps the thermometer verified your own opinion but you knew it was cold before you looked. Your common sense told you.

Exactly!

When you take Lydia E. Pinkham's, Vegetable Compound or any other medicine—how do you know it helps you? Do you ask the neighbors? Do you try to figure it out on a scientific basis?

Certainly not.

Science may confirm your own opinion, but you knew it all the time.
